EXPLANATORY

THE system employed in compiling the genealogical section of this work is believed to be the most approved now in use, and may readily be understood by a little study. The compilers have added new features which they believe will be found valuable, both in the body of the work and in the index. The ancestral chain, given after the name of each descendant having issue, shows the full line of descent at a glance. Each descendant has his own number.

When descendants do not have issue, their full biography will be found connected with their names first mentioned, and in the consecutive small numbers. When a descendant has issue, his or her name is carried forward in the large numbers to the next generation, where the biography is fully given, followed by the list of his or her children.

Each female line ends in the book with the grandchildren of an Ogden mother, but the line is continued in the charts, and without numbers.

Where correspondents sent in tardy data concerning their families, and after the editors had systematically arranged the regular descendants by consecutive numbers, it became necessary to group the added names in the immediate family line, each child taking the parent's number, with a letter of the alphabet annexed.

In cases of intermarriage, and where there was issue, the person bearing the name Ogden, or the person first recorded in the regular line of ancestry, is usually the one carried forward to the next generation. To indicate specially the person carried forward, the cross-reference "(See No. —)" is employed.

The usual genealogical terms and abbreviations are used throughout the work, viz.: b.—born; cir., circ.—circa, about; d.—died; dau.—daughter; d. s. p.—died without issue; d. y.—died young; m.—married; s. p.—sine prole, without issue; unm.—unmarried; w.—wife; wid.—widow or widower.

The editors do not assume that no errors are discoverable in this work. A number of conflicting statements sent by different correspondents, and a disagreement of old records, were often puzzling to the editors; but great care was exercised in settling upon what seemed to them the most authentic and trustworthy.

"Good blood—descent from the great and good—is a high honor and privilege. He that lives worthily of it is deserving of the highest esteem; he that does not, of the deeper disgrace."
—Colton.

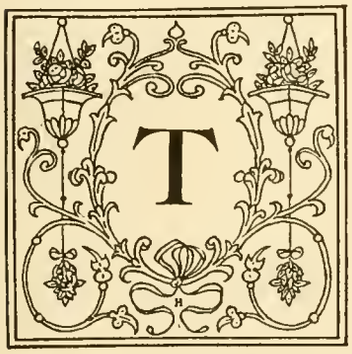
INTRODUCTORY



THERE is something peculiarly gratifying to the average American citizen to be able to trace his lineage to the primal days of Colonial life, and especially to a worthy, virtuous, and honored ancestor. The attention of the living generation may at times be more or less diverted by external and transitory matters, but there ever abides a deep and undying satisfaction in the knowledge that one is heir to strong and enduring ancestral character; in the fact of being able to point back to him who first came to the New World, as the Florentine to the beautiful bronze gates of his native city. Like those masterpieces that Angelo said were fit to be the Gates of Paradise, and which Dante called the Golden Gates, so, aback in the centuries, stands the noble character of the progenitor of his race. As with the Gates of Florence, time indeed may have removed the glitter, but the original bronze with its exquisite imagery stands out the more striking and impressive. A line of American ancestry that has issued through such a worthy and enduring portal of character would be false to their better instincts not to give to their progenitor due admiration and reverence, and take a lively interest in the doings of his descendants.

Lord Macaulay well says: "People who take no pride in the noble achievements of remote ancestors will never achieve anything worthy to be remembered with pride by remote descendants." Such an ancestral portal was John Ogden, the Pilgrim, the first of his line in America, and who was happily known as "Good Old John Ogden," of Elizabethtown, N. J.

It is true that many American families seem indifferent to their past history, and are ready to quote Horace: "It is of no consequence of what parents a man is born, so he be a man of merit;" yet Bishop Warburton aptly says: "High birth is a thing which I never knew any one to disparage except those who had it not; and I never knew any one to make a boast of it who had anything else to be proud of." Plato truly says: "Hereditary honors are a noble and splendid treasure to descendants," and it naturally behooves the latter to be faithful to the ancient traditions.

The true American spirit, and that which should be cherished by worthy families, is constantly echoed from the lips of Daniel Webster in his discourse delivered at Plymouth, Dec. 22, 1820, in commemoration of the first settlement of New England. His sentiments are so apt, we will quote the more fully: "Human and mortal though we are, we are, nevertheless, not mere insulated beings, without relation to the past or future. Neither the point of time nor the spot of earth in which we physically live bounds our rational and intellectual enjoyments. We live in the past by a knowledge of its history, and in the future by hope and anticipation. By ascending to an association with our ancestors; by contemplating their example, and studying their character; by partaking their sentiments, and imbibing their spirit; by accompanying them in their toils; by sympathizing in their sufferings, and rejoicing in their successes and their triumphs,—we mingle our own existence with theirs and seem to belong to their age. We become their contemporaries, live the lives which they lived, endure what they endured, and partake in the rewards which they enjoyed. . . .

"There may be, and there often is, indeed, a regard for ancestry, which nourishes only a weak pride; as there is also a care for posterity, which only disguises an habitual avarice, or hides the workings of a low and grovelling vanity. But there is also a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors, which elevates the character and improves the heart. Next to the sense of religious duty and moral feeling, I hardly know what should bear with stronger obligation on a liberal and enlightened mind than a consciousness of alliance with excellence which is departed; and a consciousness, too, that in its acts and conduct, and even in its sentiments, it may be actively operating on the happiness of those who come after it."

This is the thought that doubtless prompted Cicero to say: "The best inheritance that a father can leave to his children, and which is superior to any patrimony, is the glory of his virtue and noble deeds: to disgrace which ought to be regarded as base and impious."

Introductory

One of the most important thoughts that should possess an inheritor of worthy blood, is that he is a link between the past and the future, and that he is to transmit to the succeeding generation the virtues he has received from his forefathers. He should be enthused by a study of the past, for, as Burke remarks: "People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors."

There is much fascination in the tracing back of ancestral lines, in spite of the many discouragements and the tediousness of the work. The usual genealogical difficulties common to all compilers were encountered by Mr. Wheeler, but it is highly gratifying that his toils were so richly rewarded. The facts underlying the life and character of John Ogden, the Pilgrim, have been fully investigated. His sterling character having been transmitted through so many honored descendants was doubtless that which prompted Mr. William Ogden Wheeler to labor earnestly for eighteen years in compiling so much valuable data connected with his illustrious ancestor and the projected lines of descent. While we sincerely regret that Mr. Wheeler did not live to see the published results of his years of personal sacrifice and labors, we count ourselves most happy in taking the accumulated material and rearing a monument to his memory. In a sense, the long period of self-sacrificing labor, aided though he was by a competent corps of secretaries, was a period of unrequited toil; yet he took great delight in the work, such as the numerous Ogden Family may never fully appreciate.

The historical and biographical material in the following pages is believed to be trustworthy in every essential detail. That the volume may be a fitting tribute to the memory of the compiler is the sincere wish of

The Editors.

ENGLISH OGDEN ANCESTRY
AND DERIVATION OF THE SURNAME

A ROOT-TRACING of the surname Ogden readily leads us backward to early Saxon soil. Authorities on English surnames generally agree that the name comes from the Saxon ock, oak-tree, and den, a local termination occurring in the weald of Kent, Sussex, and elsewhere, implying a covert and feeding place for animals, and synonymous with dean, a wooded valley, or tract yielding acorns or mast.

The surname is thus freely rendered, "the oak valley," "oak dale," "vale of oaks," "leafy vale"; or, as William Arthur, M.A., in "An Etymological Dictionary of Family and Christian Names," says, "the oak vale, or shady valley." In support of this interpretation the fact may be stated that on all the escutcheons of the arms-bearing Ogden families of England, the oak branch, or oak leaves and acorns are always found, and usually in the crest. One of the earliest arms—that of "Okton," in Guillim's "Display of Heraldry" (1724)—has the quartering of the Quaker Ogden arms, but in blue, and canton in corner, while the same quartering is found in the "Okeden" arms, by Edmondson (1780), in which the blue is replaced by red; for "Okeden of Ellingham in Hampshire" (1780), the arms consist of "sable, on a fesse argent, between 3 acorns gold, as many oak leaves vert," the same display as the Hants family of Ogdens of this book.

When surnames became necessary, it was common to designate a man by some distinguishing locality, or calling in life. Thus, John de Oketon retained this surname, as he lived near a thickly wooded valley. Many old English works give unmistakable evidence that several families of this surname, variously spelled, and located in different parts of England, extend back to the time of William the Conqueror (1027?–1087).

Beardsley says that Ogden was first written de Hoghton. Peter de Hoton, 1150 A.D., founded Erden or Arden Priory, a Benedictine nunnery near Black Hameldon in the deanery and archdeanery of Cleveland. In 1200 A.D., John de Hoton, father of Sir John de Oketon, Knight of Rowcandura, granted mill and water power, and gave two oxgangs of land to the parish of Hoton. Burton's "Ecclesiastical History of Yorkshire" (1758) gives the foregoing, and mentions many others of the surname, and under later dates, while "Hundred Rolls," "Harlem MSS.," "Parliamentary Writs," "Burton's Antiquities," "Berry's Visitation of Hampshire," etc., add many others of the name, coming down to more modern times. The various Ogden families (or the civil and church authorities for them) often spelled the surname differently, even among their immediate connections, and, in its mutations, we have "de Oketon," "Oketone," "Ocktone," "Okedone," "Okedon," "Okeden," "Oakden," "Okden," and finally "Ogden." The earliest date of the present spelling of the surname is circa 1500 A.D., while some of the earlier spellings, especially "Okeden," are found as late as 1738.

To discover the immediate family connection in England of John Ogden, of Elizabethtown, N. J., has long been a perplexing problem. The name appears on the parish records of several different localities in England, and all efforts to clearly trace these families to a common ancestor have failed.

There seems small room for doubt, however, that John Ogden, the Pilgrim, whom we have traced back in America to his settlement at Southampton, on Long Island, in 1640, came there with his wife and three oldest children, from Bradley Plain, in Co. Southants (Southampton), and that several generations of his forefathers had lived there before him. This is shown in part by "Berry's Visitation of Hants" (1634), and the rest is confirmed by a genealogist* who claims personal knowledge of the church records at Bradley Plain, Hampshire, and of several other English records and authorities.

English Ogden Ancestry

The earliest discoverable ancestor from whom John Ogden was descended appears to be one Robert Ogden, and the time the middle of the fifteenth century. In tracing his line of descent, we will, for the purposes of this record, use the present spelling of the surname.

1. Robert Ogden. The first record found of him is in the year 1453 A.D., when he appears as a witness to a grant of land in Nutley, Hampshire. He again appears with others in 1457, in connection with a post-mortem search concerning lands in Nutley, belonging to one Joan Ogden, of Ellingham, Co. Southants. Nothing is said of relationship, but from the fact that it was customary for the nearest relative to settle the estate of deceased persons, and the two sons being named, it is a fair presumption that Joan Ogden was his wife.

CHILDREN:

2. Richard Ogden, b. ——; d. ——; m. Mabel de Hoogan.
3. William Ogden, b. ——; d. 1517; m. Agnes Hamlyn.

2. Richard Ogden (Robert[1]), b. ——; d. ——; m. before Mar. 8, 1503, Mabel de Hoogan, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Johannes de Hoogan, of the parish of Lyndhurst, Hants, as appears from an instrument dated Sept. 19, 1513, which recites that Mabel, the wife of Richard Ogden, then released to Thomas Delavale, of Lyndhurst, land, which she had from her father, Johannes de Hoogan, late of Lyndhurst, deceased. Also other land, which she and her husband had of Walter de Hoogan, her father's brother, by deed dated Mar. 8, 1503, and to which deed William Ogden, of Ellingham, had signed his name as a witness.

CHILDREN:

4. John Ogden, b. ——; d. ——; m. Margaret Wharton.
5. William Ogden, b. ——; d. ——; m. Abigail Goodsall.
6. Robert Ogden, b. ——; d. ——. (His line became extinct in 1613.)

3. William Ogden (Robert[1]), b. ——; d. 1517; m. —— Agnes Hamlyn, b. ——; d. ——; dau. and heiress of John Hamlyn.

William Ogden[3] was of Ellingham, Co. Southants. His will is dated Sept. 8, 1517, and was proved that year.

On Dec. 18, 1563, Richard Wilson and Margaret, his wife, confirm to EDWARD OGDEN and Margaret, his wife, and their lawful issue, land in Bradley Plain, also four acres in Minstead.

CHILDREN:

20. THOMAS OGDEN, b. May 4, 1565; d. ——; m. ELIZABETH SAMFORD.
21. MARGARET OGDEN, b. Feb. 21, 1566; d. ——; m. Feb. 6, 1593, ISAAC SAMFORD, b. ——; d. ——; son of John Samford. (No further account.)
22. RICHARD OGDEN, b. May 15, 1568; d. ——; m. ELIZABETH HUNTINGTON.
23. EDWARD OGDEN, JR., b. ——; d. infant, Apr. 17, 1570.
24. JOHN OGDEN, b. Sept. 19, 1571; d. ——; m. May 2, 1592, MARGARET HUNTINGTON, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Samuel Huntington and Margaret Crane, his wife.

The record continues: "Margaret Crane's nephew, Jasper Crane, emigrated to Newark, N. J., and his daughter Hannah married Thomas Huntington, son of Simon, who emigrated to Massachusetts, but died on the passage from England to Boston, in 1633." (No further record.)

18. PHILIP OGDEN (John[7], William[3], Robert[1]), b. ——; d. ——; 1st m. ALICE SHARYE, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of William Sharye, of Sarum; 2d m. BRIDGET KELLOWAY, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of William Kelloway.

PHILIP OGDEN[18] was of Ellingham, Co. Southampton. ("Berry's Vis.")

CHILDREN—FIRST MARRIAGE:

25. JANE OGDEN, b. ——; d. ——.
26. ANNE OGDEN, b. ——; d. ——; m. EDWARD WILMOT, of Ringwood, Co. Southampton, son of Thomas Wilmot and Anne Twedy, his wife, of Co. Essex, and grandson of Edward Wilmot, of Newent, Co. Gloucester. (No further record.)

CHILDREN—SECOND MARRIAGE:

27. WILLIAM OGDEN, b. ——; d. 1664; m. ELIZABETH UVEDALE.
28. JOHN OGDEN, b. ——; d. ——; m. ——.

"Berry's Vis." says he married, and his dau. JOAN OGDEN[28a], m. circa 1600, HENRY RINGWOOD, of Credilstow, Co. Southants, son of Charles Ringwood and Elizabeth Mollyns, his wife, and had five sons,—viz., Charles Ringwood, John Ringwood (d. y.), Henry Ringwood, Jr., Edward Ringwood, and John Ringwood.

20. THOMAS OGDEN (Edward[14], William[5], Richard[2], Robert[1]), b. Bradley Plain, May 4, 1565; d. ——; m. Feb. 16, 1597, ELIZABETH SAMFORD, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of John Samford.

CHILDREN:

29. MARY OGDEN, b. Jan. 12, 1598; d. ——, spinster.

On Oct. 18, 1642, she conveyed to her sister, Margaret Hope, widow of Samuel Hope, the land and tenements, situated in Bramshaw, which she had Mar. 7, 1638, of her brother, John Ogden, now across the sea.

30. JOHN OGDEN, b. Bradley Plain, Sept. 3, 1600; 1st m. Bradley Plain, May 4, 1627, ANNE RICHARDSON, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Joseph Richardson; 2d m. (probably Stamford, Conn.), Apr. 19, 1638, JUDITH BUDD, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Lieut. John Budd, the original purchaser of Budd's Neck, now a part of the town of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y.

This JOHN OGDEN[30] was one of the petitioners to King Charles II. for the charter of Connecticut, and in 1674–5 was deputy Governor of the state. He was instrumental in settling the dispute about the boundary line between New York and Connecticut, and in many ways is shown to have been an important member of the Colony, and in the confidence of the people. There appears to be no record of his death, but the inventory of his estate was exhibited to the Probate Court at Fairfield, by his widow Judith, on Aug. 7, 1682 His descendants are numerous, and their record worthy of being preserved.

31. MARGARET OGDEN, b. July 1, 1601; d. ——; m. SAMUEL HOPE. (No further record.)

22. RICHARD OGDEN (Edward[14], William[5], Richard[2], Robert[1]), b. Bradley Plain, May 15, 1568; d. ——; m. May 2, 1592, ELIZABETH HUNTINGTON, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Samuel Huntington and Margaret Crane, his wife, and sister of Margaret Huntington, wife of No. 24, John Ogden.

RICHARD OGDEN[22] appears to have lived in Wiltshire, and had lands in New Sarum and Plaitford. The last named he had of William Wheeler, whose brothers, Ephraim and Thomas, emigrated to Concord, Mass., both finally settling at Fairfield, Conn., where Thomas died in 1654, and Ephraim in 1669, leaving numerous descendants.

CHILDREN:

32. RICHARD OGDEN, 2D, b. May 3, 1596; d. infant.
33. RICHARD OGDEN, 3D, b. Sept. 18, 1597; d. May 3, 1599.
34. EDWARD OGDEN, b. July 21, 1598; d. ——; m. Dec. 2, 1630, ELIZABETH KNIGHT, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Edward Knight and Alice Dimery, his wife, of Woodbury Hill, Worcester. (No further record.)
35. ELIZABETH OGDEN, b. Dec. 17, 1603; d. infant.
36. ELIZABETH OGDEN, 2D, b. May 13, 1607; m. —— MARTIN. (No further record.)
37. JOHN OGDEN, b. Sept. 19, 1609; d. May, 1682; m. JANE BOND, dau. of Jonathan Bond, and became the ancestor of the Ogdens of Elizabethtown, N. J.
38. RICHARD OGDEN, 4TH, b. July 1, 1610; d. Fairfield, Conn., early in 1687; m. Bradley Plain, Aug. 21, 1639, MARY HALL, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of David Hall, of Gloucester, England.

    On Apr. 28, 1687, Mary, widow of RICHARD OGDEN[38], returned to the court at Fairfield, Conn., an inventory of her deceased husband's estate. He left sons RICHARD[38a], DAVID[38b], and JOHN[38c], and daughters HANNAH[38d], wife of Sergt. Samuel Ward; THANKFUL[38e], wife of Daniel Silliman; ELIZABETH[38f], wife of Daniel Meeker. Another daughter had died, the wife of John Pine.

    His sons RICHARD OGDEN[38a], and DAVID OGDEN[38b], lived and died in Fairfield, Conn., and their descendants are living there now. JOHN OGDEN[38c], the youngest son, removed to Cohansey, N. J., where he died Dec. 22, 1745, aged 75 years. His descendants are numerous, among them Herbert P. Gerald, of Washington, D. C., who is said to be writing a history of the Fairfield Ogdens.
39. DAVID OGDEN, b. June 11, 1611; d. s. p. ——.

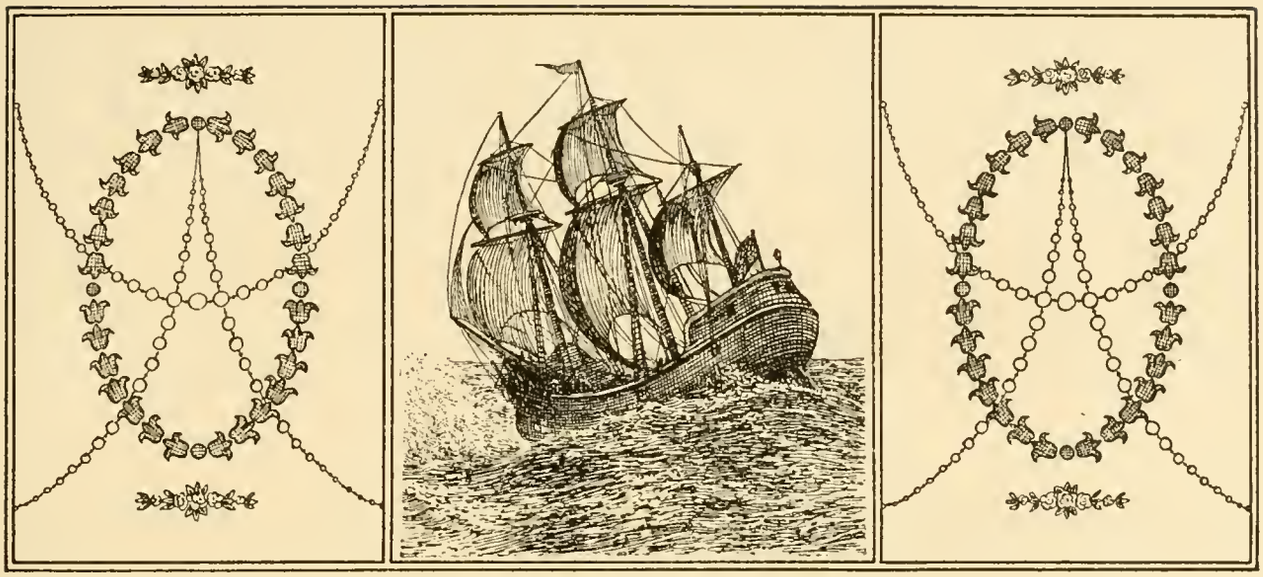
27. WILLIAM OGDEN (Philip[18], John[7], William[3], Robert[1]), b. ——; d. 1664; m. 1598, ELIZABETH UVEDALE, b. ——; d. 1629; dau. of George Uvedale and Margery Miller, his wife, of Purbeck.

CHILD:

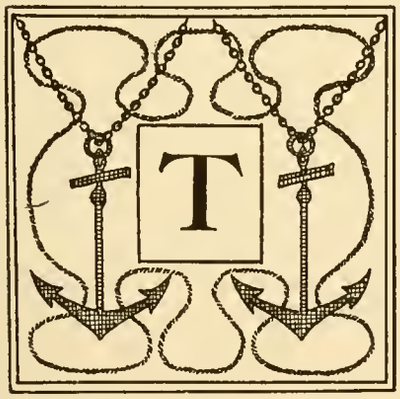
40. EDMUND OGDEN, b. ——; d. ——; m. ——.

    He succeeded to the estate of his grandfather, George Uvedale, in 1629. His son WILLIAM OGDEN[40a] of Crichel, M. P. for Corfe Castle, died 1694, and his wife MARY OGDEN, died 10 years earlier.

    It is said that a JOHN OGDEN of this line was granted arms by King Charles II. for services rendered his unfortunate father, Charles I. Gironny of eight, argent and gules, in dexter chief an oak branch, fructed proper. Crest: an oak tree proper, with a lion rampant against it. Motto: "Et si ostendo non jacto." The John Ogden granted these arms was the ancestor of David Ogden, the first in America (1682), of the Quaker Ogden Family.



JOHN OGDEN, THE PILGRIM



THE providential opening of a new world and a new era in governmental matters during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, is a subject of deep interest to the average student of national drift and tendency. No great epoch of national life has developed in a day. The causes leading to any important revolution in thought and procedure are ever far-reaching, usually beginning long before they converge to a crisis and crystallize in definite and determinate action.

The causes of the American Revolution began before the first embarkation of emigrants to the New World. The "Magna Charta" wrung from King John of England in 1215 had been the entering wedge, but it was more than five and a half centuries before the permanent rupture of the Anglo-Saxon race occurred under the reign of King George III. It was not a question of physical suffering of the subjects of the English crown, but, like all revolutions, was one deeply seated in the moral sense of the nation. The superstitious veneration for the inherent rights of the sovereign was giving way to the demands of an enlightened brain and conscience, and the deeper belief in the Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of Man. The "Declaration of Independence" was written in the hearts of the Pilgrims and their fellow colonists long before it was spread upon parchment in 1776.

It is true that a close study of the "good old times" reveals the presence and doings of many selfish and unscrupulous men, and the Colonial period thus loses much of its pristine fascination; yet the sturdy, self-poised, resolute, and godly Pilgrims and Quakers, whose righteous principles and lives were interwoven in the American fabric of civil and religious liberties, are to be held in the highest veneration by their numerous descendants. To this class belonged John Ogden, the Pilgrim, who, with other immigrants, came from England early in 1640, and probably landed at Southampton, L. I., where he took up residence.

HIS MARRIAGE AND EMIGRATION

As seen in the preceding chapter on English Ogden ancestry, John Ogden was born in Bradley Plain, Hampshire, England, Sept. 19, 1609, where he married, May 8, 1637, Jane Bond, daughter of Jonathan Bond. Three children were born to them in England, the latter two being twins. He had acquired property, and prior to his emigration to the New World, conveyed Oct. 18, 1639, to Ezekiel Howard, also of Bradley Plain, a garden, an orchard, four acres of pasture, and two acres of woodland, with appurtenances.

What is gleaned of John Ogden's public record in America is chiefly taken from "Southampton Records," "Stamford Notes," "Fairfield Notes," "Colonial Records of Connecticut," "Lamb's History of New York," "Hatfield's History of Elizabeth," and "Archives of New Jersey." In many instances the original documents are closely followed in direct quotations, this being thought more interesting than giving the various entries a more modern literary dress. The data will also be given as far as possible in chronological order.

AT SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., 1640

The name of the vessel in which John Ogden, the Pilgrim, and his fellow emigrants sailed is not known, but the vessel probably landed at Southampton, on the southern shore of Long Island, early in 1640. The first mention of John Ogden's name is in connection with his taking up residence at this place, and being one to whom was granted, Apr. 17, 1640, the tract known as Shinnecock Hill, which adjoined Southampton on the west. He was a leader among the settlers in founding the town.

A PROBLEM

A perplexity must here be noted that is met in the early colonial records prior to 1665, concerning two contemporary John Ogdens. John Ogden, the Pilgrim, had a cousin John Ogden, son of his uncle Thomas Ogden (b. 1565), and who was nine years his senior. He had conveyed a messuage and tenement situated in Bramshaw, England, to his sister Mary, on Mar. 7, 1638, about which time he emigrated to the New Haven Colony, thus coming to America about two years before John Ogden, the Pilgrim. He probably became one of the first settlers of Stamford, Conn. He was closely associated in the New World with his father-in-law, John Budd, whose daughter Judith became his second wife, Apr. 19, 1638, and doubtless soon after his immigration.

He is probably the John Ogden who was connected with the building of a mill-dam, as recorded in the Stamford records. In Sept., 1641, the mill was sold to Thurston Raynor, "he to take her as she now stands for £74, 10s. at common charge according to a bargain made between John Ogden and Mitchell for building a dam."

On Dec. 7, 1641, John Ogden was granted ten acres of land beside his house lot at Stamford. During the same month he paid his taxes to the town at the rate of 30s. 5d. per acre.

On Jan. 7, 1642, several men claimed damages caused by the mill, among them being John Ogden, whose claim was for £1, 19s. 3d.

This John Ogden is known to modern writers as "John Ogden of Rye," because he became associated with his father-in-law, John Budd, in mill property at the new settlement at Rye, and took up residence there. Rye is near the western end of Long Island Sound, on the mainland, and was settled in 1660; it was first under the jurisdiction of Connecticut, but in 1683 was transferred to New York, being now in Westchester Co. This John Ogden was a prominent man among the settlers, and a man of great strength of character. He is probably the John Ogden who joined with other New England men in sending a petition to the King, 1665–1667. At General Court held at Hartford, Oct. 8, 1674, John Ogden was named as a deputy Governor for the Colony of Rye. The following year, Apr. 20, 1675, John Winthrop was made Governor, and John Ogden assistant Governor of the Colony of Connecticut. In 1679 the town of Rye granted John Ogden 48 or 50 acres by the waterside at Fishing Rock, for the purpose of building a house and wharf. In May, 1682, John Ogden appeared before the court in Hartford, and was granted 20 acres of land for a pasture. He also brought forward some matters of dispute about the boundary lines between New York and Connecticut, and was the bearer of a letter from the General Court at Hartford to the Governor of New York, relating to it.

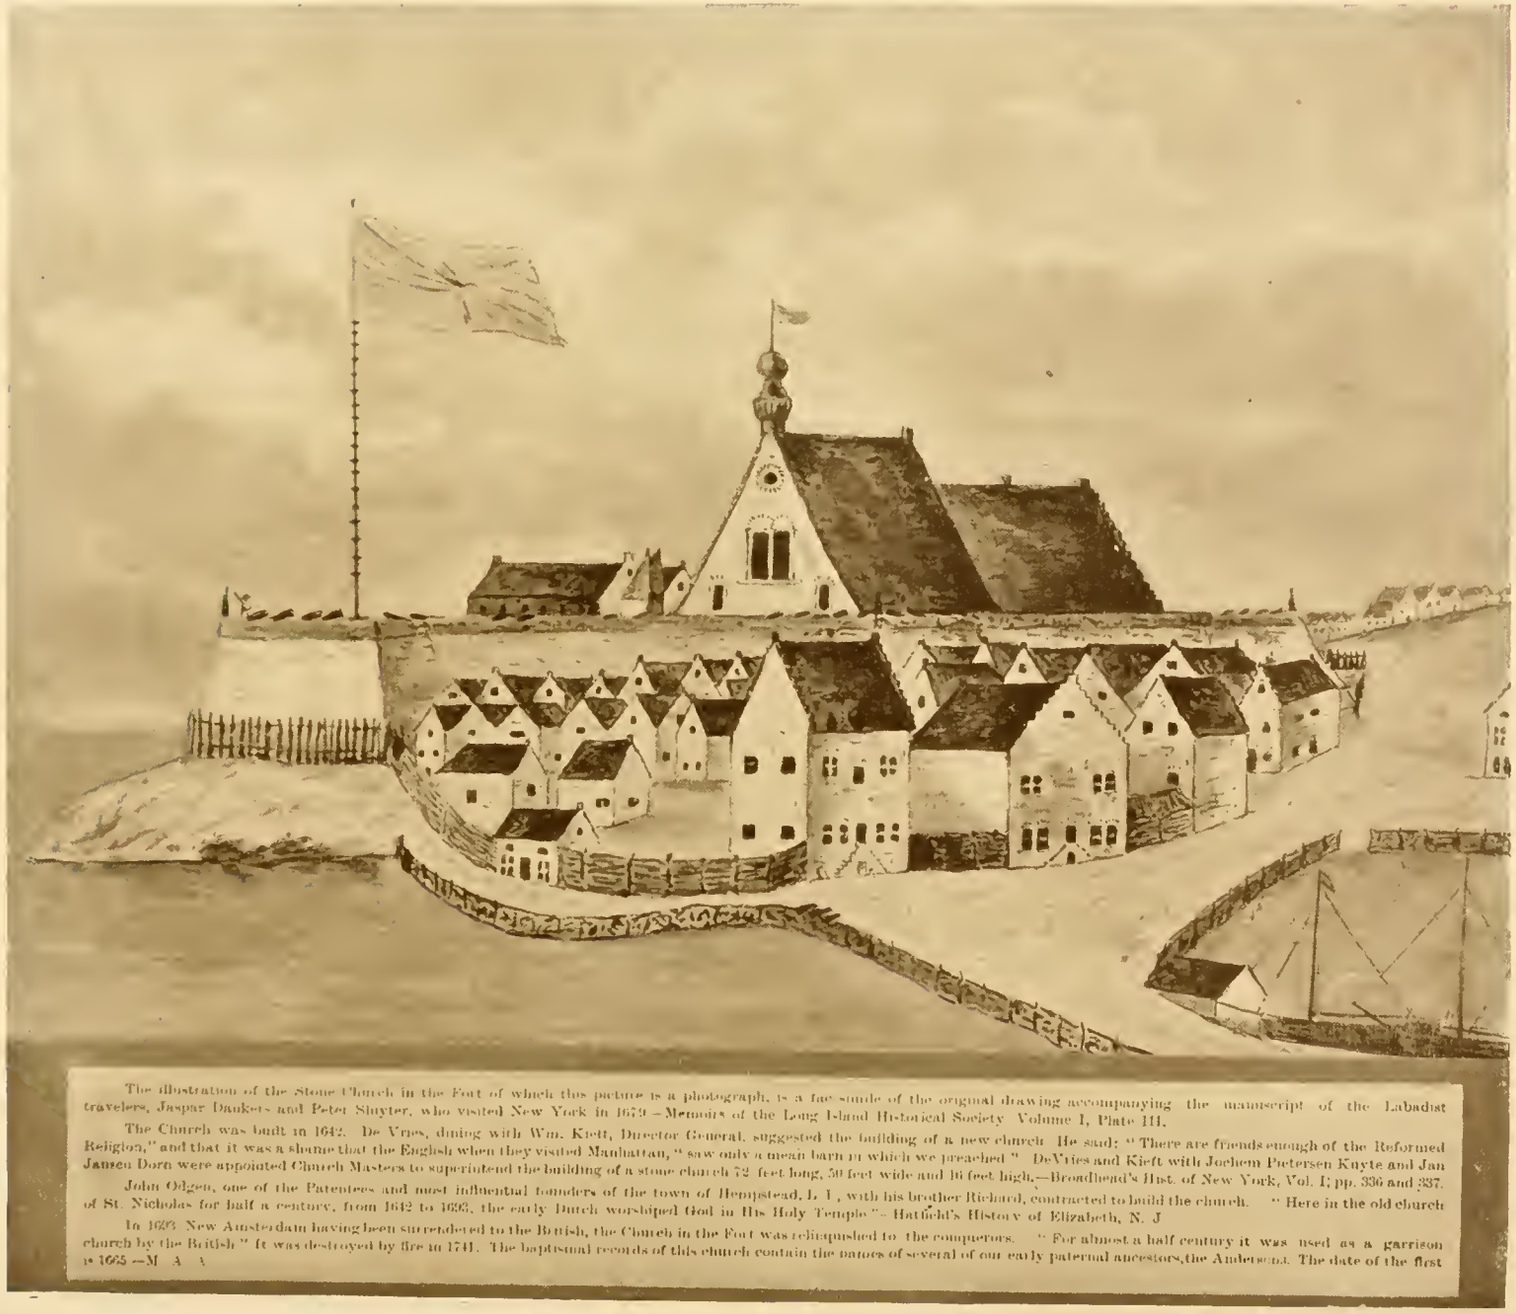
The inventory of his estate is exhibited before the Court at Fairfield by Judith, his widow, on Aug. 7, 1682, the same year his cousin, John Ogden, the Pilgrim, died.

Both John Ogdens owned property in various places, and it is unnecessary to suppose they changed residence as often as they acquired new holdings. The chief difficulty lies in keeping the two men separate in the record entries for the first 25 years after emigration, and at which time John Ogden, the Pilgrim, removed to Elizabethtown, N. J. John Ogden, of Rye, evidently resided in southern Connecticut, and chiefly at Rye, during his life in the New World, while John Ogden, the Pilgrim, made Long Island his home prior to his residence in New Jersey. The latter is doubtless meant when connected with his brother Richard, or when he is referred to as John Ogden, Sr., in distinction from his son, John, Jr. He is often mentioned as "John Ogden, of Southampton," or of "North Sea" or "Northampton," or "of Feversham," these places being adjacent in Long Island, and under the same colonial jurisdiction, and in which places he owned property. When he was contemplating removing to New Jersey he sold his "housing and home lot, etc.," in Southampton to his cousin, John of Rye, who made it over to his son-in-law, John Woodruff, the following year. This will appear later in the records.

BUILDING OF CHURCH AT NEW AMSTERDAM, 1642

It is evident from the data at hand that John Ogden, the Pilgrim, and his brother Richard were the builders of Gov. Kieft's stone church at New Amsterdam. Various authorities, and chiefly "Hatfield's Hist. of Elizabeth," state that John Ogden and his brother Richard built it, and that they were then (1642) of Stamford. Possibly the brothers saw greater inducements at the latter settlement, and soon after landing at Southampton, threw in their lot with the Stamford settlers, for it would be natural to suppose that the two brothers remained together during the first years of their American residency. The "Newark Town Records" refer to David Ogden, the son of John, the Pilgrim, as a "stone church builder," and it is highly probable that he learned the trade from his father. As the existent authorities name John Ogden, the Pilgrim, and his brother Richard as the builders, we give the following condensed article concerning the erection of the church, from "Hatfield's Hist. of Elizabeth."

A contract was drawn up in May, 1642, setting forth an agreement between Governor William Kieft, Gisbert op Dyck, and Thomas Willet, of New Amsterdam, Church-wardens, to build a stone church in the fort,



STONE CHURCH BUILT WITHIN FORT AT NEW AMSTERDAM BY JOHN AND RICHARD OGDEN, IN 1642

72 ft. by 50 ft. and 16 ft. above the soil, for the sum of 2500 guilders (about $1000), to be paid in cash, beaver or other merchandise; if the work was done "in a workmanlike manner" 100 extra guilders were to be paid the contractors, John Ogden and his brother Richard, both of Stamford, Conn. It was stipulated that the latter should be allowed the use of the company's boat to ferry the stone ashore near the fort, the wardens agreeing to carry the stone from the shore to the fort, and to furnish the lime with which to lay them. There were objectors to the project, who claimed the "kerck" would occupy one-fourth of the fort area and shut off the southeast wind from the grist-mill upon which the settlers depended for the grinding of their corn. The Indian wars retarded the building of the church, which was not finished in 1645, but in due time the steep double-pointed roof arose over the walls of the fort. Gov. Kieft had a marble slab inserted in the front, which was thus inscribed:

Ao. Do. M.D.CXLII
W. Kieft Dr. Gr.
Heeft de Gemeente Desen
Temple doen Bouwen.

Translated, we have: "Anno Domini 1642 Wilhelm Kieft Director General, hath the commonalty caused to build this temple." A century later the church was burned, and the slab was buried in the débris; but when the fort was demolished in 1789 to make room for the Government House, the slab was recovered, and for safe keeping was placed in the Dutch Church in Garden St., where it remained until both were destroyed in the fire of 1835.

AT HEMPSTEAD, L. I., 1644

There was restiveness among the settlers at Stamford, Conn., because of the limited franchise accorded them under the jurisdiction of the New Haven Colony, and after three years' residence, and during 1644, John Ogden and several of the settlers decided to try their fortunes under the Dutch Government on Long Island, and accordingly removed and located at Hempstead. In order to acquire certain rights, privileges, and governmental protection, they made application to Gov. Wm. Kieft at New Amsterdam, who issued to them a patent to "the Great Plains." An abridgment of the document, giving its chief features, is as follows:

Nov. 1, 1644. William Kieft, the Dutch Governor of New Netherlands, sells to Rev. Robert Fordham, John Stricklan, John Ogden, John Karman, John Lawrence and Jonas Wood, their heirs, etc., or their associates or any they shall join in association with them: A certain tract of land upon and about a place called the Great Plains on Long Island from the East River to the South Sea, and from a certain harbor commonly called Hempstead Bay and westward as far as Matthew Garritson's Bay, to begin at the head of the said two Bays and to run in direct lines that they may be the same latitude in breadth on the South side as on the North side. They to enjoy the same in as large and ample manner as their own free land of inheritance. In case the above patentees "settle 100 families vpon the land inside 5 years then they shall have power to build a Town or Towns with necessary fortifications. A Temple or Temples to use and exercise their reformed religions which they possess, with the ecclesiastical discipline thereunto belonging." To erect a body politic or civil combination among themselves, to nominate magistrates not more than eight of the ablest and best approved men among them, and present them to the Governor (for the time being) for him to elect and establish them for the execution of Government.

RETURNS TO SOUTHAMPTON

He resided at Hempstead but a few years, becoming much dissatisfied with the treatment which the Dutch Government accorded the Indians, many of whom were put to death. His righteous soul abhorring this unjust treatment of the aborigines, he removed to the eastern end of Long Island to dwell among his own countrymen.

In 1647 he obtained permission of the Southampton authorities to plant a colony of six families at "North Sea" (Great Peconic Bay) about three miles north of Southampton. Two or three years elapsed before his removal and planting of his colony at "North Sea," which later was called Northampton.

One of the enterprises which engaged the attention of John Ogden was whaling, an industry in which he was interested as late as 1668. The following entry from the "Southampton Records" probably makes mention of the first whaling company on Long Island. It is under date of Jan. 30, 1650. "It is ordered at the saide generall court that Mr. Iohn Ogden Senior of Northampton shall have free liberty without interruption from the Inhabitants of Southampton to kill whales vpon the South sea [Ocean] at or within any part of the bounds of the saide towne for the space of seaven yeares next ensueing the date hereof and that in that space noe liberty shall be granted to any by the saide inhabitants to any other person or persons to kill or strike any within the bounds of the saide towne, this liberty & privelege is given to the saide Mr. Iohn Ogden prouided that he or his company doe proceed in the same design and do not delay but do some what effectual in the business within a yeare after this present day, as alsoe the saide Mr. Iohn Ogden nor his company shall not deny the townes inhabitants claiming priviledge formerly belonging to them in the dead whales yt shall be accidentally cast vpon the shoares, but yf the saide Iohn Ogden or his company doe not kill in the design a whale or whales within the space of two yeares after the date hereof then his liberty is annulled and to return againe to the towne.

"Witness: RICHARD MILLS, Secretary."

On Aug. 21, 1654, the above-said liberty of striking whales is given to "Mr. Odell and Mr. Ogden and their company vpon the same termes with the exceptions following, 1st yf any whale come within Shinecock bay gut they the said company are not to medle with them, nor any other whale or whales wherein there is noe sign of their killing them at sea, but they shall belong unto the town as formerly, By the said signes of said company their killing any whale is to be understood to be by harping irons vpon them or [two words gone]."

Under date of Sept. 3, 1650, the following land item is recorded: "It is granted by the major part of this towne that Mr. Ogden and his company shall have Cow Neck and Iefferies Neck [near "North Sea"] for their owne proper right, also that they shall have for their planteing land in either or both of said necks three hundred 24 acres, prouided they settle vpon it, and vpon the same grant they are to have all the meadow betwixt the brooke by the Sachems house and Hogneck spring, for their proper right provided it bee a mile from the sea side, vpon these conditions following that they must pay to all common rates of the towne at the rate of 9 hundred pounds according to the taking vp of those men that dwell there, 2ndly that hee shall place there six families that shall live there and have their abode, 3d that in case that the whole bounds of the town come to be stinted for cattle that they must be stinted also as they are that live at the towne by the same rule. In common rates as aforesaid is alsoe included the ministers meenes."

John Ogden was made Freeman at Southampton, Mar. 31, 1650. "Southampton Aprill. It is ordered uppon the 31st of March 1650 by the General Court that Mr. Thomas Topping & Mr. Iohn Ogden were chosen freemen of this towne of Southampton aforesayde."

His next office was that of magistrate: "Vpon the 7th day of October 1650 being the day of Election Mr. Edward Howell was chosen magistrate of Southampton primus, alsoe Mr. Thomas Topping secundus, Mr. Iohn Ogden tertius."

His re-election is thus entered: "Vpon the 6th day of Octob 1651 being the day of election were chosen by the freemen at the General Court for magistrates Imprimis Mr. Edward Howell, secundus Capt. Thomas Topping, tertius Mr. Iohn Ogden." He was again elected magistrate "October ye 6 1659."

Several legal actions are next recorded: "Mar. 10, 1651, an action of tresspass by Richard Mills of Southampton against Iohn Ogden Sr. defendant."

Under same date, an action of trespass is entered by John Ogden, Sr., of North Sea, plaintiff, against Richard Mills of Southampton, defendant.

"Mar. 11, 1651 jury find for Mr. Iohn Ogden in both actions, assessing vpon Mr. Mills 40s. damage with increase of court charges."

"Mar. 11, 1651. An action of tresspass vpon the case entered by Mr. Iohn Ogden of Northampt. sea against Iohn Coopr of Southampton defendant." The jury find the same day for plaintiff 2d. damage with court charges. Mr. Cooper appealed to the General Court, which tried the case and rendered a decision Nov. 3, 1651, in favor of John Ogden.

Feb. 25, 1652. "Mr. Stanborogh plf in an action of debt in the behalf of Mr. Robert Scott of Boston merchant, against Mr. Iohn Ogden defendant." On Mar. 1, following, the case was settled by arbitration.

"At the aforesaid Cort Aprill the 4, 1654 It is ordered that Mr Iohn Ogden Sen & Ionas Wood shall bee the prizers of the goods and chattells belonging to Wm Paine of late deceased."

On Apr. 15, 1656, "Mr. Ogden acknowledgeth yt Mr Odell his lotment in Sagaponack devision belongeth to him."

On Mar. 6, 1657, Mr. John Ogden was one of six men chosen at town meeting to arbitrate concerning land at Southampton which was claimed by men of East Hampton.

Apr. 30, 1657, John Ogden was named as one of forty men who were to have "half a pound of powder a peece delivered unto ye undernamed persons out of ye magazen."

At town meeting held June 2, 1657, it was voted that Edward Howell and John Ogden should adjudge unlawful cattle and horses in the ox pasture and turn them out. They shall also judge if fence of ox pasture is sufficient, and whosoever is found defective in their fence shall make it sufficient by seven nights, they having notice by the next 3d day at night, upon forfeiture of 5s. a pole for every neglect; and if found within the ox pasture after being turned out by the aforesaid men, they shall forfeit 2s. a beast to be levied by way of execution.

Under date of June 5, 1657, is recorded: "Iohn Ogden hath bought of Samuel Dayton his house and home lot and five acres in the ten acre lotts, and 4 in coopers neck, and two acres more in another place also he bouyht the meddow belonging to it."

"October the 6, 1657 At a court of Election, nominated for magistrates, Imprimus Mr Iohn Gosmer, 2 Mr Iohn Ogden 3 Mr Raynor."

On Jan. 10, 1658, at town meeting, it was granted to John Ogden that he have that part of swamp that lies against his lot "in Coopers lott."

At quarter court on Mar. 1, 1658, John Ogden and Samuel Clark are appointed administrators for the estate of one Mark Meggs. On June 22, following, they reported at court that they had "sold at an outcry" the following items belonging to the estate:

"The bay mare sould for	7£,	1s.	0d.
Mr. Ogden the 4 shotes (?)	2,	4,	0.
Mr. Ogden two yearling bulls and a calf	5,	10,	0.
Iohn Scot the half of a 3 year old and half of a two year old	6,	0,	0.
Mr. Ogden two ewes and 2 lambs and half of a calf	5,	16,	0.
Iohn Scot the house and lott	43,	10,	0.
	70,	1,	0."

The court then ordered that the proceeds of sale be handed to Mr. John Ogden and Samuel Clark in payment of Meggs' debts. John Scott not having paid for house, etc., the court ordered that he pay to the Marshal 2£ for contempt of court order and court charge.

May 5, 1658, by majority vote at town meeting, John Ogden is directed to send over all money in constable's hands to discharge the town's debts, and to act in the town's behalf in anything he conceives may "redown" to the good of the town.

WYANDANCH'S DEED TO JOHN OGDEN

"May 12th 1659

"Be it knowne vnto all men that by this present writing that I wiandance Sachem of paumanicke or Long Island have vpon deliberate consideration and with my sonne weeayacomboune both of us together given and granted vnto mr Iohn Ogden and his heires for ever I say freely given a certaine tract of land beginning at the westerd end of Southhampton bounds; which land is bounded eastwards with Southhampton bounds and with a small peice of meadow which I gave to mr Iohn Gosmer which he is to enjoy; Northwards to the water of the bay and to the creeke of accabaucke; Westwards to the the date and yeare above written,——

"Signed, sealed; and delivered, IOHN OGDEN [L. S] in the presence of us.

"David Gardener:
Lion Gardener."

The integrity and ability of John Ogden in public affairs are attested by the fact that he sat in General Court as Representative from Southampton in May, 1659, and in the Upper House May, 1661, and at subsequent periods. He is many times mentioned in the records as sitting upon juries.

His extensive dealings in real estate are indicated by the following entries of the "Southampton Records:"

"My 25 1659, Mr Ogden acknowledges that hee hath sould vnto Ellis Cooke and Isaac Willman the division of Sagaponack at mecox that was formerly Goodman Whites, which lieth for twe acres.

"At the same time Mr. Iohn Ogden acknowledgeth hee hath sould vnto Ellis Cooke and Isaack Willman one allotment of Sagaponack division numb 32 that was formerly Isaack Willman allso hee acknowledgth hee hath sould vnto Ellis and the said Isaac anothr lott that was fermely in the hands of Mr Ioanes at mee cooks, in numb 33, also anothr lot lately in the hands of Iohn Iessup & Ionas Bour Numb 35, also an acre and half lately in the hands of Iohn White and Ionas Bour lying between Edward Ioanes and Isaack Willman."

At Town Meeting held Nov. 25, 1659, John Ogden was one of twelve men chosen to regulate the town papers and writings, to "cashiere those that are in their Iudgement vnnecessary" and put select documents in convenient form for the town's use. Also to select all laws from the law book at Hartford that apply to the town. Each man was to forfeit to the town 2s. 6d. per day if he did not have reasonable cause for his absence while the board was sitting.

On Nov. 29, 1659, at Town Meeting, John Ogden contracts to put a floor and seating in the meeting house at an estimated cost of £60, the cost to be taken from moneys due from the Indians by virtue of covenants and court orders held at Hartford. It seems that £40 in excess of the aforesaid amount will be due from the Indians within five years, and John Ogden is to pass this sum to the town authorities. He agrees that there shall be no disturbance with the Indians in collections, and that they shall not be held for debt, or be dispossessed of their property, should they leave it in the meantime. The Shinnecock Indians at this time owed John Ogden £400, for which Wyandanch, the chief, stood sponsor.

Feb. 17, 1661, "It is ordered that Christopher ffoster and Henry Pierson shall assist Mr Iohn Ogden or Samuel Cleark to lay out the land which, (according to a vote passed or order made Ian. 22, 1660) was granted vnto the Northsea Inhabitants, whoe are to satisfy the sd men for their labour in laying out ye sd land, and what ever the sd layers out act and doe in laying out any pt or parcell of land as aforesaid it being according to theire discretion, it shall stand authentick forever to them to whom it Shall in particular belong."

"October the 6th or 7th, 1661. at a Towne Meeting Chosen for Magistrates first Capt Topping secondly Mr Raynor 3d Mr Iohn Ogden."

When John Scott sold property to a company Feb. 2, 1663, it was described as lying west of Southampton bounds, and as having been purchased of John Ogden, who had received deed for the same from Sachem Wyandanch, May 12, 1659. In the transfer, John Ogden is said to be of Feversham. Bridgehampton, that was located east of Southampton, was first called "Faversham" or "Feversham," after a town in Kent, England. John Ogden possibly for a time lived near Bridgehampton, and so is called "from Feversham" by some writers.

Mar. 1, 1663. "Mr Iohn Ogden acknowledges to have sold to Ellis Cooke the land he bought of William Ludlam, the land being at Mecocks, one parcel being all that field that vpon the laying out of that division lay betweene the highway, next the millers and the next creek on the east, or southeast, the other parcel lying on little neck, on the west side of the creek which is on the west side of Arthur Howells land, and was sometime in possession of Richard Woodhull.

"Witness HENRY PIERSON."

In a treaty made Feb. 11, 1663, between the English and the Shinnecock Indians, the latter are to obey English laws, and be privileged to take up grievances with other Indian tribes. The Shinnecock Indians agree to pay the £40 due the English of Southampton, and relieve John Ogden of said debt. It appears the Indians did not pay this amount as agreed by treaty, and on Nov. 7, 1667, John Ogden employed Capt. John Howell and Henry Pierson, his attorneys, to collect the £40 from the Indians.

"August this 17 1663 This present wrighting is to testifie to all whom it may concern that I Iohn Ogden of Northampton on Long Island doe acknowledge myself to be engaged to Ales Stanbrow and to Iohn Wheeler her sonne the full & just sum of forty two pounds & fifteen shillins for & in consideration of seventy & six sheep received of the aforesaid Ales Standbrow: the condition of the aforesaid some of fortye two pounds fifteen shillings is to be as followeth that at the end of foure years after the date hereof foure cowses and two Steeres and the rest in sheep and other cattel to the full value of aforsay'd some of forty two pound fifteen shillings Sterling: for the well and treu performmence hereof I bind myselfe heirs executors administrators or assigns to pay or cause to be paid to Ales Stanbrow and John Wheeler aforesaid their heirs, executors or assigns to be paid at the now dwelling hous of the sayd Iohn Ogden at the North sea in the bonds of Southampton on Long Island. I further ingadge my house and whome lott for the true performance of the aforesaid some.

"Witness my hand

"In the presence of us IOHN OGDEN.
Iohn Ogden Iun'r."

When John Ogden, the Pilgrim, was past 54 years of age, and after having spent 24 years on Long Island, he evidently determined to remove to New Jersey, and began to dispose of his real estate. The Southampton Records, under date of Apr. 12, 1664, give the first recorded dealings with his cousin, John Ogden, of Rye, and read as follows:

"Iohn Ogden of this town [Southampton] doth acknowledge to have sold and delivered to his uncle [cousin] Mr Iohn Ogden, his houseing and home lot with all ye land lying at the reare thereof and allsoe his fifteene accres lying at the Long Springs, and alsoe the priviledges to a fifty pound lot."

Apr. 25, 1664. "Christopher ffoster & Henry Pierson are appoynted to lay out the land between ye neighbors about Iohn Ogden in ye rear devision."

Sept. 7, 1665. "Mr Iohn Ogden [of Rye] doth acknowledge that what land or houseing or privilidges thereto belonging which he bought of his cousin Iohn Ogden, hee ye said Mr Ogden did make over all the same vnto his sone in law Iohn Woodruff, that it became his."

Under same date: "Iohn Woodruff Iun doth acknowledge to have sould and delivered to Robert Woolley all that housing and land and privileges thereto belonging which Mr Iohn Ogden procured of Iohn Ogden of Southampton, and ye said Mr Ogden made over vnto him the said Iohn Woodruff, ye said bargain being vpon Record in this book."

John Ogden's prominence as a legislator and land owner is shown by the leaving of his name to different localities. Under date of May 29, 1673, and at a town meeting, it was determined to permit all owners of meadow land to fence and improve their property. In description of the various lots, No. 6 was said to be located on a highway running to the beach by "Ogden's Pond." "Ogden's Neck" is another lot and was situated on Shinnecock Bay. Ogden's Neck is also mentioned July 27, 1708, in connection with the sale of adjoining lots.

The final disposal of his properties at North Sea (Northampton) and at Southampton, as shown by the following entries, closes up his Long Island affairs:

Sept. 6, 1665. "Mr Iohn Ogden doth acknowledge to have imparted sould made over and delivered all his land lying neere the north sea howses, in that place comonly called the field by the Clay pits, (except ye quantity of two poles all along by the ditch side therein to digg or delve it to the ditch) vnto Iohn Rose of ye said north sea, him his heyres and assings for ever. JOHN OGDEN AT ELIZABETHTOWN, N. J.

It is presumed that John Ogden, with other English settlers, after spending about 24 years on Long Island, saw greater possibilities of material advancement by transferring their interests to New Jersey. The preliminary step was the securing of a patent from Gov. Nicolls, of that province. "Hatfield's History of Elizabeth" is our chief authority for the further record of John Ogden's public life and doings.

In the Elizabeth Town Patent, granted Dec. 1, 1664, by Gov. Richard Nicolls under his Royal Highness ye Duke of York, he names as patentees, "Capt John Baker of new Yorke, John Ogden of Northampton, John Baily and Luke watson of Jemaico on Long Island and their Associates their heirs Execu^{rs} admin^{rs} and assigns the said parcell of Land Bounded on the South By a River commonly called the Raritans River—On the East by ye sea wch partes Staten Island and the main, to Run Northwards up after cull Bay Till you come to the first River wch sets westwards out of the s^{d} bay, And To Run west Into the Countery Twice the Length of the Breadth thereof from the North To the South of the aforementioned Bounds." The patentees were to pay yearly rental to the Duke of York, open the newly-acquired tract of land for settlers at once, who are to first ask the liberty of doing so of the patentees. Said settlers were to be assured of all privileges secured to other English colonists.

The integrity of John Ogden and his associates is shown by the fact that they first secured the consent of habitation from the Indians and bought the Elizabeth Town tract of them Oct. 25, 1664, a month before the patent was granted by the English Governor. The final payment of "four hundred fathom of white wampom" was acknowledged Nov. 24, 1665, this payment becoming due a year after entry upon the tract. Appended to the Indian deed is the following receipt: "Received of John Ogden in part of the above specified foure hundred feet of wampum I say Received one hundred fathom of wampum by mee the 18 of August 1665" The Sachems who signed the deed were Mattano, Sewak Herones, and Warinanco, of Staten Id. The Indian name of the country west of Staten Id. was "Scheyichbi," while the Dutch called Newark Bay and territory adjoining "Achter Kol."

John Ogden was the first of 65 men who took the oath of allegiance to King Charles II. on Feb. 19, 1665. Among them were his sons John, Jr., David and Jonathan. His younger sons took the oath later upon coming to their majority.

He was settled upon the Elizabeth Town tract as early as the first of Aug. 1665, and increased his holdings that year by buying the rights in the tract held by Daniel and Nathaniel Denton. His house was doubtless located on Point road, now Elizabeth Ave., and near where Robert Ogden, his great-grandson, and Col. Barber, afterward lived.

Tradition says the new town was named after Lady Elizabeth, the wife of Sir George Carteret; who, with John, Lord Berkeley, were granted by the Duke of York in 1664 the territory included in the State of New Jersey, or Nova Cæsarea, the name being given in honor of Carteret's administration of the Isle of Jersey, England. The proprietors appointed Philip Carteret first Proprietary Governor. When he arrived July 29, 1665, he determined to locate himself with the "Ogden company" and make their plantation the seat of his government. That the new governor soon recognized the worth of John Ogden is seen in the fact that he appointed him Justice of the Peace Oct. 26, 1665. The commission reads as follows:

"By Philip Carterett Esqr Governour, of the Province of New Jersey

"Whereas, I have conceived a good Opinion of the ability prudence and Integrity of you John Ogden Gentleman, In the management of Publique affairs, I have therefore thought fitt, & doe by these presents Constitute & appoint you the said John Ogden to beare the Office of a Justice of the Peace in the Province of New-Jarsey, Giving you full power and authority to execute all such Laws, as are or shall be made for the good government of the said Province & to issue out Warrants for the apprehending & secureing all such persons as shall misdemeane themsellves Contrary to the Laws, as Occasion shall require. Willing and requiring you strictly to discharge your duty in the Said Office, as a Justice of the peace ought to doe. And all other persons whatsoever within this Province are hereby strictly charged and required to take notice hereof & to beare Respect and give Obedience to you according to Law, in the performance of your said Office, Given you by the Authority of the Lords Proprietors of New Jarsey.

"Given under my hand at Elizabethtowne in the Province aforesaid the twenty sixth day of October A^{o} 1665 and in the Seventeenth yeare of the Raigne of our Soveraigne Lord Charles the second, by the grace of God, King of Great Brittaine France and Ireland, defender of the ffaith

MADE DEPUTY GOVERNOR

The high regard and confidence of Gov. Carteret is further manifested in the following commission, making John Ogden a member of his Council, or Deputy Governor:

"To my trusty & Well beloved ffriend
JOHN OGDEN ESQ:

"WHEREAS I am assured of ye knowledge, Wisdome, Prudence, & Integrity In the management of the publique affaires in these partes of America, I have thought fitt and doe by these presents, Nominate & Appoint you the said John Ogden dureing pleasure to be one of my Councellours for the affaires of the said Province, And to be assistant to mee your said Governour or my Deputy for the time being. And doe hereby authorize & require you to putt in Execution, Observe and follow such Orders and Directions as you shall from time to time receive from the said Lords Proprieto: or my selfe, as to the Office and Duty of a Councellour and Assistant to mee your said Governo^r: doth appertaine & belong. Given under my hand & Seale of the Province aforesaid the first day of November A° 1665 and in the Seaventeenth yeare of the Raigne of Our Soveraigne Lord Charles the second, King of England, Scotland, ffrance & Ireland, Defender of the Faith

"By the Governour PH: CARTERET

The new town being so auspiciously begun on the broad foundation of fraternity and justice, John Ogden laying the chief corner stone, many colonists were soon attracted by its exceptional privileges and advantages. A number of settlers at Newbury, Mass., lacking sufficient farm lands, sent a deputation with instructions, that if pleased, they should secure an eligible location for a town upon the new company's tract. The deputies were hospitably entertained, and they concluded to purchase that part of the Elizabeth town patent lying between Raritan and Rahway rivers. They applied for two townships, for which Gov. Carteret issued the necessary permit May 21, 1666. The deed was duly executed and given to them Dec. 11, 1666, by Carteret, Ogden and Watson, representing the Associates of the Town. These latter three men became the only persons entitled to control and convey property that lay within the original "bill of sale" from the Indians made Oct. 28, 1664, and Nicholl's patent of Dec. 1, 1664. To this end the Town Meeting voted them "the one moiety or half part" of their purchased possession, the consideration expressed in the deed being £80 sterling, which more than reimbursed the Associates for their original outlay.

The boundary line between Elizabethtown and Newark needed adjustment, and John Ogden, Sr., Luke Watson, Robert Bond, and Jeffry Jones were selected to meet the commissioners from Newark to establish the line.

They met for this purpose, May 20, 1668. The happy outcome of the matter is shown by an affidavit of Joseph Woodruff of Elizabethtown, made July 26, 1743, before Judge Joseph Bonnel, of the same place. He chanced to be at Milford, Conn., about the year 1699, when he heard Gov. Treat say, "That the inhabitants of Newark did first settle under the Elizabeth Town Purchase; & did allow the Newark river to be the bounds of the said Purchase; & said, that the Elizabeth Town people was so kind to the Newark people, that they could never reward them enough. And further this deponent saith, That he, at that time, heard the said Governor tell after what manner the Line was settled between the two towns; and that it was done in so loving and solemn a manner that he thought it ought never to be removed; for he (the said Governor) himself being among them at that time, prayed with them on Dividend-Hill, (so-called) that there might be a good agreement between them; and that it was agreed upon, by the settlers of each town, that the Line between them should stand and remain from Dividend-Hill, to run a northwest course; and the Governor said, that, after the agreement, Mr. John Ogden (being one of the first purchasers) prayed among the people, and returned thanks for their loving agreement."

The kind, liberal, and devout spirit of John Ogden and his associates in the above instance prompted Mrs. E. C. Kinney to write the following poem in 1846.

"DIVIDEND HILL.

"Pause here, O Muse! that Fancy's eye
  May trace the footprints still
Of men that, centuries gone by,
  With prayer ordained this hill;
As lifts the misty veil of years,
  Such visions here arise
As when the glorious Past appears Before enchanted eyes.

"I see, from midst the faithful few Whose deeds yet live sublime—
Whose guileless spirits, brave as true
  Are models for all time,
A group upon this height convened—
  In solemn prayer they stand—
Men, on whose sturdy wisdom leaned
  The settlers of our land.

"In mutual love the line they trace
  That will their homes divide,
And ever mark the chosen place
  That prayer hath sanctified;

And here it stands—a temple old,
  Which crumbling—Time still braves;
Though ages have their cycles rolled

"As Christ transfigured on the height
  The three beheld with awe,
And near his radiant form, in white
  The ancient prophets saw;
So, on this summit I behold
  With beatific sight,
Once more our praying sires of old,
  As spirits clothed in light.

"A halo crowns the sacred hill,
  And thence glad voices raise
A song that doth the concave fill—
  Their prayers are turned to praise!
Art may not for these saints of old
  The marble urn invent;
Yet here the Future shall behold
  Their Heaven-built monument."

MADE BURGESS

In the Legislature constituted at Elizabethtown May 26, 1668, John Ogden was chosen as one of the Burgesses. In order to carry on his improvements, or to cancel previous obligations, he borrowed, Oct. 9, 1668, of Cornelius Steenwick, a wealthy merchant, and Mayor of the City of New York, £191 5s., "one fourth part thereof to be paid in good Wheat at 4/6 p^r^ Bushell one fourth part in good drie Ox hides at 6 stivers p^r^ pound dutch weight One fourth part in good merchantable Tobacco at 4 stivers p^r^ pound like weight and one fourth part in Good Corn fed fat Pork well packt in casks and delivered at New Yorke at Three Pounds ten Shillings p^r^ Barrell." As security, he mortgaged, Apr. 29, 1669, "a Certain Water Mill now in my Tenure or Occupation, near unto the Mansion or Dwelling House of Gov. Carterett in Elizabeth Towne."

This mill was located on Broad street immediately west of the stone bridge, and south of the Presbyterian Church. The mill, and the dam across the creek just above, were doubtless constructed by John Ogden, Sr. [See Map.]

At this time whales were abundant on all the coast, and a whaling company was organized at Elizabethtown, which obtained a charter from the Government Feb. 15, 1669, granting to "John Ogden, sen^r^., Caleb Carwithy, Jacob Moleing [Melyen], Wm. Johnson, and Jeffry Jones, all of Elizabeth Town and their companie consisting of 21 persons," the exclusive right, for three years, of taking whales along the coast from Barnegat to the eastern part of the province, one twentieth part of the oil in casks to be given to the Lords Proprietors.

Gov. Carteret became somewhat imperious in giving away land in Elizabethtown, and at a "Town Meeting 22d Jan'y, 1671, Mr. Treat and Lieut Swain are deputed, to Take the first opportunity to Advise with Mr. Ogden, or any other they see Cause, what may be the Safest and Best Course to be taken for the Town, about our Lands and Settlements here."

Gov. Carteret and his secretary Wm. Pardon having destroyed the records of General Assembly of Mar. 26, 1672, they found the atmosphere of the town somewhat dangerous, and fled to Bergen, where, on May 28, the refugee Governor convened a council and issued a Proclamation to the people of Elizabethtown, charging them with attempting to make alterations in the Government, and of a tendency to mutiny and rebellion. Capt. James Carteret, kinsman of the Governor, was called to preside over the House of Burgesses in Elizabethtown, and issued a warrant for Secretary Wm. Pardon. The warrant was served by Constable Meeker, but his prisoner escaped to Bergen. He returned to Elizabethtown to read the Proclamation of Gov. Carteret, and was imprisoned for three weeks. On June 25, a warrant was issued by Justice Ogden requiring Meeker "forthwith to assemble four men of good report and with them to repair to the said William Pardon's house to attach what moveables of his can be found." This warrant was issued because Pardon, as the Secretary of Assembly, had failed to make copy of the laws passed on Mar. 26, and to deliver the said laws to the Assembly.

Gov. John Winthrop, of Connecticut, being personally acquainted with many of the Elizabethtown settlers, wrote, July 2, 1673, to Gov. Sir Geo. Carteret in London, commending the characters and good reputations of the contending settlers, that their cause might be espoused by him. Among those named in Gov. Winthrop's letter was "Mr John Odgden."

MADE SCHOUT OF ACHTER KOL

The Dutch having retaken New York by force of arms July 30, 1673, and the English colonists having had so much trouble with their former Governor, John Ogden and other deputies from Elizabethtown, Newark, Woodbridge, Piscattaway, Middletown, and Shrewsbury, petitioned the Dutch for a hearing, upon which, the latter granted the colonists all their former privileges. The Dutch Generals and Council of War made John Ogden "Schout" or Sheriff of the six towns, on Sept. 1, 1673, and on the same day he and Samuel Hopkins were directed to take an inventory of the estate of the late Gov. Carteret. The commission reads as follows:

"———the 1st September 1673

"The following is the election and commission for the Schout and Secretary of the towns at Achter Coll

"The Lords Commanders & Honble Council of Warre of New Nederland, residing in fort Willim Hendrik etz.

"WHEREAS wee have thought fitt & necessarij to discharge the forme of Governm^{t} late in practice here and to reduce it under the stijle of Schout and Scheepens, wch is customarij in our natieve country the United Belgick provinces.

"Know yee therefore that wee bij virtue of o^{r} Commission from ye High & mighty Lords the States Generall and his Serene Highnesse the Prince of Orange etz. out of ye Nomination presented unto us bij ye deputies of Elizabeth Towne Wood Bridge, Shrousburry, New-Worke Piscattewaij & Middletown, have elected and established

"Mr John Ogden to be Schout &
Mr Samuell Hopkins to be Secretary } of all the respective Townes"

On Sept. 7, these two men complained that Robert Lapriere had removed divers goods from the house of Philip Carteret, which he refused to restore, and his arrest was ordered. Schout John Ogden was further ordered to summon James Bollen, "late Secretary of the Province of New Yersey," who must give up his papers within ten days under forfeiture of his property. Lapriere and one John Singletary, charged with disobeying commands, were arrested by Schout Ogden and sent to New York. They were examined on the 9th by Council, and four days later, John Ogden being present, they were convicted. Singletary was fined £5 and put on good behavior, and Lapriere, who was Governor General, was convicted of sedition and banished.

On Sept. 13, 1673, the Dutch Commission returned to New York and reported that on the 11th inst. they had administered the oath of allegiance to the inhabitants of the several towns. They rated "Elizabethtown" at "80 men," the first on the list being John Ogden, Sr. On Oct. 1, the Council of War sent instructions to Schout Ogden and the magistrates to preserve public peace and the administration of justice. They required that the Reformed Christian Religion be maintained. Power was given them for "laying out highways, setting off lands and gardens, and in like manner what appertains to agriculture, observance of the Sabbath, erecting churches, school houses, or similar public works." Some of the Indians having committed depredations in the neighborhood, "Mr. Ogden" wrote to Gov. Anthony Colve Sept. 29th [O. S.] for instructions, and received in reply a letter dated at "ffort Willem Hendrick 14th Octob^{r} 1673" [N. S.]. In this letter, Gov. Colve requires Mr. John Ogden to summon the Indian Sachem before the Governor. "You are also Required to send hether bij ye first opportunity the armes & other goods according to Inventorij formerlij belonging to ye Late Gouvern^{rs} Carterett, etc."

VIRTUALLY GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY

An Assembly, composed of "the Schout and Magistrates of Achter Kol to make laws and orders," was held at Elizabethtown, commencing Nov. 18, 1673. The ordinances were few and simple, and mostly pertained to morality and religion. The English settlements had rest for more than a year. "The people lived on good terms with the authorities at Fort Orange, and were secured in the enjoyment of their lands and privileges. Ogden was virtually Governor of the English towns in New Jersey and the government was administered very much after the fashion of New England." But the Dutch rule soon ended by the treaty of peace signed at Westminster, Eng., Feb. 9, 1674, and all captured territory was mutually restored. The Dutch were superseded by the English at New York the following November.

Capt. Philip Carteret returned to Elizabethtown from England Nov. 1674, being absent over two years. He came in the same vessel with his kinsman, Col. Edmund Andros, the newly appointed Governor of New York, arriving Oct. 31, 1674. Sir Geo. Carteret was now sole Proprietor of East Jersey, being confirmed to him by royal mandate June 13th. A new Patent for the whole territory was given on June 29th to the Duke of York, by whom East Jersey was reconveyed on the same date to Sir Geo. Carteret, who was to have sole power "to settle and dispose of the country, upon such terms and conditions as he shall see fit." This basis of despotic power gave to the Governor full control of the Legislature and deprived the people of all original jurisdiction. The "Concessions" were reissued July 31st, and the same day Capt. Philip Carteret was re-commissioned acting Governor.

He came armed with "Instructions and Orders" from Sir George, declaring the grants issued the colonists by former Governor Nicolls null and void, and requiring all settlers to apply for new surveys and patents. Each settler was required to apply to the Surveyor General between Apr. 1st and May 15, 1675, or his lands and improvements would be declared confiscated. So distasteful was the requirement, only one, a Vanquellin, the Surveyor, applied within the time assigned, and only ten more during the latter half of the year. "Good old John Ogden" was the very last to make application for a re-survey, and he doubtless did it under protest. It was as late as Oct. 29, 1678. Let every one of his numerous descendants be devoutly grateful that his illustrious ancestor, John Ogden, displayed more manly courage, possessed better moral fiber, and had a purer quality of patriotic blood than any other man in East Jersey.

Gov. Edmund Andros of New York had previously received a commission, and had been given jurisdiction over all territory between the Connecticut and Delaware rivers, but the Duke of York waived the claim of Andros to said jurisdiction in his grant to Berkeley and Carteret. But Lord Berkeley having retired from the concern, and Sir George Carteret being dead, Andros wrote to Gov. Philip on Mar. 18, 1680, reminding him of his claim, and ordered him to desist from further exercise of authority in New Jersey. Andros next visited Carteret Apr. 7, 1680. He demanded the surrender of Carteret, and issued further orders "& one particularly to Mr Ogden then scherif for the surrender of N. Jersey." The six towns refused to negotiate with Andros, and the Assembly at Elizabethtown, of which "old John Ogden" was a member, declared they would not recognize his authority till so ordered by the King.

The last two years of the earthly record of this unusual man of affairs, patriot and Christian, are missing. The promise of Scripture had been verified to him: "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season;" "With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation." The infirmities of age doubtless required him to retire from active participation in the affairs of the Colony. His end could not have been otherwise than peaceful. His last will and testament were made Dec. 21, 1681, and he probably died in May, 1682. The following panegyric sums up the life of this remarkable man, and is not too strong. It is from "Hatfield's History of Elizabeth," and from a disinterested pen:

"And now 'good old John Ogden,' whose wanderings for forty years had justly entitled him to rank with the 'Pilgrim Fathers,'—the acknowledged pioneer of the town, in whose house the first white child of the settlement was born, the accepted leader of the people, a pillar in the church and in the State, honored and trusted by all, . . . lies down and dies; leaving the impress of his political and religious principles, not only upon his children, but upon the community that he has so largely aided in founding. A man he was of more than ordinary mark—a man of sterling worth; of whom the town, as well as his numerous posterity, should be gratefully mindful. He was called a 'malcontent,' and regarded as 'the leading malcontent of Elizabeth Town;' but surely the man that was held in such high esteem by the accomplished, sagacious and pious Winthrop,—the man who, both at Southampton and here, had been an honored magistrate, loved and trusted by the people, and, during the Dutch rule, the virtual Governor of the English portion of the Province, is not to be ranked with restless agitators because of his persistent opposition to an arbitrary government. A true patriot, and a genuine Christian, he devoted himself while living to the best interests of the town, and dying bequeathed to his sons the work of completing what he had so fairly and effectually inaugurated—the establishment of a vigorous plantation founded on the principles of civil and religious liberty."

"The Apprisers was Sworne before me this 30 Day of May 1682: PHILLIP CARTERET"

THE WIFE OF JOHN OGDEN

Little is known concerning Jane Bond, the wife of John Ogden. She was the daughter of Jonathan Bond of England, and tradition says she was the sister of Robert Bond, an intimate associate of John Ogden, both in Southampton, L. I., and Elizabethtown, N. J. We would naturally expect that a man of intelligent foresight and sterling moral worth would select an estimable and worthy helpmate. In his will, John Ogden refers to her as his "Deare and beloved wife and soe hath been for above fowerty yeares" (the spelling probably being that of Isaac Whitehead). Her husband dying in May, 1682, she was made administratrix of his estate Sept. 19, following, a certified copy being given here:

"Widdo Ogden her letter of Administration 1682.

"By order of the Gover^r^ PHILLIP CARTERET.

About a year after her husband's death, and on May 14, 1683, Jane Ogden petitioned Council to secure to her the right of 300 acres in the Elizabethtown tract.

'Att a Councill held the 14th Day of May Anno Dñi 1683

"The petiĉon of Jane Ogden Widd read the same being for 300 Acres of Land in Elizabeth Towne in right of John Ogden her late husband wch shee Alledges to bee in right and pursuance of a Towne order for wch John Ogden had a warr^t^ 29th Oct 1678—vpon inspecĉon of the Records wee find noe such warr^t^, but a warr^t^ for 300 Acres in pursuance of the gen'all Concessions—in wch respect the petiĉone^r^ is mistaken soe the Councill cannot Answer the same as Desired"

Again—

"Att a Councill held the 26th Day of May Anno Dñi 1683"
[The Deputy Governor and four others of Council being present]

"The Petiĉon of Jane Ogden for 300 acres of Land in Elizabeth Towne for her husbands rights according to Concessions It's ordered that it be referred to the Deputy Governor and Surveyor gen^r^all to examine what Lands have bin laid out or taken vp by the husband in his life tyme—That according to Concessions she may have her just rights"

The date of the death of the widow Jane Ogden is not mentioned, neither is the place of sepulcher of herself and her worthy husband definitely known. But doubtless their sacred dust lies beneath the rear of the present edifice of the First Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth. The first meeting house was of wood and of an humble style of architecture. It was replaced by a new church in 1724, which was 58 ft. long and 42 ft. wide. An addition of 16 ft. was made in the rear in 1766. This church was burned by the British and Tories on the night of Jan. 25, 1780. Washington spoke of it as "the

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, ELIZABETH, N. J.

John Ogden the Pilgrim, his wife, and many descendants are buried here. There are ninety-one Ogden tombstones in the churchyard late misfortune and disgrace of Elizabeth Town." The erection of a new church was begun in 1784, and completed in 1789. It has many times been extended and improved.

It was the custom of the early settlers to bury their dead immediately in the rear of their meeting houses, and probably the first two or three generations of the settlers of Elizabethtown are buried under the greater part of the present edifice. It is therefore reasonable to suppose that among them lie the bodies of John and Jane Ogden, awaiting the resurrection of the just. No headstones remain as memorials of their eventful, but successful lives, although some of the old brown slabs removed to give room for the additions to the church were set in the walls, bearing as early a date as that of 1687. But their monument is imperishably located in the hearts of their appreciative and loving descendants,—a monument more enduring than that of marble or bronze.

ELIZABETHTOWN BRANCH

FIRST GENERATION

1. JOHN OGDEN, b. Bradley Plain, England, Sept. 19, 1609; d. Elizabethtown, N. J., May, 1682; m. Bradley Plain, May 8, 1637, JANE BOND, b.——; d. Elizabethtown, N. J., ——; dau. of Jonathan Bond, of England.

(For biography, see former chapter.)

When Abraham, the Patriarch, on the Plain of Mamre, was told to lift his eyes to heaven and number the stars, he was assured that his descendants should be likewise without number. No other man has been made to know he would become the "father of a multitude," and that all nations would be blessed in him. But John Ogden, being also a righteous man, had he been given the eyes of prophecy, could have looked forward to the skies of progenial descent, and been privileged to see a multitude of worthy descendants, among them being many stars of the third, second, and even of the first magnitude. The promise was not only to Abraham, "I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing;" it was fulfilled in the case of John Ogden, the Pilgrim.

The contention is still on among modern critics concerning heredity; but the transmission of certain qualities of blood still means the transmission of certain mental and moral qualities in descendants. It is true, in a sense, that "all men have an equal chance in life"; but he who begins the struggle with the hereditary characteristics of a noble, pure, unselfish, and strong-minded parentage, has an innate capital in brain and heart that is lacking in other men. We are confident the foregoing conclusions will be abundantly verified in the following pages.

NUMBERS 2 TO 7 INCLUSIVE

Children of John Ogden and Jane Bond, his wife (Chart 1):

2. JOHN OGDEN, JR., b. England, Mar. 3, 1638; d. Nov. 24, 1702; m. ELIZABETH PLUM
3. DAVID OGDEN, b. England, Jan. 11, 1639; will proved Feb. 27, 1692; m. ELIZABETH (Swaine) WARD.
4. JONATHAN OGDEN, b. twin, Jan. 11, 1639; d. Jan. 3, 1732; m. REBECCA (WOOD?).
5. JOSEPH OGDEN, b. America, Nov. 9, 1642 (?); d. before Jan. 15, 1690; m. SARAH WHITEHEAD.
6. BENJAMIN OGDEN, b. America, circa 1654; d. Nov. 20, 1722, in 69th year; m. HANNAH WOODRUFF.
7. MARY OGDEN, b. America, ——; d. ——; m. JOHN WOODRUFF, 2D.

From these six children of John Ogden, the Pilgrim, have descended from 13,000 to 14,000 souls. Over 10,000 have been charted. While the book contains but 4774 in consecutive numbers, many family entries are necessarily closed by index letters after the children's names, and female lines are not carried beyond grandchildren of Ogden mothers. Besides, several family records reached the editors too late for regular systematic entry, and these names probably increase the actual number of descendants named in the book to about 5500. Of the conservative estimate of 13,000 descendants of John Ogden, the relative numbers issuing through his six children are about as follows: No. 2, John, 1200; No. 3, David, 4000; No. 4, Jonathan, 4000; No. 5, Joseph, 1400; No. 6, Benjamin, 1400; and No. 7, Mary, 1400.

Through these five sons and one daughter of "Good Old John Ogden" flowed a strain of blood that assured high grade of thought and action throughout the nation. Perhaps ten per cent. were above the average in the scale of excellence, and were in some way prominent. Of the learned professions, a remarkable number attained high degree in the law, a number helping to frame Colonial and State Constitutions, and many becoming judges of Supreme Court. That rich strain of blood gave New Jersey three of her Governors.

From the ancestral seat, Elizabethtown, N. J., that blood flowed northward, transforming the wilderness, and giving Ogdensburg, N. Y., its being; thence through Canada back to John Ogden's native shores, where it blended with notable English blood in legal and army circles. Westward, that blood pulsated along new arteries of commerce centering in the great metropolis on Lake Michigan; named post-villages in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Kentucky,—named Ogden, Utah; Ogden's Peak and Ogden's Cañon, Utah. That blood flowed southward, and produced men prominent in law, legislature, court, and army,—blood which, alas, was spilled on both sides on the battle-fields of the Civil War.

The women have been likewise gifted and noble, and the strong, rich, blood-tie unites all of the great family in a common heritage of worthy kinship and achievement.

THIRD GENERATION

NUMBERS 8 TO 31 INCLUSIVE

2. JOHN OGDEN, JR. (John[1]), b. England, Mar. 3, 1638; d. Nov. 24, 1702; m. —— ELIZABETH PLUM, b. Jan. 18, 1650; d. —— 1702; dau. of Samuel Plum.

JOHN OGDEN, JR.[2], and his two next younger brothers, twins, were born in England. His father, John Ogden, Sr., was one of the immigrants who brought their families to eastern Long Island, probably landing at Southampton early in the year 1640. The family is supposed to have soon removed to Stamford, Conn., where they remained about three years, and then returned to Long Id., being in Hempstead in 1644, and again at Southampton in 1647. From this locality he moved with the family to Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1665.

The first public mention of JOHN OGDEN, JR.[2], is taken from Southampton Records, bearing date Apr. 30, 1656, and in this peculiar item: "Mr Iohn Hoeell doth acknowledge that last winter he sold a young mare of two yeares old at present, vnto Mr Iosiah Stambrough; and Iohn Ogden Iunr doth acknowledge he did through mistake tok vp the said mare and marked her, with a hott Iron vpon ye neare shovlder, with the brand marked which is this signe O.

Witness HENRY PIERSON, Sect."

The records state he took the oath of allegiance to King Charles II., Feb. 19, 1665.

The spirit of the man is displayed in the first mention of his name after taking up his residence in Elizabethtown. The "N. J. Col. Rec." state that in May, 1671, Gov. Carteret of E. Jersey caused much disaffection among colonists by convening a special court to try one Wm. Hacket, captain of the sloop "Endeavor," for illegal trading in the province; the colonists held that the right to convene a court belonged to the General Assembly. The breach was made the wider when the Governor granted a lot to Richard Michell, a servant in the Governor's household, the colonists believing none but the people, in town meeting, could say who should be associates and freeholders. A town meeting was called, and "It was agreed by the Major vote that Richard Michell should not enjoy his lot given him by the governor. Upon information June 19, 1671, it was agreed that there should some go the next morning and pull up Richard Michell's fence. A Coppie of the towne record by me. Isak Whitehead."

The fence was pulled down according to the above agreement by eight persons, viz. Wm. Meaker, Jeffery Jones, Luke Watson, Nicholas Carter, Samuel Mash, Sr., John Ogden, Jr., Joseph Meaker and Hur Tompson. A special session of the grand jury was called, and they were indicted, tried, and found guilty. Wm. Meaker, as leader of the riot, was fined £5 and the others £3 each.

The Dutch having regained New Amsterdam, JOHN OGDEN, JR.[2], took oath of allegiance Sept. 11, 1673, as did many other freeholders.

On June 14, 1676, he obtained a patent for 150 a. of land. Upon the restoration of English rule, those who had sworn allegiance to the Dutch were deprived of their rights by Gov. Carteret, who declared that patents of land granted by Gov. Nicolls were void, and that all must apply anew to himself within a year from notice (July 31, 1674) or their lands would be declared forfeited. Despite the bitterest protest, the Governor stood firm and they had to submit to the new allotment. JOHN OGDEN, father and son, were the last to apply, and then under protest.

John Ogden Jr.'s[2] generosity is shown by the fact that in the year 1678, he and his brother Jonathan and Jos. Wilson shared the honor of being the largest contributors to the minister's support, £3 each. In the year 1694 he is named as one of the largest contributors to the support of their minister, Rev. John Harriman.

That he was not only generous but an able and representative man is evident in that Elizabethtown sent John Ogden, Jr., and Jacob Mollins as their deputies or representatives to the first Legislature of New Jersey.

An entry of Aug. 2, 1678, gives the following description of 85 a. of his land:

"Layed out for John Ogden Jr. at Eliz[t] Towne a hous Lott conty 4 acres, In length 12 & in bredth 4 Chaine bounded on the S. E. part by John Woodroff & part by Leonard Headley, N. E. by a highway, N. W. by Mrs. Hopkins Sens, & S. W. by ye Creek a highway to pass betweene

"Item 12 acres of upland lying upon the way that goes to ye Governors point in wedth S. E. & N. W. 8 chaine & in length N. E. & S. W. 15 chaine bounded on ye N. W. by Leonard Headley, N. E. by a highway S. E. by the Governors Land formerly Peter Woolnersens, & S. W. by Land not yet surveyed Bounded on ye East by Jonathan Ogdens Meadow, N. by the Island, S. and W. by meadow not yet surveyed. In all 85 Acres English measure"

The sale of the old homestead of his father "Good Old John" in Elizabethtown is shown by the following record: "John Ogden of Elizabeth Towne, yeoman, for £30 sells to Samuel Whitehead of Southampton, in the Co. of Suffolk state of New York, cordwainer, land in Elizabeth Towne by estimation 2 acres. Bounded South by highway West by Mill River, North by lands of the said Elizabeth Towne for a place of burial, together with the house orchard, fences &c.

"Signed this third day of Oct. 1691 by John Ogden Elizabeth Ogden her mark E"

John Ogden, Jr.'s[2] will was made Nov. 23, 1702, "in the first year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Anne, over England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Queen &c. . . . First, I bequeath my soul into the hands of God yt gave it and my body (in hopes of a joyful resurrection) I commit to the earth." He then proceeds to bequeath to his daughter Jemima Ogden, his "home lott and orchard," and all his "hay lot of meadow." Possibly there were other children, and a former wife. After giving his nephew John Ogden[11] of Newark, son of David Ogden[3], deceased, twelve acres of plain next to the Newark road, he bequeaths the balance of his land in Elizabethtown to his daughter Jemima, also all his personal property, after debts and funeral charges are duly paid. He names his brothers Jonathan and Benjamin Ogden and John Plum as executors.

He probably died the day after making his will, which was proved the day following.

Elizabeth Plum, wife of John Ogden, Jr.[2], was dau. of Samuel Plum, of Branford, Conn., and afterward of Newark, N. J., and gr. dau. of John Plum, of Dorchester, Mass., of Wethersfield, Conn., later, and finally of Branford, Conn. Before deputies were introduced into Connecticut, John Plum was a chief officer. He was a representative in 1641 and twice afterward. He d. before 1648.

Samuel Plum in his will, dated 1703, mentions his grandchild Jemima Ogden as under age.

CHILD (Chart 1):

8. JEMIMA OGDEN, b. ——, 1692 ; d. ——; m. HENRY PIERSON.

3. DAVID OGDEN (John[1]), b. England, Jan. 11, 1639; d. bet. Dec. 26, 1691 (date of will), and Feb. 27, 1691–2 (when will was proved); m. circa 1676, ELIZABETH (Swaine) WARD, b. Apr. 24, 1654; living in Jan. 1706; dau. of Capt. Samuel Swaine and Johannah Ward, his wife, and wid. of Josiah Ward.

DAVID OGDEN[3], as said of his brother John, Jr.[2], was born in England. He was twin to his brother Jonathan, and came to eastern Long Island early in 1640, living with the family at South- or Northampton, Long Island, until the family removed to Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1665. He was twenty-six years old at the latter date, and is in that year named as one of the original Associates of Elizabethtown. He had taken oath of allegiance to the English government of New York on Feb. 19, 1665, probably while on Long Id., as the family settled at Elizabethtown, N. J., about the middle of that year.

The "Newark Town Records" of 1670 state that nearly all the trades and callings necessary to the convenience and comfort of the colony were represented; among them is mentioned "a stone church builder, DAVID OGDEN."

On Sept. 11, 1673, he took oath of allegiance to the Dutch government of New Amsterdam.

He applied for a survey of 120 acres, Apr. 27, 1676, and about that time removed to Newark, N. J.

The Newark Records have this peculiar entry of Nov. 24, 1679: "It is agreed that two men in each Quarter shall be appointed, to look after the carrying in of Mr Piersons Wood for this Year, and take Care that it be done seasonably. And also to see that every one as is yet behind for the last Year, do first carry thier load; and for thier Pains and Care shall be exempted from thier Load of Wood. Mr Johnson and George Day for thier Quarter. Mr Kitchel and DAVID OGDEN for thier Quarter, Deacon Lawrence and John Ward, Turner, for thier Quarter, and Joseph Walters and Thomas Pierson, Junior, for thier Quarter are chosen—every Quarter to go out when the Men see Cause to call."

At a Town Meeting held Jan. 1, 1679, DAVID OGDEN[3] and others were chosen Town's Men for that year, "having the same Power as others formerly." He was elected again by the Town Meeting held Jan. 4, 1680, at which meeting he was allotted one of the gates in the common fence to keep in repair, instead of his proportion of the common fence (this appears to be equal to maintaining seven rods of fence).

At Town Meeting held Dec. 4, 1682, "Joseph Walters and DAVID OGDEN are chosen to go to each Man that stands indebted to the Town in the Treasurers Book, and make Demand thereof, or desire them to reckon with the Treasurer within a Weeks Time; and if they have neither Meat, nor Corn, to pay, the Treasurer doth engage to putt them in a Way to pay their Debts with Timber; but if they will not pay nor reckon, then the Constable shall come with a Warrant and distrain for it."

The following resolution was passed at Town Meeting held Jan. 1, 1683: "Whereas there is an Order made by Vote the 21 of March 1675–6 for an Orderly attendance at Town Meetings, and for Want of Execution many are remiss in their Attendance, by which means Town Business is much hindered, and some as do attend are much damnified by loosing thier Time, etc." it was agreed that if three fourths of the planters should subscribe, they would impose a fine for "late Coming, total Absence, or irregular going away before the Meeting be dismissed." This order was that "Twenty four Hours shall be accorded legal Warning, and if any Man doth not come to the Place of Meeting to answer to his Name at the Second Beat of the Drum, shall be fined 6d." Lacking a satisfactory excuse, the penalty for a whole day's absence was half a crown, a half day 15d., and for leaving the meeting without leave 2s. DAVID OGDEN3 was one that signed.

Town Meeting, Jan. 9, 1687–8: "It is fully and unanimously consented to, and agreed upon by every Planter now present, all being called by Name; that they will from Time to Time pay or cause to be paid yearly, in their full Proportion equally, in a Rate that may be agreed on by the Major Part of the Town, to the Maintainance and Allowance now agreed upon for the upholding and preaching of the Word in our Town; and Eighty Pounds by the Year is agreed upon to be allowed to the present Minister, with his firewood, and to be Rate free." No man was to be liable for the failure of another to pay his proportion. DAVID OGDEN was one of the signers.

ELIZABETH SWAINE, wife of David Ogden3, was of English descent. Her grandfather, William Swaine, Gent., of London, came to America in the "Elizabeth and Anne," arriving at Boston in 1635. He was a Representative to the General Court of Mass. in 1636, was Judge from 1637 to 1640, and removed to Wethersfield, Conn., in 1640. He was Representative to the General Court of Conn. 1641–3, thence removed to Branford in 1644, and was Deputy Governor of Conn. that year. He had two sons, Daniel and Capt. Samuel, the latter removing to Newark in 1665, and died there before 1685. His will is dated 1682.

His daughter, ELIZABETH SWAINE, was first married to her cousin, Josiah Ward. She was his promised wife at the time the Branford colony came to Newark, and is said to have had the honor of being the first to land. Being among the first settlers of Newark, she was buried in their first burying ground, on Broad street, nearly opposite the present old cemetery beside the depot of the Central R. R. of N. J. Some years ago the gravestones were removed from that site by the city authorities and placed around the sides of a vault in Fairmount Cemetery, over which is a large zinc monument. On one face of this is a tablet showing a boat by the shore and a man assisting a lady to step ashore. This is said to commemorate the landing of the first settlers, the first to land being ELIZABETH SWAINE. After the death of her first husband, Josiah Ward, she became the wife of David Ogden. It has been erroneously recorded that she died in 1691, for the old town book of Newark recites a deed of land sold by her Jan. 1705–6, which she inherited from her father, Samuel Swaine.

The following deed was given ELIZABETH OGDEN by the East Jersey Proprietors, but does not state the number of acres:

"This indenture &c made the twentie Eight day of March Anno Dom 1698 Between the Proprietors of the Province of East New Jersey & Elizabeth Ogden widow of David Ogden late of Newark Dec'sd. The Proprietors sell to Elizabeth, her heirs &c In right of her father Capt Samuel Swain late of Newark Dec'sd a tract of land in the town of Newark aforesaid containing (after allowance for Barrens & highways &c) First that tract of upland on the side of the long hill bounded South by highway West partly by Nathaniel Wheeler & John Johnson, North by George Day East by John Curtise also a peice of meadow bounded North East by Thomas Pierson South East by the great Island S. W. by Samuel Freeman N. E. by the Creek together with all the profits &c to the same belonging to have & to hold &c. In consideration &c She (Elizabeth Ogden) to pay the East Jersey Proprietors three half pennies monie of sd Province upon every five & twenty day of March yearly forever hereafter

Jonathan Ogden[4] was born twin to his brother David[3].

The only mention of his name in the "Southampton Records" bears date Oct. 21, 1664, at which time he witnesses deed of John Davis to John Oldfield, a fifty pound commonage. He removed with the family to Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1665, and was one of the original Associates. He took oath of allegiance to King Charles II., Feb. 19, 1665, and was then called one of the "5 full grown boys" of Good Old John.

His house lot is thus described: "Layed out for Jonathan Ogden at Eliz. Towne a house Lott Wth an Adition conty 6 acres in Length 15 & in bredth 4 Chane Bounded on the S. E. by Joseph Ogden N. E. N. W. and S. W. by highways." He also had 22 a. of upland in form of a triangle, bounded by the Governor's and Benj. Parkis' land; also 84 a. "Lying in plaine" bounded by Benj. Parkis', Leonard Headley's and Isaac Whitehead's land, and the Mill brook; also 14 a. of meadow in two plots, on the Creek and on Great Island; in all 126 a. English measure. All this land was granted by Philip Carteret, Governor, in the name of Sir George Carteret, Baronet, and given under seal of the Province Nov. 10, 1678.

Probably in Dec., 1667, he joined with others in petitioning the Governor and Council to have their lands laid out to them according to agreement made with the inhabitants, with consent of the Governor, saying that unless it be done "we do not see how we can possibly subsist in th Town, but shall be forced to look out somewhere else for a livelihood."

Jonathan took the oath of allegiance to the Dutch government of New York Sept. 11, 1673.

On June 14, 1676, he applied to the Surveyor General, or his deputy, asking that 120 a. of land be laid out to him.

He was appointed one of the overseers of his father's will on Nov. 21, 1681, and in 1702 swears that he "hath safely kept it ever since that time till now."

In 1692 he was receiver of taxes for Essex Co., N. J.

The colonists being aggrieved by the English authorities, in Sept. 1693 the old and new Associates petitioned the King that the lands they had been granted and had enjoyed for nearly 30 years "ought according to Law, Reason and justice, Still to enjoy the same." Jonathan Ogden[4] was one of the petitioners.

That he was a zealous churchman is indicated by the fact that in the year 1678 and later, with his brother John, he is named as a liberal contributor to the minister's support. In 1691 he is called Deacon Jonathan Ogden, and is again named as one of the largest contributors.

The civil affairs of that early day were adjusted slowly; clashes of authority occurred, and it was quite usual for outraged Justice to assert herself. In each of these troubles the case was more likely a matter of principle than a violation of law and order; the best men often took the initiative in forcibly righting wrong. There is nothing surprising, therefore, when we read that JONATHAN OGDEN4 and many others were indicted May 13, 1699, for breaking open the jail at Woodbridge and releasing Lewis Morris and George Willcocks.

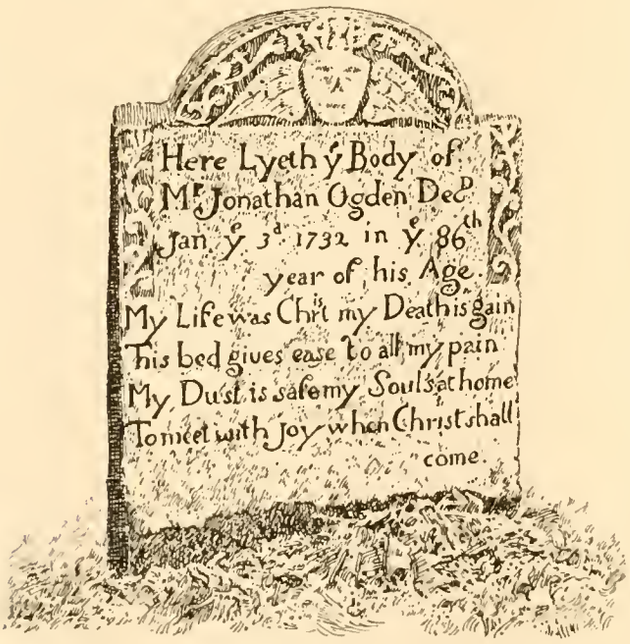
On Dec. 26, 1699, JONATHAN OGDEN4 was one of the assistants to John Harriman who had been chosen Surveyor "to Lay out, Divide and Equally assise all lands and meadows within the whole Bounds and purchase of Elizabeth Town, to every one Interested therein by Right of purchase under the honorable General Richard Nicholls, their Several & Repective parts and shares of the whole."

Record is again made of trouble Sept. 12, 1700. JONATHAN OGDEN4, JONATHAN OGDEN, JR., BENJAMIN OGDEN and many others from Elizabethtown are indicted for riotously taking the keys from the sheriff: "The Complainte of the Sheriffe at ye time and day aforesaid. That he was satt upon by severall men of Elizabeth Towne & forceablely Robbed of ye Keys of the Prisson, & the prissoner thereupon Imediately Taken out of his Cusstody."

There was so much dissatisfaction with the administration of colonial affairs, JONATHAN OGDEN4 and apparently all the heads of families in Elizabethtown petitioned the King to be taken under his immediate government "should the Proprietors not appoint a suitable person as Governor." This petition was transmitted in a letter of Mr. R. Yard, Sec'y of the Lords Justices, July 17, 1701.

At a court in Burlington, Dec. 19, 1700, Mr. Regnier brought two writs of error to remove two causes, one in the name of JONATHAN OGDEN4, and the other in the name of BENJAMIN OGDEN; both were refused.



Certain town books being lost or destroyed, on Novemb. 18, 1729, JONATHAN OGDEN4 with the other Associates agreed to allow the "newbook" to be regarded as a "Lawful Record of Surveys and Conveyances."

He made his will July 2, 1731, and names his son Robert, son Samuel dec'd, gr. son John, gt. gr. son Jonathan, youngest son of his gr. son Jonathan, dec'd; also his gr. son Samuel, and gt. gr. children Sarah Griffing and Rebecca Whitehead.

He d. Jan. 3, 1732, aged 93 years, and was buried at Elizabeth, N. J. His will was probated Jan. 9, 1732.

Nothing is known of his wife REBEKAH other than what is shown on her tombstone. Her maiden name is believed to have been Wood.

5. JOSEPH OGDEN (John[1]), b. Nov. 9, 1642 (?); d. before Jan. 15, 1690; m. —— SARAH WHITEHEAD, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of Isaac Whitehead.

JOSEPH OGDEN[5] is named in "Hatfield's Hist. Elizabeth" as one of the "five full grown boys" of John Ogden who came with their father to Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1665, being fourth in the list. For probable birthdate, see under No. 77, JOHN OGDEN, p. 76. About Dec., 1667, JOSEPH and JONATHAN OGDEN and many others petitioned the Governor and Council to have their lands laid out to them "according to the Agreements made by the inhabitants and consent of the Governor with them, as may more fully appear in the Town Records."

On Oct. 27, 1676, Joseph applied for his allotment of 90 a. of land according to the concessions, and upon this date Gov. Carteret granted a warrant for the same. Action was delayed, for on May 14, 1683, Joseph petitioned the Council for the 90 a. which he had formerly "pitcht upon." The record then states, "It is ordered that JOSEPH OGDEN give an accompt to this board wherefore the late Surveyor gen'all Executed not a Warr[t] of this quantity of Land the 27th Oct. 1676 And alsoe of the Land he pitches upon that the Councell may give their further resolution in the p[r]mises." Later, July 14, 1684, the Surveyor General was directed to "lay out and survey unto the said JOSEPH OGDEN Ninety acres of Upland and Meadow in proportion."

In 1682 he is named as one of the overseers of his father, John Ogden's will.

SARAH (Whitehead) OGDEN was dau. of Isaac Whitehead. She was appointed Jan. 15, 1690, administratrix of her husband JOSEPH OGDEN's estate. She had four husbands. She is named on Dec. 31, 1702, as the widow of William Brown, of Elizabethtown. In the latter's will, dated Dec. 10, 1702, he makes bequests to his "sons-in-law" (step-sons) Joseph and Isaac Ogden, and gives a large share of his property to "my loving and dearly beloved wife Sarah." She next m. Francis Sayer, and upon his decease was appointed Nov. 6, 1708, administratrix of his estate. A receipt found among the "Burnet Papers" reads: "1705 Isaac Ogden son-in-law of Francis Sayer receives from Francis Sayer his share and portion of the estate of his father Joseph Ogden." The "Burnet Papers" also say that Sarah was wife of Azariah Crane Mar. 3, 1720–1.

19. JOSEPH OGDEN, 2D, b. ——; d. Jan. 1720; m. JOANNA BAKER.
20. ISAAC OGDEN, b. ——; d. 1722; m. MARY ———.

Inventory of estate was made Nov. 15, 1722, and his widow Mary was granted letters of administration at Perth Amboy, N. J., Feb. 11, 1722–3.

6. CAPT. BENJAMIN OGDEN (John[1]), b. 1654; d. Nov. 20, 1722; m. 1685(?) HANNAH WOODRUFF, b. ——; d. ——; dau. of John Woodruff and —— Gosmer, his wife.

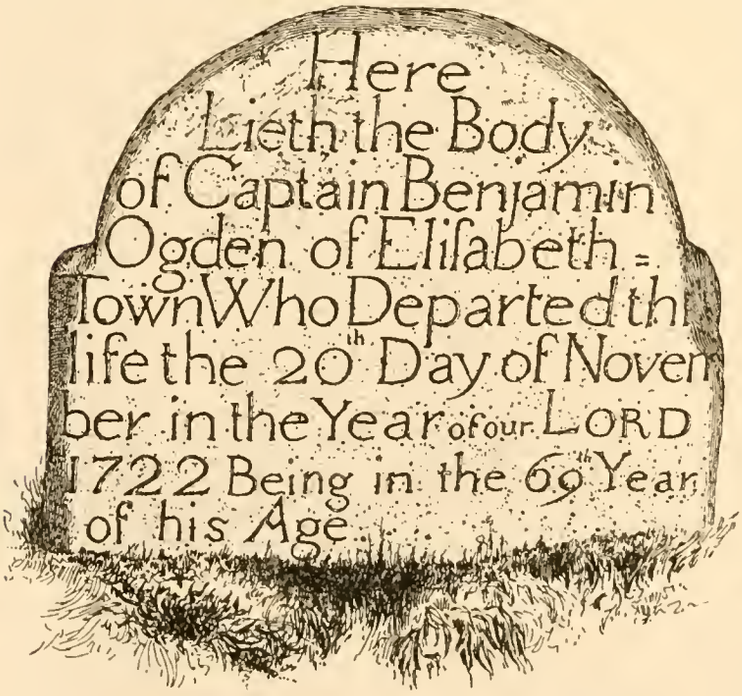
"Hatfield's Hist. Elizabeth" makes this early mention of BENJAMIN OGDEN[6]: "Two more sons of John Ogden, JOSEPH and BENJAMIN, had come to years." After speaking of other young residents, it is stated, "these all had grown to men's estate since 1665." This entry is made in 1673, showing that Benjamin was about 13 yrs. of age when he came with his father to Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1665. On Sept. 11, 1673, he was one of the Elizabethtown settlers who swore allegiance to the Dutch.

A council held at Elizabethtown, Nov. 27, 1684, makes record as follows: "Peticon of BENJ[a] OGDEN for 50 Acres of Land within the bounds of Elizabethtown with meadow in proportion—Read and ordered that hee have a war[rt] granted him according to his peticon."

A warrant in due form was given May 7, 1686. Further entry of land is shown under date of Feb. 18, 1699, when John Harriman laid out to BENJAMIN OGDEN 100 acres, bounded S. E. by Joseph Halsey, N. E. and S. W. by land left for highways, and N. W. by the foot of the mountains.

Capt. Ebenezer Peck came into possession of "John Ogden's Mill" as early as 1693, and he leased the same to BENJAMIN OGDEN and Rev. John Harriman jointly for £24 per year. Benjamin's brother John, Jr., had sold this mill property to Samuel Whitehead Oct. 3, 1691.

In Sept., 1693, BENJAMIN OGDEN[6] and others petitioned the king to be placed under the civil government of New York, otherwise to have "indifferent Judges to administer justice between your petitioners and the said pretended Proprietors, and to admonish the said Usurpers that they presume no more to usurpe your Majesty's Royal Authority." The colonists had just cause for complaint. Charles II. had granted the whole tract of land between the Connecticut and Delaware rivers to his brother James, Duke of York, in 1664, at which time it was in actual possession of the Dutch and Indians. The Dutch under Stuyvesant surrendered the territory to Gov. Nicolls Aug. 27, 1664, and in October of that year, he granted a patent to the Elizabethtown tract to John Ogden, John Bailey and others; it was under the latter that the petitioners claimed title, but meantime the Duke sold the claim to Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret. The Dutch regained possession in July, 1673, but were required to cede it a second time to the English by the treaty of 1674. Meanwhile the colonists had held peaceable possession, but the proprietorship changed frequently, and the subdivisions and transfers of shares involved the province in trouble. When the English Proprietors in Sept., 1693, claimed title from Berkeley and Carteret as far back as June, 1664, matters came to a climax. To test the matter the Proprietors brought suit against Jeffery Jones. The jury, although chosen by the Proprietors, returned a verdict in Jones' favor, but it was set aside by the judges; this caused the Associates to petition the king, as above.



That BENJAMIN OGDEN[6] was a leading and influential citizen is indicated by the fact of his appointment as Sheriff, Oct. 10, 1694. He is that year also named as a liberal subscriber to the minister's support. Three years later, Aug. 14, 1697, he and the Rev. John Harriman purchased a slave named Toney, the price being £48. Benjamin Ogden and Rev. John Harriman being partners, they probably dealt in slaves for use at the mill, etc.

The following record was made Mar. 4, 169⅝: "At A publick Conference of both houses, A Petition of Complaint Against George Jewell the Clerk of the peace & John Gardner High Sheriff for the Countie of Essex; signed by BENJAMIN OGDEN, Jonathan Clements Isaac Hatfield." After a long debate nothing was proven against either Clerk or Sheriff.

BENJAMIN OGDEN[6] was one of a committee appointed Dec. 3, 1698, to lay out the King's Road.

"In the year of our Lord one thousand six Hundred and Ninety-nine At a Town-Meeting (in Elizabethtown) of the Associates and those Holding under them or some of them were admitted as Associates with them in the afforesaid Premises, all those Persons whose names are hereinafter next mentioned;" among them is the name of BENJAMIN OGDEN.

BENJAMIN OGDEN[6] was one of a number of signers who transmitted by letter of Mr. R. Yard, secretary of the Lords Justices, July 17, 1701, a petition to the king, asking to be taken under his immediate government, should the Proprietors not appoint a suitable person as Governor.

Dec. 5, 1702, BENJAMIN OGDEN[6], JONATHAN OGDEN[4], and John Plum are named as administrators of the will of John Ogden, Jr.

These two brothers, BENJAMIN[6] and JONATHAN OGDEN[4], are both refused an appeal to the Council held at Burlington, N. J., Dec. 19, 1710, because "her Majesty's Instructions Restricted the Removeall of Causes from the Supreme Court to this board to the Sum of one hundred pounds Sterling."

BENJAMIN OGDEN[6] made his will July 9, 1722, and names his wife Hannah, sons John, Benjamin, and William, and his nephew Joseph Woodruff. He states that he lived on the south side of country road, and that he has a grist mill in partnership with John Harriman. He d. Nov. 20, 1722, in his 69th year. His will was proved in Trenton, N. J., Nov. 30, 1722

7. MARY OGDEN (John[1]), b. ——; d. ——; m. JOHN WOODRUFF, 2D, b. ——; d. 1691; son of John Woodruff, 1st.

JOHN WOODRUFF, 2D, was from Southampton Colony, L. I. He was a man of distinction in several important offices, from Ensign to High Sheriff. He was an original Associate and took oath of allegiance Feb. 19, 1665.

His house lot contained 1½ acres, was bounded W. by John Ogden, and on all other sides by highways. He later owned 292 acres, a tract that is still known as "Woodruff's Farms." This acquisition is explained by the entry: "JOHN WOODRUFF of Eliz ä towne brings for his rights from ye yeare 1666 for himself & his wife and 3 able servants 2 men & a maid. In all 5 persons at 90 acres each = 450 acres. Ye warrant made 5 of ye Nov. 1675."

When Capt. Wm. Hacket of the sloop "Endeavor," hailing from Salisbury, Co. Norfolk, Eng., and charged with illegal trading in the Province, had his first jury trial at Elizabethtown, May 16, 1671, JOHN WOODRUFF, 2D, was one of the leading men who served on the jury.

He took oath of allegiance to the Dutch Sept. 11, 1673, and at the same time was sworn in as Ensign by Capt. Knyff and Lieut. Suel. On Dec. 11, 1674, he was appointed Constable of Elizabethtown, and was again sworn to that office Mar. 9, 1675.

The General Assembly in Dec., 1683, passed a stringent military law, and an act for the appointment of a "Chief Ranger" in every county, to look after the "estrays of the flocks and herds." Thereupon, Benjamin Parkis was appointed Captain, George Ross, Lieutenant, and JOHN WOODRUFF, 2D, Ensign of the Elizabethtown Fort Company. James Emmott was made Chief Ranger and Isaac Whitehead Coroner of Essex Co. In their commissions dated Dec. 3, 1683, they are all excepting Emmott styled "Gent."

Nov. 28, 1684, "John Woodruff Sen[r]" (his son John had reached majority) was appointed High Sheriff of Essex Co.

CAPT. DAVID OGDEN, 2D[9], was a resident of Newark, N. J. In papers left by John R. Burnet (Newark) is this mention: "Names signed to the agreement dated Sept. 3, 1701 Entitled a true copy of the articles of the first committee for the purchase of the Western part of the Township, between the mountains & the Passaic River, (ages given as far as known J. R. B.)." Among the names are Elizabeth Ogden, DAVID OGDEN, age 23, John Ogden, and Josiah Ogden, age 22. The foregoing was published in the Sentinel of June 20, 1854.

The following facts concerning CAPT. DAVID OGDEN'S[9] life are taken from the "Newark Town Records."

"Town Meeting, May 25th, 1713—It was agreed upon by vote that the Charges for procuring a Town Pattent should be raised as Mr Bower's Salary (that is to say) all Lands & Meadows at £25 p. Hundred Acres, all Cattle & Horses one Year old and upwards at £2 p. head, all Male White Persons at Sixteen Years old and upwards at £14 p. head."

"Item, Ensign Samuel Cooper and James Brown were chosen Rate makers and Assessors —Item, DAVID OGDEN, Collector." The latter was then about 35 years old.

At Town Meeting held Nov. 2, 1713, Samuel Cooper and DAVID OGDEN, 2D, were chosen Assessors and Rate Makers, and both were re-elected Nov. 1, 1714. On Mar. 12, 1716-17, DAVID OGDEN, 2D, was chosen Assessor for the Provincial tax, and Samuel Alling, Collector. David was chosen for the same office Mar. 11, 1718–19, Nov. 2, 1719, Mar. 8, 1719–20, and Mar. 10, 1729–30.

DAVID OGDEN, 2D[9], and Joseph Burwell were selected by vote, Jan. 20, 1714–15, to agree with the persons who laid out the common line fence as to what should be the proper remuneration.

"March 8, 1714–15 Sam[l] Aling & David Ogden were Chosen to meet ye Justices in order to agree about ye County Tax." On this date David Ogden, 2d's part of the line fence was fixed at one chain (66 ft.) extending from Bound Creek northwest to "ye Main River."

On Mar. 14, 1721, Joseph Crane and David Ogden, 2d[9], were chosen Freeholders, and the latter is at this time called "Captain" Ogden. He was again elected to this office Mar. 11, 1728–9, and in company with Lieut. Samuel Cooper. (These officers are called Supervisors in N. Y. State and Selectmen in Conn.) Again, Mar. 10, 1729–30, and Mar. 9, 1730–31, Capt. David Ogden, 2d[9], is one of the Board of Freeholders and is also a Fence Viewer. Twice later he was elected Freeholder,—Mar. 14, 1731–2, and Mar. 13, 1732–3.

He d. July 11, 1734, aged 56 yrs., and was buried in Trinity Churchyard, Newark. His gravestone is imbedded in the floor of the porch of Trinity Church, and is thus inscribed:

"Here lieth interred
Y[e] body of Capt. David Ogden who died July Y[e] 11th A. D. 1734
Aged 56 years"

In the opposite corner of porch is imbedded the gravestone of his brother Col. Josiah Ogden[10], thus:

Col. Josiah Ogden[10] was one of the most prominent and influential men in civil affairs of Newark, N. J. He was also a strong moral factor in the religious matters of the community, and a man of considerable wealth. A minute of Town Meeting held Mar. 8, 1714–15, would indicate this in the large number of links of fence to the commonage that was his portion to be kept in repair. This fence separated the cultivated land from the meadow or pasture land, 95 links being apportioned Josiah Ogden, which section of fence ran from Bound Creek northward to the main river. He resided in a commodious stone house "at the most publick Landing in Newark," with garden, orchard, etc.

SILVER SERVICE

Presented to Trinity Episcopal Church, Newark, N. J., by No. 10, Col. Josiah Ogden

At Town Meeting held Aug. 30, 1716, it was "Voted by the Town to chuse a Committee to se out some Way to procure a Minister for the Town, to supply the Place of Mr. Nathaniel Bowers, dec'd." The committee consisted of Deacon Azariah Crane, Capt. Eliphalet Johnson, Mr. Samuel Alling, Mr. Josiah Ogden, Mr. Jonathan Crane, Mr. Thomas Davis and John Cooper.

When it was required to fix a boundary line between Newark and Elizabeth Town, a Town Meeting held Oct. 24, 1739, chose, as committee for that purpose, Jonathan Crane, Col. Josiah Ogden[10], and Samuel Farrand, Esq.

"Stearns' Hist. Newark" has this to say concerning an important event in the history of the town, and of the man who unwittingly brought it about: "Col. Josiah Ogden was a leading member of the community, a pillar of the First Church. He was a man of energy, wealth and influence. . . . From 1716 to 1721 the Colonel represented the town in the General Assembly. He appears to have been a man of strong individuality, holding positive and decided views regarding things spiritual as well as temporal. On a certain Sunday in the fall of some year close to 1733, Col. Ogden, contrary to a rule of the First Church, went into his field and saved his wheat, which was exposed to serious loss from long continued rains. . . . For his daring conduct he was subjected to the discipline of the Church, on account of having violated the sanctity of the Lord's Day, and publicly censured. The Presbytery reversed the decision of the Church, righteously deeming the act of Col. Ogden one of imperative necessity, and tried to pour oil on the troubled waters. It was too late. Around Col. Ogden rallied a considerable body who openly began to declare themselves dissatisfied with the Presbyterian form of Church government.

"A bitter controversy ensued. Col. Ogden carried the matter to the Philadelphia Synod. For several years an animated correspondence took place. . . . 'Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!' Out of this trivial matter sprang the Episcopal Church in Newark, and a conflagration of local feeling which it took nearly half a century to extinguish."

"Whitehead's Contributions to East Jersey History" gives us the manner of raising funds for the building of the church: "In 1758, the provincial government authorized a public lottery to raise money to purchase certain lands from the Indians, and this bad example was immediately seized upon as giving a license to the practice again to an unlimited extent. The year 1759 gave birth to the following schemes:— . . . One for building Trinity Church, Newark, the highest prize $1000; the managers of which were John Schuyler, Josiah Hornblower, Josiah Ogden, Daniel Pierson and Gabriel Ogden." Lotteries became so prevalent, an act of the Legislature of 1748 prohibited the founding of new ones, and required that drawings from those already advertised should be done outside the state; but an act of 1758 favorable to lotteries caused many others to form and operate in all parts of the state.

Col. Josiah Ogden[10], the founder of Trinity Episcopal Church, died in 1763 at a ripe old age, and was buried in the old burying ground. Upon the breaking up of the latter, his tombstone was taken up and placed in the floor of the porch of the church, his brother David's being placed likewise on the opposite side. (See design on p. 52.) The inscription is as follows:

"Here Lyes Interred
Col. Josiah Ogden
Who died May 17th 1763
In the 84th year of his age"

In his will he states, "I give to the rector, church wardens, and vestry of Trinity Church, in Newark, my silver cup or porringer with two handles to the same, for and to the only use of said church."

The New York Gazette of issue Aug. 1, 1763, had this advertisement:

"TO BE SOLD,

"The late Dwelling House of Col. Josiah Ogden, at Newark, being built of Free stone, Two and a half Story high, has six good Rooms and Fire places, besides a kitchen with a Garden and Barn, and also about four Acres of very good Mowing or Pasture land, with an Orchard thereon of choice Fruit lying near said House, which is pleasantly situated at the most publick Landing in Newark, and very suitable for a Storekeeper or Merchant. Whoever inclines to purchase the same, may apply to David Ogden and Isaac Longworth at Newark, and to Dr. Jacob Ogden, of Jamaica, on Long Island, or to either of them who will agree for the same." The New York Mercury of Feb. 20, 1764, again advertises the same property.

Capt. John Ogden[11] was a resident of Newark, N.J. He entered public life very early, and according to the "Newark Town Records" was chosen "Pounder" May 9, 1700; he was then just of age. The minutes of "A Town Meeting held at Newark Sep'tr ye 28th 1714" has this item: "John Ogden is Chosen Constable by Vote, to Execute Such Matters and things as ye Trustees of ye Said Town Shall find Necessary to be Done by Vertue of ye Town Pattent." At Town Meeting, Mar. 11, 1718–19, John Ogden and John Cooper were chosen Freeholders. He and his wife Elizabeth were buried in the old graveyard in Newark.

Elizabeth (Wheeler) Ogden, wife of Capt. John Ogden[11], was dau. of Nathaniel Wheeler, 2d son of Thomas Wheeler, of Milford, Conn. Here Nathaniel was m. June 21, 1665, to Esther, dau. of Henry Bochford, and with his young wife came to Newark, N. J., with the first company, and signed the "agreement" with the Branford Co. He took up residence at the Mountain and lived just long enough to see the "Mountain Society" organized, and to convey to it "a parcil of ground for a burying place," where he was one of the first to be interred. He was b. in 1639, and d. Oct. 4, 1726, in his 87th year; his wife Esther deceased Mar. 14, 1732, at the same age.

56. Phebe Ogden, b. circa 1703; d. 1769; m. David Williams.
57. Jemima Ogden, b. 1709; d. Nov. 26, 1776; m. Daniel Pierson.
58. Thomas Ogden, b. ——; d. 1758; m. Elizabeth ——.

He was a bricklayer by trade, and with his uncle Thomas Ogden[12], worked upon Trinity Church, Newark, N. J., in 1743. Both living in Elizabethtown, N. J., the nephew was called "Thomas Ogden, Junr." "Aug. 5, 1758 Samuel Woodruff, principal creditor of THOMAS OGDEN, JUN^r, late of the Borough of Elizabeth town dec'd, was appointed administrator, the widow having renounced." He is not known to have had children.

59. ELIZABETH OGDEN, b. 1716; d. Nov. 18, 1752; m. JAMES NUTMAN.
60. SARAH OGDEN, b. 1718; d. Feb. 17, 1795; m. ISAAC PIERSON.
61. ISAAC OGDEN, b. Oct. 23, 1722; d. Apr. 9, 1776; m. JANE BLACK.

12. THOMAS OGDEN (David[3], John[1]), b. 1684; d. Nov. 25, 1760; 1st m. DINAH ——, b. 1686; d. Apr. 20, 1731; 2d m. JEAN (Halsted) CLAWSON, b. ——; d. Dec. 8, 1760, in 66th year.

THOMAS OGDEN[12] resided in Elizabethtown, N. J. While he did not seem to accumulate much wealth, and there is not extensive record left of his public life, yet he was a man of ability and integrity, as is evinced in his election to important office in his county. The first mention of his business life concerns his purchase, Jan. 31, 1719, of 8½ acres of land in Elizabethtown of one John Harrison, Esq., of Amboy. On Mar. 13, 1720, THOMAS OGDEN, Joseph Crane, Caleb Ward and Jacob Mitchell were elected road overseers for Essex Co. They laid out a road four rods wide from a stub near the house of Zachariah Crane to a birch tree, thence to Nathaniel and Azariah Crane's corner. One of the "Burnet Papers" bearing date of 1721 has this record: "Effingham Townley, Gentleman, to Ed Vaughan, gent, J. Blanchard Yeoman John Hendricks Yeoman and THOMAS OGDEN Mason, 120 acres of land." Besides the acquisition of land, THOMAS OGDEN is shown to have been a mason or bricklayer. The records of Trinity Church, Newark, under date of 1743–4, reveal the fact that he helped in building that church.

He is frequently named in the court records as having much litigation prior to and after the year 1743.

He was elected Collector for Essex Co. and gave the following receipt: "January 17, 1731, Then Received of Robert Ogden Collector of Eliz'th Town the sum of Sixty nine pounds and Eliven Shillings proclamation money for support of Government and for Licenceses Two pounds and four shillings which makes seventy one pounds and fifteen shillings. It being the full Quota of Elizabeth Town for the year 1731. I say Received pr me

£71-15-0 THO- OGDEN COLLEC^r"

On Jan. 7, 1743–4, he signed a quitclaim to John Clawson, Jr., to all rights in the estate of John Clawson, Sr., deceased. A record of July 9, 1755, states that "THOMAS OGDEN of the borough of Elizabethtown, Bricklayer" gave a bond or note to his son-in-law Thomas Price for £20 5s. and on same date binds himself, his heirs, etc. to also pay Thomas Price £10 2s. 6d.; this latter note was witnessed by Moses Ogden and Thomas Tobin. The former obligation was paid by John Clawson, administrator of THOMAS OGDEN'S[12] estate, in 1761. The following entry concerns the sale of THOMAS OGDEN's effects:

"Feb. ye 27 1761 The sails of the goods of the estait of THOMAS OGDEN Deceased sold at Vandue amounted to thirty nine pounds seventeen shillings and six pence.

"£39–17–6 sold by me the day & year above by me ABRAHAM CLARK"

W. B. Denton, genealogist, says that JEAN (Halsted) CLAWSON 1st m. Caleb Halsted, Sr., of Hempstead, L. I., and was mother of Caleb Halsted, Jr., who m. No. 88, Rebecca Ogden. Letters of administration on estate of Caleb Halsted, Sr., were granted to wid. Jean Halsted, Mar. 26, 1721, at Perth Amboy, N. J. She probably 2d m. John Clawson, on whose estate she took out letters of administration Mar. 24, 1728, at Perth Amboy. It is believed she belonged to Rockland Co., N. Y.

Thomas Ogden[12] and his two wives are interred in the First Pres. Ch. yard at Elizabeth, N. J.

CHILDREN—First Marriage (Chart 1):

62. David Ogden, b. 1712; d. Apr. 16, 1777; m. Anne Burwell.
63. Thomas Ogden, b. twin, 1712; d. Apr. 20, 1731.
64. Stephen Ogden, b. 1718; d. Jan. 8, 1764; m. Elizabeth Whitaker.
65. Abigail Ogden, b. Apr. 1725; d. Jan. 30, 1802; m. Thomas Price, Jr.
66. Abraham Ogden, b. 1730; d. Aug. 29, 1732.

13. Swaine Ogden (David[3], John[1]), b. circa 1687; d. Apr. 20, 1755; m. May 5, 1711, Mary Ackerman, b. 1688; d. Nov. 24, 1756; dau. of David Ackerman and Hillegondt Ver Planck, his wife.

Swaine Ogden[13] was born in Newark, N. J., in which place his parents had spent all their married life, but he first appears upon record at Hackensack, N. J., where he married a Dutch lady, and where nearly all of his children were born and baptized. The baptismal register of the old Dutch Church at Hackensack would indicate that he returned to Newark or vicinity after his son Nathaniel was baptized in 1722. Four other children were added to the family, the youngest of whom was John, who was baptized at the Dutch Church in Belleville, a suburb of Newark, in 1729. The records of 1727 speak of him as "Swain Ogden of Newark." On May 4th of that year he is sued for £100 by one James Rogers, and gives bond for £200. At the April term of court in Newark, 1729, Swaine Ogden[13] and others were appointed overseers for Newark.

His residence was probably near Orange, as he and his family were buried in the old cemetery in that place. This leads us to the record of a very sad experience of that early pioneer day, related in "Wick's History of the Oranges." "A fearful pestilence," believed to be identical with the diphtheria of our day, made its appearance at Kingston, New Hampshire, during a cold, wet season in the month of May, and was peculiarly fatal to children During that year and the following one, it spread southward through Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey, "almost stripping the country of children." Of the first forty cases, none recovered. The ravages of the dread disease in New Jersey during 1735 brought untold sorrow to the homes of the settlers, and a mute tombstone in the old parish graveyard of Orange bears this sad inscription:

"Mary Dec'd April ye 7, aged 9 years
Sarah Dec'd April ye 9, aged 11 years
John Dec'd April ye 13, aged 6 years 1735 Ye children of Swain and Mary Ogden
Memento mori"

In the "Book of Surveys" at Perth Amboy, N. J., we find the following entry of land purchases: "Swain Ogden & Lemuel Ward, March 14 1742–3 buy of John Burnet of the city of Perth Amboy Esq. for £42–2–4 117 acres of land to be surveyed in any unappropriated part of said Burnets warrant for 2721 acres from the Proprietors." Again:

"Samuel Ward of Newark, N.J. Gent. to Swain Ogden of the Town County & State aforesaid Yeoman.

"Land on western side of the Mountain, being a part of that land commonly called the Indian Purchase containing one equal quarter of a lott, Dividend or right, the purchase of which was made by Mrs Elizabeth Ogden wid. & Relict of David Ogden late of Newark decased.

"Dated Dec. 31 1750

"Witnessed by Gershom Mott & Simion Huntington"

SWAINE OGDEN[13] signed a quitclaim to the latter property to Ebenezer Lindsley, Jan. 21, 1750–1.

Of the Freeholders for Essex Co. in 1755, among those from Newark appear the following names: SWAIN, Samuel, Josiah, Uzal Esq., David Esq., John Esq., and John Ogden.

MARY ACKERMAN, wife of SWAINE OGDEN[13], belonged to a Dutch family, and in that language was called "Maritie" (or "Marytje") "Ackermans." She was dau. of "Davidt Ackermans" and "Hillegondt Ver Planck." The baptismal register of the old Dutch church of Hackensack, N. J., records her husband's name as "Swaen Hockdon" and "Swaen Ockdon." Their fourth child is called "Hillegondt," the Dutch for our "Huldah."

Their tombstones in the old cemetery at Orange, corner Main and Scotland streets, bear the following epitaphs:

"Here lies ye Body of SWAIN OGDEN who died April 20th 1755
In ye 68th year

"Here lies ye Body of

75. JOHN OGDEN, bap. Jan. 18, 1729; d. Apr. 13, 1735.

14. JONATHAN OGDEN, 2D (Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. circa 1676; d. before June 10, 1731; m. —— ELIZABETH ——.

JONATHAN OGDEN, 2D[14], is named in "N. J. Colonial Documents" as one of the many who petitioned the king, probably in 1696, for greater protection from the East Jersey Proprietors. He had then about attained his majority; he was a resident of Elizabethtown, N. J., and occupied a house owned by his father, Jonathan Ogden, Sr.[4]

At a Court of Sessions or County Court held at Newark "for ye County of Essex on Tuesday ye Tenth day of September 1700," a "Rabbell of Elizabeth Towne" consisting of about sixty horsemen appeared and broke up the court. They pulled the judge from the bench, tore the wig from his head and otherwise maltreated him, using violence likewise upon the other court and county officers. They then liberated a prisoner who was on trial for bastardy. One of the offenders was JONATHAN OGDEN, 2D[14], although his name does not appear among those indicted by the grand jury; also his uncle Capt. Benjamin Ogden[6], and the latter's son Benjamin Ogden, Jr.[21] The names of the rioters were presented to the grand jury Sept. 12, 1700, but nothing is known of the penalty inflicted upon those found guilty. One of the grand jurors was Capt. David Ogden[9].

JONATHAN OGDEN, 2D[14], was one of the petitioners to the king asking to be taken under his direct government, should the Proprietors not appoint a suitable person as Governor. This petition was transmitted by Mr. R. Yard, Secretary of the Lords Justices, July 17, 1701

The date of JONATHAN OGDEN, 2D'S[14], death is not known, but in his father Jonathan's[4] will, made July 2, 1731, land is disposed of "southward of my dwelling house wherein my son JONATHAN OGDEN Deceased Dwelt whilst living."

Nothing is known of the parentage of his wife ELIZABETH.

76. JONATHAN OGDEN, 3D, b. ——; d. ——; m. ——.

Nothing more is known of him, except that he had a son JONATHAN, 4TH, and other children.

77. JOHN OGDEN, b. Nov. 22, 1700; d. Nov. 15, 1780; m. MARY OSBORN.

15. SAMUEL OGDEN (Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. 1678; d. 1715; 1st m. RACHEL GARDINER, dau. of ———; 2d m. Sept. 10, 1707, JOHANNA SCHELLINX, b. Dec. 7, 1689; d. Sept. 13, 1775, dau. of Abraham Schellinx and Johanna Hedges, his wife.

SAMUEL OGDEN[15] was a resident of Elizabethtown, N. J., where he was born, but, as he married his second wife at Easthampton, L. I., he may have remained there a short time. In 1711 we find him again in Elizabethtown, and an "Overseer of the Highways;" in 1712 he was made Constable. He died aged 35, having made his will Nov. 26, 1714, which was proved Feb. 10, 1714–15.

JOHANNA SCHELLINX, 2d wife of SAMUEL OGDEN[15], was dau. of Abraham Schellinx (now called "Schellinger"), who was Supervisor of East Hampton, L. I., during 1699–1700.

JOHANNA 2d m. Samuel Williams, who died Feb., 1759.

ROBERT OGDEN[16] was born at Elizabethtown, N. J., and was a resident of that place. He was a representative man in civil and ecclesiastical affairs, "A Pillar in both Church & State."

The first time his name appears in the records is in the year 1729. The "Town Books" containing surveys of lands and minutes of Town Meetings for over fifty years mysteriously disappeared about 1718 or 1719, the earliest statement of the loss being found in the initial entry of "Town Book B." under date of Aug. 2, 1720. At that time it was "By A free And unanimous Agreement of the freehold[rs] afores[d] Concluded and Resolved; That This present Book Now Is And Shall Be Improved To be, A book of Records, for the use and behoof of the freeholders of Elizabeth Town Afores[d], And for no Other use whatsoever." More than nine years later, Nov. 18, 1729, this agreement was ratified by the associates and their successors, some ninety in number, ROBERT OGDEN[16] being one of them.

ROBERT OGDEN[16] was made Collector for Essex Co., Feb. 16, 1720–1.

In "Salisbury" occurs an important entry concerning his church relationship: "For the first time the church [First Presbyterian of Elizabethtown] was represented in the Synod of 1721 by one of their Elders, ROBERT OGDEN, son of Deacon Jonathan and grandson of 'old John Ogden.'"

ROBERT OGDEN[16] made his will Feb. 8, 1731, and a codicil added Mar. 19, 1733, provides for his unborn child (Sarah). The will was proved Dec. 6, 1733.

The epitaph upon his tombstone, and those of his wife Hannah and dau. Phebe[84] in the First Presbyterian churchyard, Elizabeth, are as follows:

"Here ly the

HANNAH (Crane) OGDEN, 1st wife of Robert Ogden[16], was of Newark, N.J., and probably dau. of Jasper Crane, "who was one of the first settlers of New Haven, Conn., in 1639, was at Branford in 1652 and at Newark in 1667. The family is quite ancient and honorable."

PHEBE (Roberts, Baldwin) OGDEN bore two children to her husb. Jonathan Baldwin, viz. Joanna Baldwin, who m. Isaac Nutman, and Matthias Baldwin, who m. Polly Ross. After the death of Robert Ogden[16], by whom she had three children, she m. Edward Sarles, without further issue.

The "Tuttle Genealogy," p. 318, has the following biographical mention of COL. JOSEPH TUTTLE, husb. of Abigail Ogden[44]:

"Joseph Tuttle, b. Sept. 2, 1698; at Newark, N. J. appt. supervisor of highways, March 8, 1725; clerk for entering strays, March 9, 1730; one of the overseers of the poor and fence viewer; bought lands in Hanover, 1724–25, and removed there some years later. In 1734 he bought a tract of 1,250 acres at Hanover Neck, on the Whippany and Passaic rivers, near the confluence. A deed, supposed to be of this property, dated Jan. 22, 1733–34, given by John and Samuel Johnson to JOSEPH TUTTLE, blacksmith. He was a Justice of the Peace; a Colonel of militia, and a dea. of the chh. He was a widower and blind some years before his death, Nov. 3, 1789, aged 91 yrs. His monument, an altar stone in the Whippany graveyard, has an inscription composed by the Rev. Dr. Green:

"'The tender names of father, husband, friend,
And neighbor kind, did through his life extend;
In church and state he virtuous honor gain'd,
And all his offices with truth sustained.
As deacon, elder, colonel, judge, he shone,
While heaven was his hope, his rest, his home.
Laden'd with honours usefulness & years,
He drop'd this clay, & with ye saints appears.'"

His wife's monument (a plain slab) says: "Here Lyes ye Body of mrs Abigail Tuttle wife of Coll Joseph Tuttle Dec'd Augst ye 26 1751 Aged About 50 years."

The earliest record of Uzal Ogden[45] is under date of Apr. 15, 1740, at which time he unites with brothers John[46] and David[47] in the purchase of property afterward known as the Ringwood Iron Works or mines in Sussex Co., N. J. The first item in Trinity Church (Newark) records bears date Mar. 21, 1742–3: "Trinity Church to Uzal Ogden Dr. To one gallon rum for the stone diggers £0–4–." He appears to have furnished all the labor and material, or else was treasurer of the funds.

From 1743 to 1762 he is named in Essex Co. court minutes as Justice or County Judge. In 1748 he is one of a committee to grant pardon to rebels. In 1755 Gov. Belcher issued a proclamation granting friendly Indians of the province the privilege of acknowledging their allegiance to the English government and of being protected by His Majesty's subjects. They were to be enrolled by a magistrate for each county, given a certificate, and be designated by wearing a red ribbon on the head for protection. Uzal Ogden[45] was appointed magistrate for Essex Co. to register such Indians as should apply.

He was appointed, Feb. 16, 1759, administrator of estate of John Bruen, Jr. At the April term of court, 1763, he was appointed Sheriff of Essex Co. In 1765 he and brother John[46] sold the Ringwood Mines to Samuel Gouverneur. In 1778 is a Warden of Trinity Church, Newark, and Apr. 5, of following year, is requested to write his son, Rev. Dr. Uzal[138], to preach in Trinity Church. His death and burial are not recorded, though they probably occurred in Newark, N. J.

CATHARINE (OGDEN) LONGWORTH

No. 51

46. JUDGE JOHN OGDEN (David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. circa 1709; d. Feb. 14, 1795, in 87th year; m. HANNAH SAYER, b. 1709; d. Oct. 20, 1757, aged 48; dau. of Jonathan Sayer.

JUDGE JOHN OGDEN[46] is known as "John Ogden of Newark," where he was a prominent lawyer and judge, and in the Essex County court minutes is continuously mentioned from 1742 to 1776 as Justice, Judge, etc.

On Apr. 15, 1740, he joined with his uncle Josiah[10] and brothers Uzal[45] and David[47] in the purchase of the Ringwood property, forming the Ringwood Mining Company; he sold his interest to Samuel Gouverneur in 1765.

He was greatly hated and persecuted by the English and Tories during the Revolutionary War, and "Atkinson's Hist. Newark" thus speaks of their treatment of him: "Justice John Ogden, whom you know, had his house robbed of every thing they could carry away. They ripped open his beds, broke his desk to pieces, and destroyed a great number of important papers, deeds, wills, etc. belonging to himself and others; and the more he entreated them to desist from such unprofitable and pernicious waste, the more outrageous they were. They hauled a sick son out of his bed, whose life had been despaired of some time, and grossly abused him, threatening him with death in a variety of forms."

JOHN OGDEN[46] and his wife were buried in the old churchyard on Broad street, Newark, N. J.; the epitaphs were copied in "Conger's Notes," the old tombstones being removed to Fairmount Cemetery and buried under the monument erected to commemorate the removal.

The "Newark Records" indicate that DAVID OGDEN, 3D[47], was a lawyer in Newark, and was called "DAVID OGDEN, ESQ." He was buried in the old graveyard on Broad street,

Newark, and his gravestone was one of the many buried under the monument erected in Fairmount Cemetery to commemorate the removal. The inscriptions were upon removal copied by city authority; the only one bearing the name Ogden was that of David[45], which inscription is entered as No. 93 and reads thus:

"Here lies enterr'd the body of David Ogden Esq who died
the 28 day of January A.D. 1750
in the 40th year of his age."

His widow CATHARINE OGDEN[51] 2d m. Feb. 19, 1761, ISAAC LONGWORTH, 2d son of Thomas and Dorcas Longworth, of Newark, N. J. It is said that Thomas Longworth was born in England, and died in Newark, Sept. 4, 1747, aged 56 years, having held several town offices.

ISAAC LONGWORTH 1st m. Sarah ——, who d. Jan. 19, 1754, aged 23 years; 2d m. CATHARINE OGDEN[51], by whom it is said there were two sons and a daughter. She appears to have been living with her son Jacob Ogden[152] in Hartford, Conn., at the time of her death.

In 1755, April term of court, Newark, he is a witness in a suit—Catharine Ogden vs. Nathaniel Ward. In 1759, Apr. 12, he enlists in Capt. Richard Smith's Co. N. Y. Provincial troops, at N. Y. City; gives his birthplace as Newark, his age 19, and occupation, hatter. May 9, 1760, he enlists in Capt. Abraham Deforest's Co. as Sergeant, and gives his age as 21. Apr. 6, 1761, he is commissioned Lieutenant in same company.

In 1761 CALEB OGDEN[149] is a freeman in New York City, a hatter, P. (The letter "P" indicates he had taken out license to trade and had paid the fee.) In June 1763 and Feb. 1764 there are charges in William Graham's account book against CALEB OGDEN, each being for a suit of clothes. In 1764 he and William King are bondsmen (tavern license) for Peter Calmus. In 1765 he is overseer of the poor in Newark, N. J.

Judge David Ogden[50] was a man of rare ability and attainment, of high scholarship and undoubted integrity of character, and a prominent leader of men. His activities occurred in troublous times and the full display of his powers was somewhat checked by them, yet he stands above his fellows in intrinsic worth and honesty of purpose. There appears to be no official record of his birth and death, but they may be nearly arrived at by his will, etc. He was born at Newark, N. J., 1707; and died at Flushing, Queens Co., N. Y., between May 19, 1798 (date of will) and Aug. 6 of same year, when will was proved.

"Atkinson Hist. of Newark," after speaking of the great questions then rocking the cradle of American Independence, goes on to say: "The attitude of one family in particular commanded attention. This was the rich, powerful, influential and cultured Ogden family The head of the family was Judge David Ogden, son of Colonel Josiah Ogden. Judge Ogden was educated at Yale College, graduating with high honors in 1728, and apart from his wealth, which in those days was quite large, commanded wide-spread influence in the Province. He had long been a member of his Majesty's Council and was also for many years a Justice of the Supreme Court. He espoused the cause of King George. What happened after the outbreak of hostilities is described by the Judge himself in a document of rare merit printed in London in 1784 and entitled 'The Claim of David Ogden, Esq.' Surely it is due to the memory of these distinguished American Loyalists to recollect that their motives were beyond doubt anything but low—were in fact the very opposite of mean, and as they appear to us through the microscope of a century they represent only an honorable high-toned and exalted sentiment."

Allying himself with the Loyalist side during the Revolutionary War, JUDGE DAVID OGDEN[50] naturally awakened the antipathy of the Continental party and was subjected to many indignities and persecutions. The "New York Historical Collections" for 1875 has the following letter from Gen. Pattison to Lieut. Hills:

"To Lieutenant Hills

"Sir "New York, May 24, 1780.

"A Complaint having been made to Major Gen'l Pattison of your having very ill treated Mr Ogden a Gentleman & Refugee, who Fled upon a Principle of Loyalty from the Province of New Jersey: the General directs me to say that he is convinced you could not have known the Rank and Character of the Man you so attacked, but upon being informed that he is one of the King's Council for the Province of New Jersey, as well as one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, and added to this, a most respectable Character in Private Life, the General doubts not that you will make him such an apology as one Gentleman ought to do to another, and thereby prevent this matter being brought to a more disagreeable Issue. I am, Sir &c

[Signed by Aide-de-Camp, Stephen Payne Adye] S. P. A.

"To Lieut Hills"

A more complete account of JUDGE DAVID OGDEN'S[50] career comes from "The Judicial and Civil Hist. of N. J." and is as follows:

"It is a fact which has perhaps escaped the attention of historians, that some of the strongest and ablest men in the profession of the law became devoted loyalists. DAVID OGDEN was one of these, and he embraced the side of the King of England from pure convictions of duty, for he was an honest man, and his decisions for his own individual guidance were based upon what he deemed just and right. . . .

"DAVID OGDEN was born at Newark, very early in the eighteenth century. He was educated at Yale, where he was matriculated in 1728. He then read law in New York, and after completing his studies began practice in Newark. He was not a dazzling nor a brilliant man, and could not be called a genius, but he had better qualifications than those generally accompanying genius, to equip him for a lawyer's life. He was clear-headed, of uncommon good sense, of unfailing judgment, and added to these excellent aids to success in the legal profession, the most untiring industry, unsurpassed by any of his contemporaries at the bar. Very soon, he was the acknowledged leader of the profession in New Jersey. He received an appointment to the bench, as associate justice, in 1772. No man of his time was better equipped than he for the performance of the duties of this office. His inexhaustible stores of learning, his clear perception and honesty of purpose, were qualifications which admirably fitted him for the office of judge. But he could not have had a fair opportunity of displaying his capability for the position. He was appointed in troublous times, at a period when it must have been apparent to the most casual observer that the issue between the colonies and England must soon be submitted to the arbitrament of the sword. When the lawyers refused to purchase stamps, he united with them in their action; but he was a loyalist and an honest one. When hostilities actually began and it was not safe for him longer to remain in the place of his birth, he removed to New York and resided there during the war. His convictions of duty drove him to decided action, and he devoted all the energies of his nature to the success of the cause he honestly believed deserved to be successful, and never despaired until the last moment, of its final triumph. He busied himself most industriously with his pen. Among his productions was one which provided for a plan for the government of the colonies after their submission, which, as he expressed it, 'was certain and soon to happen, if proper measures were not neglected.' His plan was quite complex, but it is somewhat amusing to notice that it embraced perfect self-government by the colonies through a parliament and officers chosen by the colonists, with power of taxation vested only in the Continental Parliament. Among other propositions made by Mr. Ogden was the creation of Barons from among the freeholders and inhabitants of the colonies, who were to compose a house of Peers for the American Parliament. Perhaps David Ogden might have had in his mind one inhabitant of the provinces who, he thought, would make an excellent member of the proposed House of Lords and who ought to be made a Baron.

"After the independence of the Republic was acknowledged by the British government, Mr. Ogden went to England and became agent for the loyalists in the prosecution of their claims for compensation for losses they had sustained by their adherence to the King. He returned from England in 1790, and resided in Long Island until his death, which occurred in 1800."

The date of JUDGE DAVID OGDEN'S[50] death given above is incorrect, as his will made May 19, 1798, was proved Aug. 6 of same year. In this will he gives son Nicholas[181] a farm at Flushing, "if his reputation for Patriotism is good enough for him to take and hold it;" if not, it is to go in trust to Aaron Burr, Richard Varick, Peter Kemble, of New York, and Richard Stockton of Princeton, N. J. He speaks of unsettled affairs between him and his sons Abraham[176] and Samuel[178], which he had already attempted to settle by arbitration. Mention is made of a bond or obligation he holds against Samuel[178], given about 1770, for the purchase of the Boonton estate in Morris Co., N. J.; he advises his executors to wait one month for payment of same, then proceed to collect by law. He gives daughter Sarah (Ogden) Hoffman[175] his post-chaise and harness, and his son Isaac[174] $500. The executors are Aaron Burr, Richard Varick, Richard Stockton, and son Nicholas Ogden[181].

GERTRUDE (Gouverneur) OGDEN, wife of Judge David Ogden[50], was a member of the Gouverneur family of New York. In the old Gouverneur Bible her birth is thus recorded: "In the year of our Lord 1716, on the 5th of March, on Tuesday morning at six o'clock, was born our sixth daughter and was called Gertrude and was baptized by the Rev. Du Bois. Godfather Philip Schuyler. Godmother [Anne] Elizabeth Schuyler [née Staats, maternal aunt of the child]."

The following record found elsewhere states:

"New York Jan 15. On the 30th Ultimo Dec. 1775, at Newark in New Jersey, Mrs Ogden, the wife of the Hon. David Ogden Esq. departed this life in the 60th year of her Age, after a painful and lingering Illness; which she bore with that Fortitude and Resignation which truly characterize the good Christian; patiently waiting for that happy period which would end her sorrows. Complaisance with strict Sincerity,—Humility without meanness,—Beneficence without Ostentation,—Devoutness without Superstition,—and in the several duties of Wife and Parent, Tenderness and Affection, were amiable Qualities which rendered her worthy of the Regard and Esteem of her Husband, Children, and Acquaintance and justly implanted in each one a lasting Reverence to her Memory."

The "Newark Town Records," Mar. 8, 1736–7, makes this mention of James Banks: "The feed of the burying Place was sold to James Banks, for the insuing Year for 40 s. to be paid to the support of the Poor, except so much as is necessary to repair the Fence of s'd burying Place."

March 5, 1749: "The vote was renewed for preserving the Wood on the Parsonage Land, which was passed March 10th 1746–7." James Banks is one of several "to take Care of said wood and prosecute Offenders."

53. Dr. Jacob Ogden (Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. Newark, N. J., circa 1722; d. Jamaica, Long Id., N. Y., Sunday, Sept. 3, 1780, in 59th year; m. —— Elizabeth Bradford, dau. of William Bradford and Sytje Santford, his wife.

Dr. Jacob Ogden[53] was a celebrated physician of his time. After receiving his medical education, he removed to Jamaica, Long Island, where he gained an extensive practice that continued until his death in 1780, which occurred by accident through his horse taking fright. He is mentioned in several medical works as a leader in his profession; he became widely known by his letters on "Malignant sore throat distemper," published about 1764, the disease then being prevalent on Long Island and elsewhere, and proving very mortal.

Dr. Francis said of him that "when medicine was obscured by prejudice, encumbered by forms and shrouded in mystery, he thought and acted for himself and proved by a long course of success that he was not only an original thinker, but a sagacious observer."

When General Woodhull was mortally wounded in Sept. 1776 by the sabres of the British light horse, he was carried to a tavern in Jamaica, where Dr. Ogden and his pupil Minema, afterward his successor, were refused permission to dress his wounds, a British surgeon being afterward called in. For thirty years after Dr. Jacob Ogden's[53] death he was remembered in Jamaica, and his name was spoken with love and veneration.

(Capt. James Nutman, Jr., 2d m. Lydia Rogers, wid. of a Mr. Crane, and by her had Elizabeth, Lydia, Keziah, and Isaac Nutman.)

Capt. James Nutman, Jr., husb. of Elizabeth Ogden[59], was a man of wide experience and took much interest in public affairs. In Nov., 1736, he was one of a committee "to agree with Mr. Burr concerning the work of the Ministry among us." On Mar. 9, 1756, he and others were a committee to inspect "Encroachments on the Parsonage." The proprietors of East New Jersey had originally granted several lots of land for the use of a parsonage, there being but one organized religious society at the time. Afterward there were three societies, and on Mar. 10, 1761, a committee was appointed to take proper steps toward a division of said parsonage lands among the three church societies, JAMES NUTMAN, JR., being one of the committee. But it seems the matter was not adjusted till seven years later—Mar. 8, 1768, when it was voted by a large majority that the parsonage lands in Newark should be divided between the three congregations, the First Presbyterian Church, the Church of England, and the Mountain Society. The trustees of the First Presbyterian Church, being present, forbid meddling with the parsonage lands, as they claimed said lands as their exclusive property, but a committee was appointed to settle the difficulty, Thomas Longworth and CAPT. JAMES NUTMAN, JR., being the members for the Church of England.

It was voted Mar. 13, 1764, "that the Parsonage Meadow be hired for the ensuing year, Nehemiah Baldwin, JAMES NUTMAN, JR., and Amos Harrison Esq'rs to receive the Money, equally to be paid to the Priests of said Town."

ISAAC OGDEN[61] was one of the subscribers to the first church at Rockaway, Morris Co., N. J. The subscription paper is quite a curiosity, and is thus headed: "March 2 1758 We the Inhabitence of rockaway pigenhil and upper inhabetence at the colonals forges and places agesant being met together In order to consult together about a place to set a meting hous and being all well agread that the most sutable place for the hol setelments Is upon the small plain a letel above bemans forge which is below the first small brok upon that rode up to Samuel Johnson "and we the subscribers a blig ourselves to pay toward building a house at that place the sums to our names afixed."

Forty persons signed this paper, and the same day another paper was signed by twenty-nine of the aforesaid, which reads: "We the subscribers do by these mannefest It to be our desier to Joyn with pasipaney to call and settel a minnester to have the one half of the preachen at posipaney and the other half at rockaway and each part to be eakwel in payen a minnester."

In the first paper the name is spelled "Isak Ogden" and in the second it is "Isaac Ogden."

He probably removed from Newark, N. J., to Ohio in early life. The records of Franklin Co., Ohio, show that his son Moses[230] lived and died there, leaving numerous descendants.

Stephen Ogden[64] was an agriculturist and lived at Basking Ridge, Somerset Co., N. J. The town was so named from the large number of cavalry horses that could be seen basking in the sun on the ridge when the Revolutionary army was quartered at Morristown, near by. He was a freeholder in Somerset Co. July 17, 1753, but little else is known of him. He died intestate and his wid. Elizabeth was made administratrix Mar. 20, 1764.

Elizabeth (Whitaker) Ogden, w. of Stephen Ogden[64], 2d m. Jan. 21, 1768, Samuel Roberts of Barnardstown, N. J., her dau. Elizabeth[242] being married the same day to Dr. Oliver Barnet, of "Barnet Hall."

Thomas Price, Jr., husb. of Abigail Ogden[65], was son of Thomas Price, gr. son of John Price, and gt. gr. son of Benjamin Price, one of the original associates of Elizabeth, N. J. His mother was Mary Rolfe (sometimes called "Ralph"), a dau. of Joseph Rolfe, High Sheriff of Middlesex Co. and a prominent man; he was son of John Rolfe of Cambridge, Mass., and gr. son of Henry Rolfe of Newbury, Mass.

67. Elizabeth Ogden (Swaine[13], David[3], John[1]), bap. Feb. 3, 1712; d. Jan. 10, 1785; m. Nathaniel Condit, b. circa 1703; d. June 23, 1746, aged 43 yrs.; son of Peter Condit and Mary Harrison, his wife, of Orange, N. J.

The "Condit Genealogy" says: "Nathaniel Condit was born at Newark, N. J., about the year 1703. He married Elizabeth Ogden, of Orange, a daughter of Swain Ogden and Mary Ackerman, who was born in 1711, and died January 10, 1785, aged 74 years.

"Very little is known concerning Nathaniel. He lived in Orange, and the homestead is said to have been on Scotland street, near Main. There is no will on record. He died June 23, 1746, at the age of 43 years. Their graves are in the old burying ground, Orange."

68. David Ogden (Swaine[13], David[3], John[1]), bap. May 17, 1714; d. Oct. 19, 1751; m. ——.

We have no direct record of David Ogden's[68] marriage. It is assumed from the fact the Crane Family trace their ancestry back to Joanna Ogden, dau. of David Ogden, of Orange, N. J. His grave is in the old cemetery at Orange, close to that of his father and mother, Swaine and Mary Ogden, with this inscription on the headstone:

"Here lyes ye Body of

SAMUEL OGDEN[69] lived at Middleground, a section so-called near Orange, N. J. He begins his will, dated Oct. 27, 1787, "In the name of God Amen. I Samuel Ogden of Middleground in the County of Essex State of New Jersey." He bequeathed his lands, presumably several small tracts, to his sons, and adds a bequest to his son Swain "if he returns."

(Abraham Ogden's[72] will mentions another dau. named Mary.)

77. John Ogden (Jonathan[14], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Nov. 22, 1700; d. Nov. 15, 1780; m. Oct. 8, 1722, Mary Osborn, b. 1705; d. Apr. 15, 1758.

The above marriage is recorded at East Hampton, L. I. It agrees with record in an old Bible owned by Mrs. Cortland Drake of Mendham, N. J., and which was doubtless the family Bible of "Good Old John[1]." It descended to John[77] through his gr. father Jonathan[4], son of John[1]. On a blank page at the beginning of the Book of Psalms is written "Jonathan Ogden, his book 1697." In another place "John Ogden son of Jonathan Ogden Dec'd His Bible given him by his grandfather Ogden in the year 1724." At the end of Revelations is "Nov. 9 1642, my son [name unreadable] was born by gods providence." This birth-date is probably that of his son Joseph[5],—at all events proving that this rare old Bible printed in 1599 was once the property of John Ogden[1].

It is stated in "Hatfield's Elizabeth" that John Ogden[77] resided in a neighborhood about two miles from Elizabethtown, N. J., called Sodom, and because of his singular piety was familiarly called "Righteous Lot."

The will of John Ogden[77] was made June 6, 1779, and proved Dec. 10, 1780. In it he bequeathed to gr. sons Jonathan and Ezekiel Ogden the property he then occupied and formerly belonging to his brother Jonathan Ogden, dec'd. To dau. Abigail Pierson he gave £100, his silver tankard and one half his silver spoons. To dau. Phebe Magie £100, his silver teapot, milk-pot, and one half his silver spoons. To gr. son Jonathan Ogden his desk (directing that Jonathan give his father's desk to his brother John), his riding-chaise, and one half his wearing apparel. To gr. son Ezekiel Ogden, his clock, one half his wearing apparel and the desk that was his father's, his sword and trammels and andirons in both rooms, and his silver buckles. To gr. children Betsy and Zerviah Ogden, children of his son John, dec'd, £10 each when 18 yrs. of age or when married. He also names gr. son John (not 21 yrs. old), gr. dau's Rebecca Price and Mary Earle, also children of gr. dau. Phebe Mulford, dec'd. His son John's widow was to have one room in the house, pasture for her cow, and wood to burn as long as she remained a widow.

Both JOHN OGDEN[77] and w. MARY (Osborn) OGDEN are buried in First Pres. churchyard, Elizabeth, N. J.

"HERE lies interred

PHEBE (HATFIELD) OGDEN

No 83

Robert Ogden, 2d, the eldest son and second child of Robert Ogden, 1st, and Hannah Crane, his first wife, was born at Elizabeth Town, Oct. 7, 1716. His grandfather and father were large land owners and both occupied prominent positions in the colony. His father was Collector of the County of Essex in 1720 and filled many similar offices. As was truthfully said upon his tombstone, he was "a pillar in both Church and State." He died in 1733, a few months after his own father (Jonathan Ogden), when Robert 2d was but seventeen years old. He left six children by his first marriage and three by the second, all under age.

Robert Ogden, 1st, devised to his son Robert, with other property, "All that house lot of land whereon my father's, Jonathan Ogden, dwelling house now stands.

"Beginning three rods and a half southward of my now dwelling house, and from thence to run easterly over a small rock to Joseph Ogden's fence, from thence southerly to the street and from thence as the street runs to the southwest corner of the said house lot, and from thence northerly as the street runs to the first mentioned place, together with all houses, buildings or other appurtenances and privileges thereunto belonging. (Which said house lot of land and premises is verbally given to me by my father, Jonathan Ogden, and designed by him to be given to me by his last will and testament.) And I also give unto my said son, Robert Ogden, the one-half part or equal moiety of my tanyard, bark house, bark mill, tan-fats, tanner's tools and all other appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining."

This house was on the northeast side of Elizabeth avenue, two blocks east of Broad street, and the tannery property was on the opposite side, running down to the creek.

Robert Ogden, 2d, appears to have enlarged his patrimony by his own ability, obtained an education, for those days a liberal one, and soon took a prominent place in the county and state. He married, when about twenty years of age, Phebe Hatfield, daughter of Matthias Hatfield. She was born Nov. 25, 1720, and died Dec. 22, 1796.

In 1745, when the struggle between the Elizabeth Town settlers and the Board of Proprietors was at its height, Robert Ogden was one of the commissioners appointed to raise money by subscription to carry on the litigation in behalf of the people, while his cousin, David Ogden, of Newark, was the counsel for the Proprietors.

Dec. 24, 1751, he was Recorder of the Borough of Elizabethtown, and this same year he was elected to the 18th Provincial Assembly. In 1755 he was Deputy Secretary of the Council, but soon after was elected to the Assembly in place of John DeHart, and then again elected to the 20th Assembly, serving in the latter as Speaker until he resigned in 1765, in consequence of his action in the first Colonial Congress.

Jan. 27, 1753, Governor Belcher appointed him a Surrogate, and Aug. 14th of the same year, "one of our Clerks in Chancery." He was a great friend of the Governor, and is named in his will as one of his executors. He really settled his estate. In his letter to Andrew Belcher, announcing the death of his father, which occurred Aug. 31, 1757, he says: "Madame Belcher is at my house, being Disconsolate, having Lost the kindest and dearest of Husbands, you have Lost a Tender and an affectionate father, and I have Lost a faithful and unalterable friend."

From 1757, through the French war, and until 1773, his papers show that he was Commissary and Barrack Master for the King's troops.

Aug. 3, 1761, he was commissioned Justice and Judge—he had been a Justice of the "Quorum" since 1755. Dec. 24, 1761, "Robert Ogden Gentleman" was commissioned Clerk of the Court of Essex County, and March 22, 1762, he was commissioned by Gov. Hardy one of the Surrogates of the Orphans' Court of the Province of East New Jersey.

In 1763 and 1766, as Ruling Elder, he attended the Synod of New York and New Jersey.

When the Stamp Act was passed and the people of all the Colonies rose in angry resistance to its operation, Robert Ogden was Speaker of the Assembly. Aug. 24, 1764, he wrote Cortland Skinner, Attorney-General of the Province and a fellow member of the Legislature, inclosing a copy of the communication sent out by the committee of the Massachusetts Representatives, for his perusal and advice. He says: "The affair is Serious and Greatly Concerns all the Colonies to unite and Exert themselves to the utmost to Keep off the Threatening blow, of Imposing Taxes, Duties, etc., so Destructive to the Libertys the Colonies hitherto enjoyed." (N. J. Archives, Vol. IX, p. 449.)

The circular letter of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, signed by the Speaker, recommending a congress of deputies from all the Colonial Assemblies to meet in New York in October, to consult on the present circumstances of the Colonies, was laid before the Assembly of New Jersey, June 20, 1765, on the last day of the session. The members evidently were not ready to act. In a minute made at a later session of the Assembly they say: "This House acknowledges the letter from the Massachusetts Bay: that it was on the last day of the session, some members gone, others uneasy to be at their homes; and do assert, that, the then Speaker (Mr. Ogden) agreed to send, nay urged, that members should be sent to the intended Congress," but when this minute was made their refusal to comply with the recommendation having been condemned by the people, they threw the blame on the Speaker, as follows: "But (the Speaker) changed his opinion upon some advice that was given to him: that this sudden change of his opinion displeased many of the house, who seeing the matter dropped were indifferent about it."

Mr. Ogden, as speaker, replied to the letter of the Massachusetts House and said: "That though they are not without a just Sensibility respecting the late Acts of Parliament affecting the Northern Colonies, yet apprehending, whatever Reasons may be thought proper to be urged against them may be better received after some Time elapses; our Assembly, on that Account, and because the Trade of this Province is insignificant in comparison of others, are unanimously against uniting on the present Occasion. They, however, cannot but wish such other Colonies as think proper to be active, every Success that they can loyally and reasonably desire." (N. J. Arch., Vol. IX, p. 496.)

This action or want of action on the part of the New Jersey representatives was not pleasing to their constituents and evidently not more so to the Speaker. Richard Stockton in a letter to him dated Sept. 13th, 1765 (printed in full on pages 149 and 150, Vol. II of the proceedings of the N. J. Historical Society), says, "They (the representatives of the people) ought to complain constitutionally; they should complain to the King, not to the Parliament whose authority they do not, and ought not to acknowledge. . . . but humbly and sensibly petitioning the King, I think, might be of great service. . . . Suppose you should apply to half a dozen members, and sign a request to the Governor to call you immediately that you may reconsider the propriety of sending deputies to New York."

"On his own authority" Mr. Ogden reconvened the Assembly, summoning the members to meet at Amboy. All the members did not heed this irregular summons. Governor Franklin, in his report of it to the Board of Trade, says: "About 12 of them accordingly met and were prevailed upon to appoint three of their members a committee to go to New York." This assembly appointed as delegates Robert Ogden, Hendrick Fisher and Joseph Borden. The following is a copy of their instructions:

"At a meeting of a large number of the representatives of the colony of New Jersey, at the house of Robert Sproul, October 3d, 1765.

"At the desire of the speaker of the house of representatives as aforesaid; and at the earnest request of many of our constituents, to consider of some method for humbly, loyally and dutifully joining in a petition to his majesty, that he would be graciously pleased to recommend to the Parliament of Great Britain to redress our grievances by repealing several of the last acts of parliament affecting the northern colonies, particularly that called the stamp act.

"Robert Ogden, Esq., Hendrick Fisher, Esq., and Joseph Borden, Esq., were directed to attend at the congress now met at New York, and join the measures there to be concluded, for the purposes aforesaid, and to make report of their proceedings therein, at the next meeting of the general assembly.

"Signed by order, JOHN LAWRENCE."

This first congress of the American Colonies met at New York, October 7th, 1765, four days after the meeting at Amboy. Nine only of the Colonies were represented, but the Assemblies of New Hampshire, Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia wrote that they would agree to whatever was done by the Congress. The three delegates from New Jersey were present. On the 19th, Congress agreed upon a declaration of rights and committees were appointed to draft petitions, one to the King, one to the lords in Parliament, and one to the House of Commons. When they came to sign these addresses a difference of opinion arose. The majority were of the opinion that they should be signed and transmitted by the Congress. Timothy Ruggles of Massachusetts, the speaker of the Congress, and Robert Ogden thought that they should be forwarded by the Assemblies of the different Colonies and they therefore refused to sign them.

This action on the part of Robert Ogden was misconstrued by the people of New Jersey and the popular rage was kindled against him. He was burned in effigy and from being one of the most popular men in the state he became for a time the most hated. Sabin in his "Loyalists," on this slender foundation, has classed him as one of that number. Indignant at this treatment, Mr. Ogden resigned his position as Speaker of the Assembly, and Cortland Skinner was chosen to succeed him. Popular judgment was more than usually at fault in this case. A few years after, while Ogden, his sons and sons-in-law were the most active and zealous patriots in New Jersey, Cortland Skinner was in command of a loyalist regiment making depredations on the people who had honored him.

Mr. Ogden's letter resigning his seat in the Assembly is as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"The present meeting is in consequence of the application of myself and several of the members of this House, to his Excellency, who was pleased at our desire to appoint it. The House have now an opportunity to consider deliberately on the best methods to procure relief from the late Acts of Parliament, an affair of as delicate a nature, and of as much importance, as ever came before the Representatives of this, or any other Colony.

"The gentlemen appointed to attend at the Congress at New York will lay before you the several addresses agreed to there, whereby you may judge whether our joining in the general addresses is so likely to produce an alleviation of the burthens we so justly complain of.

"I was clearly of opinion, that separate addresses from each Colony would have a greater probability of succeeding, and therefore I declined signing them: considering that as a majority of your commissioners had joined therein, the Province would partake of all the benefits resulting from the general addresses, and if this House should not adopt the sentiments of the Congress, they might be at liberty to make a separate application to the Crown.

"I am so unhappy as to find that my conduct, which was the consequence of this opinion, formed on the most deliberate, impartial, and disinterested reasoning on the subject, has been put in an unfavourable light, and has made me the object of too general a resentment; I trust that Providence will, in due time, make the rectitude of my heart, and my inviolable affection to my country, appear in a fair light to the world, and that my sole aim was the happiness of New Jersey. But, as at present, there appears a great dissatisfaction at my conduct, that has spread even among some of my constituents, whom I have served many years in General Assembly, to the utmost of my abilities, I beg leave of the House, to resign my seat in it, whereby my constituents may have an opportunity of sending another person in my room, who may act more agreeable to their present sentiments: though I am well assured, that no person can be found, who will study their welfare more sincerely, nor pursue it with more steadiness and integrity than I have done.

"I thank them for the confidence their frequent elections has shown they placed in me, and which I never abused, and impute it to error in judgment only, to which all men are liable. As I have frequently experienced the good disposition of this House towards me, I hope they will indulge me, by accepting the resignation of my seat in the House, and with ordering this short and true account of my conduct to be entered on their journals."

After his resignation, Mr. Ogden resumed his private business at Elizabethtown, and continued to act as Commissary for the King's troops stationed in New York and New Jersey. When the battle of Lexington occurred and committees of observation and correspondence were formed, he was a member of the committee for Elizabethtown.

In 1776 he was Chairman of the Elizabethtown Committee of Safety. His son, Matthias, was Col. of the 1st N. J. Regt. His sons-in-law, Col. Oliver Spencer and Maj. Francis Barber, and his son, Aaron Ogden, were officers in other New Jersey regiments.

Had Robert Ogden not thought and acted as he did, however, no doubt he would have represented his State in the National Congress, whose members signed the Declaration of Independence.

But Elizabethtown, after the battle of Long Island and occupation of New York and Staten Island by the British, was no longer a safe place of residence for one so prominent as he on the patriot side. In the capture of the British Store Ship, "The Blue Mountain Valley," in January, 1776, he and members of his family had been very active. As Chairman of the Elizabethtown Committee, under date of Feb. 10, 1776, he gave the President of Congress a complete account of the taking of the vessel, which may be found in the Am. Archives, 4 Ser., Vol. 4, page 987.

Two letters, to be found in Haines' "Hardyston Memorial," pages 49 and 50, one written Oct. 7, 1776, to his son-in-law, Maj. Francis Barber, and the other from his son, Col. Matthias Ogden, just after the battle of Princeton, throw light upon his removal first to Morristown and then to Sussex County, and his connection with the army. To Col. Barber he writes:

"We still continue in the old habitation, though almost surrounded by the regulars (British troops). They have been on Staten Island, a month on Long Island, and three weeks in possession of New York, a large part of which is burned to the ground. A very serious part of the story—our troops yesterday evacuated Bergen—carried off the stores and artillery, moved off as many of the inhabitants as could get away, and fired all the wheat and other grain.

"Your mother still seems undetermined whether to stay here by the stuff, or remove to Sussex. A few days will determine her, but perhaps in a few days it may be too late to determine a matter of this importance."

The other letter is as follows:—

"Morris Town, January 6, 1777.

"Honorable Sir: I send you Mr. Lowrey's letter, who, since it was written, has desired me to inform you that the way he does and the method you must take, is to apply to General Washington, who will give a warrant for any sum of money you may apply for necessary for carrying on your commissary department. I am informed there is a complaint here for want of flour, and I think it best you should attend here yourself as soon as possible—where you will receive help from the military by General Washington's order, to take wheat or any other necessary for the army from such persons as have it to spare without distressing their families. General Washington will be here about noon. Forty Waldeckers were brought in yesterday by the militia. The killed, wounded and prisoners of the enemy at Princeton were about 600; our loss of men was about ten or twelve, and of officers six or eight, among which was General Mercer.

"From yours dutifully, M. Ogden.

"To Robert Ogden, Esq., Sussex."

He owned large tracts of land in Sussex, extending from the head of the Walkill to Franklin Furnace, and upon the mountain to the east. He built his house at Ogdensburgh, his wife calling it Sparta, in the hope that there might be inspiration in the name. The name has, however, travelled several miles to the southward and the vicinity of Mr. Ogden's residence is called after him. This house was built of squared logs in 1777, according to a date which was cut upon the chimney. Mr. Chambers, in the Sparta Memorial, says: "It stood across the road on the hill, a little to the south of a spot exactly opposite to the present Hoppaugh residence." One of his descendants wrote of it: "I have often been in the house, but before my advent it was handsomely covered with weather boards and wainscotted and plaistered within. The house was a large one, with a hall running through the center. Four rooms were on a floor and a very large kitchen. My great-grandmother and her sister, Bettie Hatfield, made this house and its surroundings very beautiful. There was a large lawn and garden. Around the lawn were set rose bushes, lilacs and syringas in regular order. The whole country was at that time a dense forest." This house was destroyed by fire in 1845.

Dr. George W. Dubois writes:

"I recently gathered from the ruins a few of the blue colored bricks which originally marked on the outside of the chimney in large figures the date of the erection of the building, viz: 1777. Close by stands the house subsequently built by his son, Robert Ogden, and in which my mother lived until her marriage."

Here took place the celebrated robbery by the gang of cowboys under Claudius Smith, a very graphic description of which is given by Mr. Haines in his "Memorial."

The cowboys ransacked the house of everything valuable, but knowing they were recognized, compelled Mr. Ogden, by threatening to kill him, to take a solemn oath not to divulge who they were or seek their punishment, an oath he religiously observed. An alarm was sounded the next morning, however, and pursuit was made. A silver sugar bowl, which the thieves had dropped, was recovered and is now in the possession of one of the family in Ohio. Other plunder was subsequently recovered. Mr. Ogden afterwards barricaded his doors and windows with two-inch plank and was not again disturbed.

To his Sussex home Mr. Ogden carried with him the religious habits and zeal which had always characterized him. Mr. Chambers in his "Sparta Centennial" says: "In the record of the first meeting held to organize the church of Hardyston, which was the name by which this church was then called, the residence of Robert Ogden, Esq., is spoken of as 'the present and most usual place of meeting of said congregation.' This was Nov. 23, 1786, and it is said by good authority that meetings were held and preaching services conducted from the year 1780. The regular organization was undoubtedly an outgrowth of the godly zeal of the above Robert Ogden and his wife."

Robert Ogden died January 21, 1787, and was buried a little in rear of the meeting-house, then not yet completed. His wife survived her husband and died, as has been stated, December 22, 1796, and was buried beside him in the Sparta churchyard.

On his tombstone is inscribed:

"In public life both in Church and State he filled many important offices with ability and integrity. In his private business he was upright, eminently useful, active and diligent.

He was temperate and humane. A friend to the poor, hospitable and generous. A most faithful, tender and indulgent husband and parent, and above all, his life and conversation from his youth was becoming a professor of religion and a follower of the blessed Jesus."

Upon the tombstone of Mrs. Ogden is inscribed:

"The righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Phoebe Ogden, widow of Robt. Ogden, Esq., and daughter of Matthias Hatfield, Esq., and his wife, Hannah Miller, of Elizabethtown, N. J.

"She adorned the various relationships of daughter, sister, wife and mother, friend and christian, by affection and love, sincerity and intelligence, resignation and charity, meekness and piety in a very eminent degree. During the course of a long life, she was beloved, respected, and honored by an extensive acquaintance and numerous progeny."

Frank C. Ogden, of Elizabeth, N. J., has in his possession letters written by Hannah to her brother Col. Matthias, while the latter was with the Jersey troops at Springfield, N. J. These letters are very patriotic, full of grit and encouragement, telling him not to worry about them at home, and that they kept the horses saddled, ready to flee, should it become necessary. A short time later the family hastily removed to Sussex Co.

318. Elias Ogden, b. Nov. 9, 1763; d. Mar. 31, 1805; m. Mary Anderson.

330. David Ogden, b. Dec. 17, 1766; d. bet. Feb. 12, 1789 (date of will), and Apr. 6, 1789 (will proved).

He studied law and was ready to be admitted to the bar in New Haven, Conn., when he died. There is a family tradition that David's prospects in life were blasted by a hopeless attachment, he being in love with his niece Sarah Edwards. One Peter Dewitt, a witness of the signature of his will, testified, Apr. 16, 1789, that at the time of signature, early in the preceding April, David "appeared to be perfectly rational at that time in his conduct & conversation." The will being such a literary curiosity, a verbatim copy is herewith given:

"In the name of God, sole Governor of all worlds, Jesus Christ the Holy Ghost, the Twelve Apostles, Saints, Thrones, Powers, Virtues, Angels, Archangeles Cherubims, Seraphims,—Amen

"I David Ogden of New Haven in the State of Connecticut being in uncommonly good health, and spirits and in my right mind and Wits,—do in the following manner make this my last Will, & Testament.

"Imprimis. My Body. this mass compound of flesh blood, arteries, bones, cartilages, fibres & God wot not all besides. I commit when dressed in my best suit of black clothes to its deep dark, silent, grave, tis a dismal house I am to dwell in, yea verily a mournful one, therefore the dress for mourning is the most proper one for me, thus let this body be drest for its coffin which I pray be made of sound mahogany wood and not ornamented with brass nails and tin plates telling my name, age or Death. my head will tell things to the inquisitive in the grave; when this mass of corruption is thus equipped let it be borne on the shoulders of 4 sturdy youth to its long home, whom I would should be rewarded for their trouble with a decent pair of gloves each.

"By the way, should Dr Edwards the Sunday next after my exit, conceive either my death or life to merit a sermon, a short sermon, Prayer or a few hymns to be sent up to the throne of an all pitying & merciful God prythee let it be done, and for his trouble and good services in this solemn business give him my best wishes for his welfare accompanied with a compliment of £3.4.0 of N. Y. currency Item. My soul God grant, if I have any or ever had it may wing its flight to Heaven, be placed conspicuously among the stars, fly on the wings of the wind, feed the beasts of the field, the birds of the air, the insects of the earth or the fishes of the azure deep waters. Upon the whole I give my soul to God. Then it is my will & pleasure that a monument worth £10 be erected in the burying ground in New Haven to my memory, the motto & epitaph for this I leave wholly to the discretion of my worthy friend & brother Pierpont Edwards, Esq. To my sister Polly Cozzens Ogden I give grant, bestow and bequeath all my worldly concerns as goods chattels lands tenements & hereditaments which I whilst an inhabitant of this planet was in possession of in Fee simple or otherwise, to her & her heirs forever, she first paying, satisfying & annulling all lawful dues, debts, and demands against the same, also paying to Susan Edwards my lovely niece the sum of £25.0.0 New York money, to be laid out for a mourning dress for her the said Susan by the said Susan. I appoint constitute and make Pierpont Edwards & David Doggett Esq of New Haven & Aaron Ogden Esq of E. T. in New Jersey. Ex of this my last will & Testament.

"Witness my hand & seal. Dated at New Haven this 12th day of February 1789. DAVID OGDEN

PETER DEWITT & ELISHA MILLS."

David Ogden's[87] tombstone in First Pres. ch. yd., Elizabeth, N. J., indicates the high moral worth of the man:

"D. O.
Here lieth in hope of a joyful resurrection. the body of David Ogden who was born Oct 26, O. S. 1726, and who died in the triumphs of faith Nov. 28, N. S.
1801, for 57 years he adorned the Christian profession by a holy & exemplary life; & for 15 years discharged the duties of a Deacon to the first Presbeterian Church in this Town with prudence fidelity & acceptance,

Softly his fainting head he lay
Upon his saviours breast
His saviour kiss'd his soul away
And laid his flesh to rest,"

Dr. Moses Bloomfield was a native of Woodbridge, N. J., and was a man of more than ordinary culture and ability. He was clerk of the Freeholders 1773–1784. He was a fervent patriot, and on May 14, 1777, was made army surgeon in the Continental army, being soon appointed Senior Surgeon of the United States hospitals. He was at the hospital in Princeton in 1778, as the following minutes of the session of the Council of Safety of October 2 will show: "Agreed Dr. Moses Bloomfield be requested to attend the Board to-morrow morning at 8 O'clock with a list of the Physicians, Surgeons and Surgeons' mates attending at Princeton & the number of sick in the hospital then."

At Town Meeting held Mar. 11, 1783, it was "Voated that Moses Blumfield be moderator for the preasant day." He was one of those to whom Governor William Franklin granted a charter for a free school with 100 acres of land for its maintenance, and was appointed by the Governor a trustee of the institution.

Dr. Moses Bloomfield was also one of the charter members of the Presbyterian Church at Woodbridge, the charter being granted by King George, Sept. 8, 1756. He was laid to rest in its burying ground, where a stone bears the following inscription:

"Dr Moses Bloomfield,
40 years Physician and Surgeon in this Town; senior Physician and Surgeon in the Hospitals of the United States; Representative in the provincial Congress and General Assembly; an upright Magistrate; Elder of the Presbyterian Church, &c. Born
December the 4th, 1729, died Aut.
the 14th 1791, in his 63d year."

CHILDREN (Chart 9):

349. Gov. Joseph Bloomfield, b. 1755; d. Oct. 3, 1825; m. Mary McIlvaine, b. ——; d. 1818; dau. of Dr. William McIlvaine.

Gov. Joseph Bloomfield[349] was born at Woodbridge, Middlesex Co., N. J. He was educated in the schools of the time, and entered the office of Cortlandt Skinner, at one time Attorney General of the State, and an eminent lawyer. Mr. Bloomfield was licensed in 1775 and commenced the practice of his legal profession in Bridgeton, N. J. He soon joined the Continental army and rose to the rank of Captain of the Third N. J. Regt., and remained in active service until 1778. "The Judicial and Civil Hist. of N. J." states: "His services during the Revolutionary war were of a distinguished character, but one of the duties which he was called upon to perform must have been very distasteful to him. His former preceptor, Cortlandt Skinner, was at one time favorable to the cause of the colonies, but later on he changed his course and became a Royalist, still retaining his office of Attorney General of this State. A letter which he wrote to his brother, a Lieutenant Colonel in the British army, was intercepted and orders given for his arrest. Capt. Bloomfield was deputed to perform that service, but fortunately for him, certainly for the District Attorney, Skinner had, in some manner, received an intimation of his intended arrest and had left the State."

While in the army, Capt. Bloomfield was appointed Judge Advocate of that part of it detailed for service in the Northern Colonies. He left the active service in 1778, and became Clerk of the Assembly. When William Patterson resigned his office of Attorney General, Joseph Bloomfield[349] succeeded him. In ~~1781~~ 1801, he was elected Governor as a Republican over Howell, known as a Federalist, and held the office until 1812, with the exception of the year 1802, when there was a tie in the vote for that office and no election. He was succeeded in 1812 by Gov. Aaron Ogden[315]. He served in the War of 1812 as Brig. General.

"Joseph Bloomfield's[349] action as Chancellor cannot be appreciated, as there is no record of any of his decisions. The business in the Court of Chancery increased materially during his term of office, and some few of his opinions were reported several years after his retirement. He was undoubtedly a man of considerable ability, of unquestionable probity, and of great benevolence."

Gov. JOSEPH BLOOMFIELD

He became successively Vice-President and President of the Society of the Cincinnati. Gov. BLOOMFIELD[349] took a very active interest in public affairs, not only in politics, but in many benevolent associations. "He was always a prominent citizen in whatever community he lived, and his influence was ever exerted for the right. A singular circumstance is related of him, in connection with his office as Chancellor. When he first took his seat, it is reported that he requested that he should not be addressed by the title of 'Your Excellency.' A very eccentric lawyer was then a practitioner in the court, and with great solemnity addressed the Chancellor almost immediately after this announcement, in these words: 'May it please your Excellency: Your Excellency's predecessors were addressed by the title of Excellency, and if your Excellency pleases, the proper title of the Governor of the State was and is, Your Excellency. I humbly pray, therefore, on my own behalf, and on the behalf of the bar generally that we may be permitted by your Excellency's leave, to address your Excellency when sitting in the High Court of Chancery, by the ancient title of Your Excellency.' There was no further demur, after this, on the part of the Governor, as to the mode in which he should be addressed. He was twice elected a member of Congress, and died in 1825." Bloomfield, N. J., was named in his honor in 1796. GOVERNOR BLOOMFIELD[349] and wife MARY (McIlvaine) BLOOMFIELD are not known to have had issue.

"Dickinson's Records" furnish the following facts concerning LEWIS OGDEN[132], except in matter of birth. He was born in Newark, N. J., and graduated at Princeton in 1753. His diploma, now in the possession of Charles F. Southmayd, Esq., is signed by Aaron Burr, President, father of Vice-President Aaron Burr. He was a resident of Newark, and was Clerk of the Prerogative Court from about 1765 to 1775.

The Provincial Congress of New Jersey met at Burlington, N. J., on June 10, 1776. The first question debated at this meeting was whether the colony should declare its independence. This was determined by a vote of 50 to 7. On June 24 a committee was formed to draft a constitution; a report was made two days later, and on July 2 the organic law was adopted. "The committee was a very able one; among its members were John Cleves Symmes, afterwards one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and Jonathan D. Sergeant, both able lawyers. The Chairman and Silas Condit represented Morris County; John Cooper came from Gloucester; Jonathan D. Sergeant, from Somerset; LEWIS OGDEN, from Essex; Jonathan Elmer, from Cumberland; Elijah Hughes, from Cape May; John Cowenhoven, from Monmouth; and James Dick, from Salem."—"Judicial and Civil Hist. of N. J."

In 1786 LEWIS OGDEN[132] removed to the city of New York, where he and Peter Hill of Newark bought five blocks at public sale, being a part of the old De Lancey farm, east of Division street and south of Grand street. He was president of the St. Cecelia Society from about 1790 to time of his death in 1798.

The Rev. Dr. Uzal Ogden[138] was a man of excellent parts, of ripe scholarship and broad sympathies. He was graduated at Princeton College in 1762. In 1770 he prepared for holy orders, and in the summer of 1773 went to England and was ordained Deacon and Priest by the Bishop of London, at Fulham Palace, Sept. 21, 1773. Upon his return to New Jersey he entered upon missionary work in Sussex Co., where in 1776 he married Mary Gouverneur.

On Easter Monday, Apr. 5, 1779, it was unanimously agreed that Uzal Ogden[45], Warden of Trinity Ch., Newark, write to his son Rev. Uzal Ogden, "and desire him to visit the Parish at Newark & Second River and confer with them respecting his Preaching to them & administering the Sacraments at certain times as shall be agreed upon."

On Aug. 2, 1784, Rev. Uzal Ogden met with the Vestry of Trinity Ch., Newark, and St. John's Ch., Elizabethtown, and proposed to preach in Trinity Ch., New York, 17 Sundays in the year, 17 Sundays in St. John's Ch., Elizabethtown, and 17 Sundays in Trinity Ch., Newark; one Sunday to be devoted to the church of Sussex. Each of the two churches to pay him in quarterly payments £66–13–4 N. Y. currency, exclusive of fees of office. His offer was unanimously accepted. Wharton Dickinson says he was assistant rector at Old Trinity, New York, from the above year to 1788, when he was called to the rectorship of Trinity Ch., Newark, N. J., and the following year to that of St. John's, Elizabeth, N. J., serving both parishes jointly until 1805.

In 1792 Rev. Uzal, Abraham and Moses Ogden were connected with the rebuilding of the Academy in Newark that had been burned. At a meeting of the Academy officers in Dec. 1794 it was resolved that Rev. Uzal Ogden be empowered to sell the negro man James, donated by Mr. Watts to the Academy, for as much money as the negro would command. It is evident that Rev. Uzal owned slaves and land, and the records facetiously state that the slaves raised corn, the hogs ate the corn, and in turn the slaves ate the hogs, leaving small profit for the master.

During his ministry he became afflicted with throat trouble that so impaired his voice one half of his congregation were unable to hear him. This occasioned serious disaffection and discussion, and at a meeting held June 4, 1803, it was resolved that they recommend to the Vestry and Wardens that Dr. Ogden be removed and another rector be called to his place. The records state "that in making this recommendation we do not intend to reflect upon the conduct of Doct. Ogden." All voted for the resolution except Moses and Charles Ogden, and after a lively discussion it was agreed to offer Dr. Ogden a pension for life of $250 a year or £500 in five annual installments if he would deliver up the church property of every kind in his possession.

In 1798 he received the degree of D.D. from Princeton, and was also elected first Bishop of New Jersey, but the general convention refused to ratify the election, owing to serious differences between Dr. Ogden and his parishioners on questions of doctrine.

ORDINATION PARCHMENT OF REV. UZAL OGDEN, D.D.

Granted by Bishop of London, Sept. 21, 1773

He withdrew from the Prot. Epis. Ch. in 1805 and united with the Presbyterian Ch. but without a charge. He was a man of advanced spiritual attainments, and gave the early Methodists much counsel and encouragement during their persecutions.

In 1826 the city of Newark received a bequest of $4000 from the estate of the Rev. Dr. Uzal Ogden[138] for the education and support of poor orphaned children.

405. Nicholas Gouverneur Ogden, b. 1776; d. Aug. 15, 1823.

Having pronounced ability and equipments for mercantile life, he entered into partnership with John Jacob Astor, Sr., of New York, in the year 1816 for business in China. Mr. Ogden took up his residence in Canton, and an extensive and lucrative trade was the result. He died in 1823, and Mr. Astor took charge of all the firm's papers, and disputed Mr. Ogden's claims. In the year 1840, Samuel Gouverneur Ogden[406] undertook the settlement of his deceased brother's estate and employed the expert lawyer Charles O'Connor as chief counsel. After 16 years of legal battle, Mr. Ogden gained the suit, and Mr. Astor compromised for $200,000.

The Newark Sentinel of Freedom of Mar. 2, 1824, had the following: "At Canton (China) on the 15th of Aug. Mr. Nicholas G. Ogden in the 47th year of his age. Eldest son of the Rev. Dr. Ogden, dec'd. Few men have been more highly and deservedly esteemed, or more deeply regretted by a numerous circle of friends than Mr. Ogden. He had resided in China for many years, as agent for one of our most respectable mercantile houses, and was on the eve of returning to his home and family."

406. Samuel Gouverneur Ogden, b. Oct. 17, 1779; d. Apr. 5, 1860; 1st m. Eliza Lewis; 2d m. Julia Fairlie.

407. Alida Gouverneur Ogden, b. 1785 (?); d. ——; m. Rev. Anson Rood.

408. Mary Gouverneur Ogden, b. ——; d. New Haven, 1860.

409. Wallace Ogden, b. May 12, 1788; d. Aug. 2, 1803.

410. Margaret E. Ogden, bap. Apr. 22, 1798; d. May 19, 1823.

139. Charles Ogden (Uzal[45], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. 1748; d. July 31, 1815, aged 67 yrs.; 1st m. (license granted) July 23, 1779, Hannah Gouverneur, b. ——; d. Sept. 25, 1819; dau. of Samuel Gouverneur and Experience Johnson, his wife; 2d m. Ann Clark.

Doubtless Charles Ogden[139] was born and lived in Newark, N. J., but at time of marriage both are of Newton, Sussex Co. From the court records of Essex Co., N. J., he appears to have been a lawyer.

419. Jonathan Johnson, b. ——; d. ——.
420. Hannah Johnson, b. ——; d. ——.

CHILDREN—Second Marriage (Chart 1):

421. Elijah Day, b. ——; d. ——; m. Phebe Crane.
422. Electa Day, b. ——; d. infant.
423. David Ogden Day, b. ——; d. ——; m. Maria Stackhouse; dau. of Samuel Stackhouse, of Elizabethtown, N. J.

142. Hannah Ogden (John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. 1737; d. June 25, 1780; m. Mar. 14, 1763, Rev. James Caldwell, b. Apr. 1734; d. Nov. 24, 1781; son of John Caldwell and Margaret Phillips, his wife.

The Caldwells were of Scotch descent. John Caldwell married Margaret Phillips in Co. Antrim, Ireland, and with four single sisters came to America early in 1700 and first settled at Chestnut Level, Lancaster Co., Pa., but soon removed and located on "Cub Creek," a branch of the Staunton river, in what is now Charlotte Co., Va. He had a dau. Martha who was mother to John Caldwell Calhoun of S. C., and here, in the wilderness, James, the youngest of seven children was born in Apr. 1734. The place was generally known as "The Caldwell Settlement," or "Cub Creek."

James Caldwell was prepared for college under the tutorage of Rev. James Todd, and entered Princeton College at 15 yrs. of age, when the institution was located in Newark. He graduated in Sept. 1759 and pursued theological studies under Pres. Davies. He was licensed by the Presbytery of New Brunswick July 29, 1760; was ordained Sept. 17, 1760, and appointed to supply southern vacancies, especially those in the Carolinas.

He was called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church, Elizabethtown, in Nov. 1761, and was installed in Mar. 1762, with an annual salary of £160. On Mar. 14, 1763, just one year after entering this pastorate, he married Hannah Ogden[142], dau. of Judge John Ogden[46], of Newark, N. J.

When Whitefield was on his way from Philadelphia to New York he preached morning and evening in Mr. Caldwell's church, the privilege being denied by the Rev. Mr. Chandler, rector of St. John's.

Rev. Mr. Caldwell was of an ardent temperament and entered at once into the full discussions of the great questions underlying the colonial struggle for freedom, both from his pulpit in sermons and prayers, and in his pastoral intercourse. No religious society took a bolder stand for independence than his church, from which congregation 40 commissioned officers alone went forth, not counting the many non-commissioned officers and privates, and at the request of his soldier congregation Mr. Caldwell entered the field as their chaplain. He took an active part in military operations, and his patriotism and fervent zeal led the British to call him "The Black Rebel," and the patriots "The Fighting Parson." The Journals of Congress show that on Mar. 15, 1777, $200 were ordered to be "paid Rev. James Caldwell of Elizabeth Town for extraordinary services," and on May 27, $4,873.54 were ordered to be "paid Rev. James Caldwell for the services of a company of light horse, Capt. Jacob Wynans, their horsehire and expenses." He also acted as Ass't Commissary General. His house at Elizabethtown was burned by the Hessians and Tories who tried to capture him, but he moved his family away, and as often as possible returned to preach to his people. On one occasion he preached with loaded pistols lying on his pulpit, while sentinels watched outside.

Despite the fact that his wife was cruelly shot and killed by a British soldier at Connecticut Farms, June 25, 1780, "Mr. Caldwell continued in the discharge of the various duties to which, in these several capacities, he was called, month by month, until the autumn of 1781. The last record made of him by the Presbytery was meeting May 7, 1782, at New Providence. It is in these words: 'The Rev^D James Caldwell departed this life, falling by the hands of a Cruel Murderer, on the 24th of November, 1781.'

"The funeral services were performed on Tuesday, the 27th, the whole town suspending all business and gathering in uncontrollable grief at the house of Mrs. Noel. The Rev. Dr. Alex. McWhorter of Newark performed the services, and preached from Ecc. viii: 8. An opportunity was given the people to view the corpse, in front of the house in the open street. After all had taken their last look, and before the coffin was closed Dr. Boudinot came forward, leading nine orphan children, and placing them around the bier of their parent, made an address of surprising pathos to the multitude in their behalf.

"Mr. Caldwell left but a scanty patrimony at the best. The Hon. Elias Boudinot cheerfully took upon himself the administration of the estate and the care of the children. The patrimony was eventually rendered productive, the children were well educated, and all of them became respectable and useful. They were, also, greatly befriended by Mrs. Noel, Gen'l Lincoln, President Washington, and the Marquis de La Fayette."—"Hatfield's Elizabeth."

A marble slab was placed over the graves of Rev. Caldwell and his wife in the First Pres. ch. yd., Elizabeth, inscribed as follows:

"SACRED TO THE MEMORY Of the Revd James Caldwell & Hannah his Wife who fell Victims, to their Country's cause in the Years 1780 & 1781
He was the zealous & faithful Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in this Town where, by his evangelical Labours in the Gospel Vineyard & his early attachment to the civil Liberties of his Country
He has left in the Hearts of his People a better Monument than Brass or Marble
Stop Passenger
Here also lies the remains of a Woman who exhibited to the World a bright Constellation of the female Virtues
On that memorable Day, never to be forgotten when a british Foe invaded this fair Village and fired even the Temple of the Deity
This peaceful Daughter of Heaven retired to her hallowed apartment imploring Heaven for ye pardon of her Enemies
In that Sacred Moment She was by the bloody Hand of a british Ruffian despatch'd, like her divine Redeemer through a Path of Blood to her long wish'd for native Skies"

By the joint action of the committee of the First Pres. Ch. and the Cincinnati of New Jersey, a much more costly and elegant monument was erected and dedicated with appropriate ceremonies, Nov. 24, 1845, a commemorative address being delivered by the Rev Samuel Miller, D.D., of Princeton, N. J. The marble slab was then imbedded in the rear wall of the church.

Jacob Ogden[152] was born in Newark, N. J., where both father and gr. father were lawyers. When about a year old his father died, and his mother brought him up in the Prot.

L OF C.

Epis. faith. In early life he went to Colebrook, Conn., where he was employed as clerk for an Englishman named Smith, who owned and operated an iron-works, and at which place he married Jerusha Rockwell in 1772. At the opening of the Revolution, Mr. Smith returned to England, leaving the iron-works in charge of JACOB OGDEN, but the works were accidentally burned Aug. 30, 1781. Jacob then removed to Hartford where he became an enterprising merchant. He built the long wooden block on the south side of Ferry street, and for his residence the building on State street formerly known as the "Exchange Hotel," which was burned a few years ago. He lost much money in connection with the building of the "State House," being paid in lands having defective titles, and being seriously embarrassed, he removed to Washington Bridge, between Milford and Stratford, where he kept a public house. In 1804 he opened a hotel in New Haven which was for twenty years celebrated as the "Coffee House."

JACOB OGDEN[152] was an energetic man, of strong social qualities, witty and quick at repartee. He was a vestryman in Christ Church, Hartford, having been a liberal subscriber toward its erection. The original subscription paper, dated Nov. 28, 1786, and still among the parish papers, has the following entries among the many donations: "John Morgan £36; JACOB OGDEN £24; John Thomas £20; Samuel Cutter £10; Major John Caldwell £10 in pure spirits; John Chenward one hogshead Molasses; Barnabas Deen £10 in building material or in rum; Noah Webster Jr. seven dozen spelling books £3." JACOB OGDEN and John Morgan agreed with Ebenezer Clark, joiner, to finish the church. One entry reads: "MR JACOB OGDEN had been engaged to furnish a dinner for the clergy, bill £4–13– on the occasion of the settlement of Rev. Menzias Raynor of Elizabeth, N. J. Nov 11 1801, a very rainy day."

Isaac Browne, of Newark, N. J.; 2d m. Sarah Hanson, b. 1754; d. Aug. 3, 1838; dau. of Henry Hanson and Sarah Wilkinson, his wife, of Livingston Manor, N. Y. Sarah Hanson was sister to Capt. John Wilkinson Hanson of the British army.

The Hon. Isaac Ogden[174] was doubtless born in Newark, N. J. He graduated in the first class that went out of King's, now Columbia College, chose the law for his profession, and became a distinguished jurist. Newark tradition says that at the outbreak of the Revolution his father Judge David Ogden[50] and all his sons took the patriotic side, and that the son, Isaac Ogden[174], delivered a stirring address to a mass meeting from a platform extended from the second story of the old court house, Newark, which stood on the west side of Broad street, oposite the present Presbyterian church. But in the latter part of 1776 the old Judge and his sons Isaac[174], Nicholas[181], and Peter [182] affiliated with the Royalist party, and their property was condemned and sold during the war. However, Isaac's brothers Abraham and Samuel remained stanch and active patriots.

Judge Isaac Ogden[174] was said to have built a store on the northeast corner of Broad and Market streets, Newark, where the First National Bank now stands. His house in Newark was alternately the residence of the British General and the American Commander as either party happened to be successful. "In this way his young family became subject to all the horrors attending a residence in the seat of war." But his loyalty to the mother country becoming pronounced, he sought safety as a refugee in New York; and when the British evacuated that section in 1783 he abandoned his property and prospects and took his family to England. There is every evidence that, like his father, he was honest in his convictions, for several biographers represent him as a man of sterling integrity and of great moral worth.

The sufferings he had undergone, and the sacrifices he had made, together with his learning and legal ability, attracted the attention of the English government, and after the close of the war he was appointed Judge of the Admiralty at Quebec by King George III. in the year 1788. He at once re-crossed the ocean and established his family in Quebec, where his natural energy of character enabled him to retrieve much of his losses, although his salary was small in meeting the demands of the rank he was obliged to assume. "His manner on the bench was impressive for its energy and acuteness, and his legal opinions were delivered with perspicuity and decision."

During the administration of Lord Dorchester, he was appointed one of the Puisne Judges of the Dist. of Montreal and he immediately removed his family to the latter city.

While attending to his judicial duties he was taken with a "painful and incurable disease brought on by the sedentary nature of his profession." When not in bed he never failed to appear in his seat on the bench, but the heroic struggle had to be given up, and in 1818 his general health was such he sailed for England for medical assistance and underwent two painful and dangerous operations, but they did not stay the disease. His advanced age was against him in this, but his cheerful disposition did not desert him, and he still manifested great strength of intellect. He took continuous interest in all public affairs and had the various publications of the day read to him by a member of his family. As the end approached he expressed great happiness in being peculiarly fortunate in being surrounded by his devoted wife and so many of his children and grandchildren. "It was a blessing," he said, "allowed to but very few at 85."

An English biographer adds: "Such were the last moments of this exemplary man, and such were the consolatory feelings and strong hope which actuated him at this awful period, that it could have sprung from no source but a deep and well-founded confidence in the promises of revelation, and a calm conscience arising from a well-spent life. . . . It deserves to be mentioned as a proof of the estimation in which the long and tried services of Mr. Ogden were held, that our gracious Sovereign specially recommended to the Colonial Legislature, to make a more suitable provision for his declining age, and for his widow in case of her surviving him, a measure they had not adopted at the time of his death."

Judge Isaac Ogden's last will states, "I, Isaac Ogden, of the town of Taunton, Somerset Co. England, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Court of the Kings Bench for the District of Montreal, Canada, this 13th day of Feb. 1823. Since making former wills have removed to England for the recovery of my health, many changes having taken place, the death of my eldest son David, I leave all to my wife Sarah Ogden, either in England or America, and after her death to her children and grand children."

Mary (Browne) Ogden, first wife of Judge Isaac Ogden[174], was dau. of Rev. Isaac Browne, formerly of Brook-Haven, L. I. He was graduated from Yale College in 1729, was accounted "a man of talents and education," and made rector of Trinity P. E. Church, Newark, N. J., in 1744. Mary (Browne) Ogden was buried in Newark, her epitaph reading as follows: "Mary, the wife of Isaac Ogden, Esq.,—here rested from the hurry of life, on the 15th of March, 1722, aged 26 years.

"Could the softness which adorned,—could the piety and benevolence which endeared human nature,—could tenderest friendship or purest love disarm the king of terrors,—she had not died."

Sarah (Hanson) Ogden, second wife of Judge Isaac Ogden[174], "was a lady of rank and endowments, every way equal to the station she filled. Being descended from one of the first families who had emigrated to the now United States, she brought him a large fortune which she inherited in her own right; but her property as well as that of her husband was lost in the revolutionary convulsion." Hers is the only gravestone inscription in the graveyard at Three Rivers, Canada.

Many of the descendants of Judge Isaac Ogden[174] are still living in Canada.

Sarah (Ogden) Hoffman[175] was a noted philanthropist, and one of the founders of the "Home for Destitute Women and Children," N. Y. City.

Nicholas Hoffman was born at Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N.Y.; was gr. son of Nicholas Hoffman, and gt. gr. son of Martinus Hoffman who came to America in 1658. He removed to New York City about 1760 and became an eminent merchant there. He was one of the charter members of the Chamber of Commerce, and was a member of the General Committee of Safety of N. Y. City in 1775. He was a partner of Gabriel H. Ludlow, their store being on Dock street.

John Greig Ogden[1475], a descendant of Abraham Ogden[176], contributes the following biography:

"Abraham Ogden, the third son of David Ogden, was born at Newark, N. J., in 1743. He married Sarah Frances Ludlow, daughter of Thomas Ludlow, a wealthy and prominent citizen of New York.

"He became a distinguished lawyer, and is said to have had no equal before a jury. He was also Surrogate of Morris Co., N. J., holding the office for many years, and residing in Morristown until the end of the Revolutionary War. He then removed to Newark, N. J., having been appointed by Washington as the first U. S. Attorney for that District, and died there in 1798 at the early age of 55, leaving a large family. It was the good fortune of Mr. Ogden and his family to be on terms of friendly intercourse with Washington, who, while a portion of the Continental Army was quartered at or near Morristown, passed much of his time at the house of his friend 'Squire Ogden,' as he was then called. It appears that the General took a particular interest in his host's son Thomas Ludlow, and would often make his rounds among the army with the boy mounted before him on his saddle. It was about this time that the following incident, not without historic interest, occurred. The General, seeing a pair of foils, playfully challenged his young companion to a fencing match. After a few thrusts, the button flew off the boy's foil, the unprotected point of which penetrated the General's hand, inflicting a slight flesh wound and drawing the only blood shed by him during the war. The Royalist sentiments of the boy's grandfather David Ogden, 'the old Judge,' as he was called, were well known in the community, and the report got abroad that an attempt had been made to assassinate the Commander in Chief while among his Tory friends. The anecdote, as a matter of family history, is well authenticated."

ABRAHAM OGDEN[176] was member of the Legislature of New Jersey in 1790, and was U. S. Dist. Attorney 1792–8. Some of the most eminent men of the country studied law in his office, among them being Richard Stockton, Gabriel Ford and Josiah Ogden Hoffman.

Gen. Washington appointed him a commissioner to obtain the relinquishment of a title which the Iroquois Nation of Indians held to a part of northern New York state. This gained for him a knowledge of the country lying south of the St. Lawrence river, and resulted in the purchase of a large tract of country by himself, his brother Samuel Ogden, Gouverneur Morris, Nicholas Hoffman, Richard Harison, and Stephen Van Rensselaer, and Ogdensburg was founded.

COL. SAMUEL OGDEN[178] was born in Newark, N. J., was a prominent Episcopalian, and an ardent patriot during the Revolutionary War, in which service he was a Colonel of N. J. Militia. He was a man of great business tact and energy, and operated an iron works at Boonton, N. J. The following advertisement appeared in the New York Packet of Sept. 27, 1781:

"The Nail Manufactory is now carried on at Booneton near Morris Town, in all its branches, where any quantity may be had at moderate terms, on the shortest notice; made in the neatest manner, of the following sizes. Card Tacks, Saddlers Tacks, of all sizes; 3d. nails for Lathing, 4d, ditto, for Shingling; and also 6d. 8d. 10d. 12d. 20d. and 24d. Nails. Best Refined Rod Iron, also to be sold.

"Booneton August 9, 1781. SAM. OGDEN"

Iron was shipped to England free of duty, but had to pay tribute to the British treasury if used in this country. Col. Samuel Ogden had a grist-mill at Boonton which could conveniently turn out grist, but in which contraband iron was said to be manufactured, it being a slitting mill for the production of nail rods. The patriotic colonists, not being on good terms with the mother country, were at this time considering such taxation very unjust burdens. When it became rumored that Col. Samuel Ogden's grist-mill was turning out slitted iron, Gov. Franklin and suite came to investigate. "It is said that the very excellent dinner prepared by Mrs. Ogden and the more potent fact that the Governor was himself pecuniarily interested in the mill, led him to say as he with some parade looked at the little grist-mill, then grinding corn, that 'he knew there was nothing in the story.' "

As given in the biography of his brother Abraham[176], Col. Samuel Ogden was one of the landed company that bought a large tract in northern New York south of the St. Lawrence. The following advertisement is from the Albany Gazette of June 7, 1787:

"Ten townships of unappropriated lands on the south side of the St. Lawrence River will be sold at public vendue at the Coffee House in the City of New York July 10, 1787. Madrid and Oswegatchie will be sold by single lots or mile squares:—the balance by quarters of Townships."

The principal purchaser was Alexander Macomb, who subsequently acted a distinguished part in the northern purchases. On May 3, 1792, Macomb conveyed to Col. Samuel Ogden, in trust for himself, Gen. Henry Knox, Robert Morris, and Gouverneur Morris, for £3200, the four townships of Hague, Cambray, Oswegatchie and DeKalb, with the stipulation that Col. Ogden should convey to Gen. Knox 44,114 acres, to Robert Morris 60,641 acres, and to Gouverneur Morris 60,641 acres of this tract. This left Col. Ogden 90,000 acres, all of Oswegatchie and a part of DeKalb, Cambray and Madrid townships. Col. Ogden sold DeKalb to Judge William Cooper, father of J. Fenimore Cooper, the author.

Nov. 24, 1807, Col. Samuel Ogden moved to quash indictment of Aaron Burr for murder of General Hamilton.—Centinel of Freedom.

Col. Samuel Ogden[178] was a very prominent Churchman and was a delegate to all the conventions from 1791 to 1809. He was married by the Rev. Samuel Seabury on Sunday Feb. 5, 1775, to Euphemia Morris, sister of Gouverneur Morris and Lewis Morris, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. A tablet inscribed to her memory is in Grace Church, New York, Broadway and 10th street, which reads, "Euphemia Ogden Relict of Samuel Ogden Esq. of Newark, N. J. Born Sept. 10, 1754, Died June 2, 1818." "Isabella W Ogden, her daughter. Born Feb. 17, 1787. Died 15th April 1820."

She died on board ship Nashville on the passage from New Orleans to New York City.

501. Catharine Morris Ogden, b. Sept. 7, 1781; d. s. p. Feb. 1, 1863; m. James Parker, b. Mar. 1, 1776, at Shirley, a farm in Bethlehem township, Hunterdon Co., N. J., "where his father had taken his family for greater safety from the troubles of the times. He graduated from Columbia College in 1793 at the age of 17. Was a member of the Assembly with the exception of one year, from 1806 to 1819. The records of the Assembly teem with the manifestations of his untiring industry and of his unswerving fidelity to the best interests of the people and the state. One whose attention has not been called to the subject will be surprised to find with how many wise and useful laws he enriched our statute books.

"The Delaware and Raritan Canal was his project. He was one of the Commissioners who fixed the boundary between New Jersey and New York. His first wife, and the mother of his children, was Penelope, dau. of Anthony Butler, to whom he was m. in old St. Peter's Church, Phila., by Bishop White in 1803. His oldest son, James, was an eminent lawyer and Judge in Ohio. His 2d son, William, was an eminent civil engineer. His youngest, the Hon. Cortland Parker, of Newark, N. J.

"His 2d wife was a dau. of Samuel Ogden of Morristown, N. J., by whom he had no children."

509. Samuel Gouverneur Morris Ogden, b. Aug. 29, 1794; d. Feb. 17, 1797.

181. Nicholas Ogden (David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. May 30, 1753; d. Newark, N. J., Feb. 24, 1812; m. —— Hannah Cuyler, b. 1758; d. Sept. 6, 1816, in 59th year; dau. of Henry Cuyler and Alida Schuyler, his wife.

Nicholas Ogden[181], with his father Judge David[50], remained loyal to King George III. during the Revolutionary War, and "Dickinson's Notes" state he went to Shelbourne, Nova Scotia, in 1783, but returned after 1800. While in Nova Scotia he received grants of land from the crown, as appear in the following record: "Register of Probate and Deeds Office, R. G. Irwin Registrar. Shelbourne, N. S.—Grant of land to Nicholas Ogden from the crown —King George the Third, April 1st 1784.—The land situated on Eastern side of Jordan Bay about three miles below the mouth of the Jordan River—one parcel containing 200 acres.—Another 600 acres granted to Nicholas Ogden, Joshua Watson and Bartholemew Sullivan as Tennants in common.—Another grant to Nicholas Ogden of Town Lot in St. John's Division. Letter I. No 9—" All of which Nicholas and Hannah his wife sell to Joshua Watson Oct. 1, 1785. "Registered Mar. 18, 1786 on the oath of Samuel Burling. Together with all houses, out buildings, stables, yards, gardens, orchards, Lands, Tenemants meadows commons pastures trees woods pathways waters water-courses wind & windmills (mill iron & iron work complete for a water mill)—Mill Dam Fishings privileges &c. &c. which Nicholas Ogden also deeded to Joshua Watson. (Signed) Valentine Nutter, Justice of the Peace."

Nicholas Ogden[181] was vestryman of Christ Church, Parish St. Patrick and St. George, Shelbourne, N. S., from 1789 to 1800. He was Barrack Master 1793–4, Overseer of River Fishery and Justice of the Peace from 1784 to 1800. His house, framed from white oak and brought from the U. S., is still standing in the centre of the town.

There is an inscription at Shelbourne that is connected with a pathetic story told by the rector of Christ Church. The inscription runs thus: "Sacred / to the memory of / Patrick Maxwell, Esq. / Ensign in His Majesty's 6th / or First Warwickshire Infantry / son of William Maxwell / of Springkill Bar, N. B. / who was unfortunately / upset in a sail boat / July 10th 1790—& drowned / aged 19 / deeply regretted by his parents & by all / who knew him." The rector explains that the young ensign lost his life in saving that of NICHOLAS OGDEN. Both were depending upon one oar that proved insufficient to keep them afloat, and Mr. Ogden made some reference to his wife and children, when young Maxwell immediately said there was no one depending upon him, and letting go the oar was drowned. Two other members of the same regiment were also drowned.

NICHOLAS OGDEN[181] returned from Nova Scotia about 1800 and was a resident of Newark, N. J., at the time of his death. The Newark Centinel of Freedom of Feb. 25, 1812, has: "Died, yesterday a. m. NICHOLAS OGDEN, Esq. of Newark, age 59." The same paper bearing date Sept. 10, 1816, has : "Died, on the 6th, HANNAH, wife of the late Nicholas Ogden, Esq., of Newark, in her 59th year." The parents and their children are buried in a little cemetery on Rector street, Newark, in the rear of Trinity Church Chapel.

His will was dated, New York, Dec. 13, 1799, and proved, Newark, June 10, 1812. In it he speaks of himself as being of Shelbourne, N. S., and names wife Hannah, daughters Alida and Gertrude, sons Henry and David. He gives them one equal sixth part when they shall respectively attain to the age of 21 years. The executors were Thomas Barclay of New York, Edward Brinley of Shelbourne, N. S., and nephews David A. and Thomas L. Ogden, of New York City.

All that is known of his children is from Christ Church records, parish of St. Patrick and St. George, Shelbourne, N. S., excepting the first three children, who were probably born in Newark, N. J.

515. GERTRUDE SKINNER OGDEN, bap. July 12, 1796; d. Nov. 19, 1880.

She was a remarkable personality, and bright and active when an old lady. She always insisted she was a British subject. When Lafayette revisited this country in 1824, she was one of a group of young ladies presented to him in New York. Assuming they were all daughters of patriots, he asked concerning her father, when she spiritedly replied, "My father, sir, was loyal to his king and country." Upon this the Marquis complimented her for having the courage to stand by the principles of her father. It was she who had the gravestones of Capt. David Ogden[9] and Col. Josiah Ogden[10] imbedded in the floor of the porch of Trinity Episcopal Church, Newark, N. J. Her gravestone is the only one of the family stones bearing dates.

"Bolton's Hist. of Westchester Co., N. Y.," says: "The orthography of the surname is properly Corte-landt; the first syllable Corte or Korte, meaning in the Dutch language 'short,' the second landt, (land) literally the short land, a term expressing the peculiar form of the ancient Duchy of Courland in Russia."

Philip Van Cortlandt was the eldest of three children, and a graduate of King's College. He was a Tory during the Revolution and his estates were forfeited. "He is not to be confounded with his uncle of similar name, the Patriot Colonel, who became the ancestor of the Van Cortlandts of Cortlandt Manor. He entered the British Army as Major of the third Battalion, N. J. Loyal Volunteers. After the war his estates were confiscated and he went to England. He d. May 1, 1814, and was buried at Harlsham, where a mural monument is erected. His sons received commissions."

He is said to have had twenty-three children, of whom we have seventeen.

JOHN OGDEN[232] was born in Hanover township, near Morristown, N. J., and was bap. at latter place Sept. 16, 1745. He settled at Morristown and died there of paralysis. He was in the militia service in the Revolutionary War as a private for three terms. His son Daniel[571] served in his stead for two terms, while his father was at home providing for his family, and baking bread from the flour provided for the patriot troops, which he carried to the army at Morristown. Tradition says that JOHN OGDEN[232] was an uncommonly active patriot, acted as a scout, and required his Tory neighbors to pay a just, if unwilling, tribute to the cause.

PHEBE (Howard) OGDEN was one of nine children of Daniel Howard and Rachel Latimer, was b. at Morris Plains, N. J., and bap. at Morristown Apr. 17, 1748, where she d. of fever.

aged 71 yrs. Her father, Daniel Howard, m. Morristown, N. ABIGAIL OGDEN[235] was dau. of David Ogden[62] of Snarling Street, a locality about two and a half miles east of Morristown, N. J.; she d. soon after her second marriage, from which there was no issue. ENOCH GOBLE, her second husband, shortly married Mary Cooper, who doubtless proved an excellent step-mother to Abigail (Ogden) Stiles' children, for after the latter reached majority and were married, two of them, John and James, each named a child for her.

THOMAS STILES, first husb. of Abigail Ogden[235], was son of Jonathan Stiles, of Morristown, N. J., called "Long Jonathan" on account of his great size. He came to Morris Co., N. J., about 1726, from Stratford, Conn., where he was born, and where his ancestors had long lived. He is said to be the ancestor of all the Stiles Family in that part of the state. David Stiles, son of Thomas Stiles, was made administrator of his father's estate in Apr. 1803. The following eight children of Thomas and Abigail are not known to be named in the regular order of their birth.

CHILDREN (Chart 18):

Stephen Ogden[236] was bap. Morristown, N. J., Dec. 2, 1750. He was a farmer by occupation, and lived on the old homestead of his father at Hanover, N.J., where both he and his wife d. of consumption, he aged 58 years, and she at the age of 46. He was a soldier in the Continental Army, belonging to the "Eastern Battalion, Morris Co.," and was wounded at Second River Sept. 13, 1777.

CHILDREN (Chart 4):

607. Charles Ogden, b. 1778; d. Feb. 17, 1808; m. Sarah Lindsley.
608. Ephraim F. Ogden, b. ——; d. June 3, 1862, single.

He was a farmer, and settled in White Oak Springs, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he died. In his will dated Apr. 20, 1862, he first makes provision for suitable burial by his Masonic brethren; he bequeaths one half of his estate, real and personal, to Robert G. Wand of Wisconsin, and one half to his nephew Agur L. Ogden[1693], of New Vernon, Morris Co., N. J.

609. Jacob Ogden, b. 1786; d. May 4, 1805.

237. Sarah Ogden (David[62], Thomas[12], David[3], John[1]), b. Hanover, N. J., bap. Morristown, N. J., Feb. 25, 1753; d. Panton, Vt., Nov. 27, 1815; m. 1774(?) Jacob Tappan, b. Nov. 16, 1753; d. Aug. 3, 1811; son of Abraham Tappan and Sarah Renolds, his wife.

Jacob Tappan lived in Hanover, N.J., and afterward removed near the iron works on the Rockaway River, between Dover and Boonton. After the death of her husband, Sarah (Ogden) Tappan[237] removed to Vermont with her oldest son Silas, and died at his house in Panton, on the eastern shore of Lake Champlain. She was buried in the family plot overlooking the lake.

Jonathan Ogden[239] was a resident of Morristown, N. J., and a man of ability, worth, and influence. From 1805 to 1812 he was Judge of the county court. He was member of the Assembly from Morris Co. 1802–4, filling the office with great credit. He was one of the most liberal subscribers to the fund raised to purchase the "Morristown Green," which was then owned by the First Presbyterian Church, and which a few public-spirited citizens bought and presented to the town, providing in the deed of gift that no buildings of any kind should be allowed upon it. He was also largely instrumental in organizing the "State Bank at Morris," which stood on the corner of Bank street and the park. The only mention of Jonathan Ogden[239] now found on the pages of Morris county history is in connection with some meritorious deed.

He was a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church, where he and his wife became members under the half-way covenant, May 4, 1775. He was doubtless the Jonathan Ogden of Morris Co. who served in Capt. Bonnell's Co., 1st Reg't of the Continental army, in the Revolutionary War.

617. Elizabeth Ogden, b. Jan. 3, 1775; d. Aug. 8, 1777.

618. Samuel Ogden, b. May 13, 1777; d. —— 1823 (?).

A letter written by Henry W. Ogden[1726], son of Dr. Oliver Wayne Ogden[619], to his uncle Dr. Elias Ogden[623], at Natchez, Miss., the letter dated New Germantown, N. J., Jan. 3, 1840, says: "A short time since we received a letter from uncle Samuel G. Ogden, from Swedesboro, Gloucester Co., N. J. He and his family are well. He complains of not hearing from his relatives, and is anxious to know if we have heard from Uncle Charles." (See No. 621.)

This is the only document that gives Samuel Ogden[618] a middle name. The letter indicates his place of residence, and that he was married, having a family; also that he did not die in 1823, but was alive in 1840.

619. Oliver Wayne Ogden, b. July 5, 1779; d. Nov. 14, 1839; m. Mary Wisner.

620. Stephen J. Ogden, b. Nov. 13, 1781; d. unm. Dec. 15, 1817.

He lived and died in Morris Co., N. J. With his father, above, he was one of the subscribers to the fund for the purchase of the "Morristown Green."

621. Charles H. Ogden, b. Mar. 10, 1792; d. ——.

He was connected with the building or management of a large hotel in Morristown, N. J., known as the "Morris County House," that stood on the corner of Market street and the park, and which was destroyed by fire in 1845. A miniature portrait of him has this written on the back: "Charles H. Ogden, born 1792. Miniature painted by Edward C. Potter at Morristown N. J. Feb. 2, 1821." He removed from Morristown, and it is not known that he ever married, or when and where he died.

622. Eliza B. Ogden, b. circa 1796; d. s. p. Feb. 28, 1821; m. Rev. David B. Hendricks.

The Newark Centinal of Freedom, date June 20, 1820, has this item: "A short time since the Rev. David B. Hendricks, formerly of Rhinebeck, N. Y. to Miss Eliza B. daughter of Jonathan Ogden, Esq. of Morristown, N.J."

A gravestone in rear of the First Presbyterian Church, Morristown, says: "Eliza B. Hendricks wife of Rev. David Hendricks, and daughter of Jonathan Ogden, died Feb. 28, 1821, aged 25."

623. Elias Ogden, b. circa 1802; d. Feb. 2, 1845; m. Ann M. (Routh) Lane.

NATHANIEL OGDEN[241] was a Quartermaster in the Continental Army. He was at one time a prisoner in the hands of the British at White Plains, and was one night approached by an officer, who was a brother Mason, and told where he might find a horse hidden, and ready for a rider. In the morning the prisoner was missing. He was with Washington at the battle of Trenton, and spent the next winter in the camp at Morristown. After the Revolution he removed to Coeymans, on the Hudson River, where he died. His claim against the Government for bounty is recorded in the Land Papers at Albany, N. Y., under date of June 18, 1790.

The will of his sister Elizabeth (Ogden) Barnet has this clause: "To the children of my brother Nathaniel, the sum of $2,000 to be equally divided among them."

DR. ISAAC OGDEN[243] was b. at Basking Ridge, Somerset Co., N. J., as were all his brothers and sisters. He graduated from Princeton in 1784. Upon entering his profession as physician he settled at Six Mile Run, where he m. Miss Stoothoff. It is said he rocked the cradle of his wife when an infant, while as a student he boarded in her father's family. He left his first place of residence, and after being a short time at White House, N. J., he removed to New Germantown, N. J. Here he succeeded to the practice of Dr. Oliver Barnet, his brother-in-law, and during his earlier years practiced extensively and successfully. He accumulated property and was widely known as a most estimable and useful citizen. He became a member of the Medical Society in 1788. During the latter years of his life he almost abandoned the practice of medicine, and acted as postmaster of the town.

He was a man of purest life, a practical Christian, promoting the interests of religion by every means in his power. He had the respect and esteem of all who knew him. Subsequent to 1820 he removed to New Brunswick, N. J., where he died in 1829, and was buried in the graveyard of the First Reformed Church. His memorial stone has the following inscription: "Sacred to the memory of Dr. Isaac Ogden, who departed this life on the 6th of May 1829, in the 66th year of his age. A kind husband, an affectionate father, an humble Christian."

HON. TIMOTHY EDWARDS and wife resided at Stockbridge, Mass., until 1762, when they removed to Elizabethtown, N. J.; they returned to Stockbridge in 1770, where they are buried.

RHODA (Ogden) EDWARDS died at Litchfield, Conn., while visiting friends. She was a remarkable woman, loyal and conscientious. An autobiography of a nephew by marriage has this important entry: "In the summer of 1809 I met my cousin Aaron Burr at the house of our common uncle Hon. Timothy Edwards in Stockbridge. . . . The day after Burr left our uncle's I called at the house to talk over the impressions of this unwonted visit. My aunt was a venerable and pious woman. 'I want to tell you cousin,' said she, 'the scene I passed through this morning. When Col. Burr's carriage had driven up to the door, I asked him to go with me into the north room, and I cannot tell you how anxious I felt, as I, an old woman, went through the hall with that great man Col. Burr, to admonish him, and to lead him to repentance. After we were by ourselves I said to him: "Colonel Burr, I have a thousand memories associated with you. I took care of you in your childhood, and I feel the deepest concern over your erring steps. You have committed a great many sins against God, and you killed that great and good man General Hamilton. I beseech you to repent, and fly to the blood and righteousness of the Redeemer for pardon. I cannot bear to think of you as being lost, and I often pray most earnestly for your salvation." The only reply he made me,' continued the excellent old lady, 'was, "Oh! aunt, don't feel so badly; we shall both meet in heaven yet; meanwhile may God bless you." He then tenderly took my hand, and left the house.' "

Robert Ogden, 3d[310] was b. at Elizabethtown, N. J. He entered the College of New Jersey at 16 years of age, and graduated at 19, in the year 1765. He studied law under Richard Stockton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and became a prominent barrister. After being admitted to the bar, June 21, 1770, Governor Franklin appointed him Surrogate, Apr. 1772, in place of his father Robert Ogden, 2d, who resigned. His law office was located at Elizabeth, and he soon became noted as "the honest lawyer."

His right arm having been disabled by a fall, he could neither wield a sword nor handle a musket, but he did good service as Quartermaster and Commissary during the Revolution. After the war he resumed his law practice and continued it until the state of his health obliged him to remove beyond the influence of the sea air. He inherited a farm in Sussex Co., N. J., from his father, and to this he retired for needed rest. He became a ruling Elder in the church at Sparta and took up his full share of the labors and responsibilities connected with church work. Having no ambition for political distinction, he declined public office, and except representing his county in the State Legislature on one or more occasions, he adhered to the maxim: "The post of honor is the private station." He died at Sparta just before completing his 80th year.

General Matthias Ogden[314] was born at Elizabethtown, N. J., where he became a tanner and currier. He was a man of marked intelligence, and of great natural ability. He early entered the Revolutionary contest, joining the Continental army at Cambridge in 1775. His great zeal and resolution led to rapid promotion and to being sent in the expedition against Quebec, the latter part of the year 1775. He was with Arnold's party when they made the unfortunate assault of Dec. 31, and was carried from the field severely wounded in the shoulder. The same day Arnold sent an express to Gen. Washington in which he said, "the loss of my detachment before I left it, was about twenty men killed and wounded; among the latter is Major Ogden, who with Capt. Oswald, Capt. Burr and the other volunteers behaved extremely well."

Upon his return to the main army, he received the following commission of Colonel of the First Regiment in the New Jersey Line:

"In Congress.

"The Delegates of the United States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of New-Castle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, To "Matthias Ogden, Esquire.

"We, reposing especial Trust and Confidence in your Patriotism, Valour, Conduct and Fidelity, Do, by these Presents, constitute and appoint you to be Colonel of the First Regiment from Jersey, in the Army of the United States,—— for the Defence of American Liberty, and for repelling every hostile Invasion thereof. You are therefore fully and diligently to discharge the Duty of Colonel by doing and performing all manner of Things thereunto belonging. And we do strictly charge and require all Officers and Soldiers under your Command, to be obedient to your Orders as Colonel.

"And you are to observe and follow such Orders and Directions from Time to Time, as you shall receive from this or a future Congress of the United States, or Committee of Congress, for that Purpose appointed, or Commander in Chief for the Time being of the Army of the United States, or any other superior Officer, according to the Rules and Discipline of War, in Pursuance of the Trust reposed in you. This Commission to continue in Force until revoked by this or a future Congress.

"Dated this . . . . . day of December, Anno Domini 1776, . . twenty six

"By Order of the Congress,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"ATTEST. Chas. Thomson, Sec'y."

In Aug., 1776, he wrote to Aaron Burr from Ticonderoga: "I shall have the honor to command the redoubt which I am now building with the regiment alone. It is situated on the right of the whole, by the waters edge. It is to mount two 18 pounders, two 12, and four 9 pounders. In it I expect to do honor to New Jersey."

"Salisbury Memorial" says: "In 1778, on Lee's retreat at Monmouth, COL. OGDEN among others, commanding a regiment in Maxwell's Brigade, who was slowly following his retreating corps, with indignation so finely intimated in the Latin poet's metaphor: 'vireque leonum vincula recusantum' with the fierce wrath of the lion disdaining his chains, when interrogated by Colonel Harrison as to the cause of the retreat, answered with great apparent exasperation, 'By G-d sir, they are flying from a shadow.' "

Salisbury also says: "Family tradition states that on one occasion of COL. MATTHIAS OGDEN being taken prisoner by the British, at Elizabethtown, N. J., Nov. 5, 1780, he was removed to New York, and on arriving at headquarters was placed on parole, and invited to join the officers' mess. Shortly afterwards a new detachment arrived from England, and one of its officers at dinner asked the company to charge their glasses, and proposed the following toast: 'Damnation to the Rebels!' Col. Ogden had risen with the rest, and on hearing these words, flinging his glass and contents in the face of the British officer, he exclaimed: 'Damnation to him who dares to propose such a toast in my presence!' They were both immediately placed under arrest, and a challenge was sent, which the officer in command refused to allow COL. OGDEN to accept. The mess apologized to COL. OGDEN for the rudeness of their brother officer, and invited him to resume his place at their table. He was treated with the utmost courtesy thereafter."

Washington set out from Philadelphia in Mar., 1782, to rejoin the army at Newburg on the Hudson. Irving's "Life of Washington" states: "He was at Morristown in the Jerseys on the 28th, when a bold project was submitted to him by COLONEL MATTHIAS OGDEN, of the Jersey line. It was no less than the capture of Prince William Henry, son of the King of England, and afterward King William IV. The prince was serving as midshipman in the fleet of Admiral Digby, and was at that time with the admiral in New York, being an object of great attention to the army and the Tory part of the inhabitants. "The project of COLONEL OGDEN was to surprise the prince and the admiral at their quarters in the city and bring them off prisoners. He was to be aided by a captain, a subaltern, three sergeants, and thirty-six men. They were to embark from the Jersey shore on a rainy night in four whaleboats, well armed and rowed with muffled oars, and were to land in New York at half past nine, at a wharf not far from the quarters of the prince and admiral, which were in Hanover Square. Part of the men were to guard the boats, while COLONEL OGDEN with a strong party was to proceed to the house, force the doors if necessary, and capture the prince and admiral. In returning to the boats, a part of the men armed with guns and bayonets were to precede the prisoners, and part to follow at half gunshot distance, to give front to the enemy until all were embarked.

"The plan was approved by Washington, but Colonel Ogden was charged to be careful that no insult or indignity be offered to the prince or admiral, should they be captured. They were, on the contrary, to be treated with all possible respect, and conveyed without delay to Congress.

"How far an attempt was made to carry this plan into operation is not known. An exaggerated alarm seems to have been awakened by extravagant reports circulated in New York, as appears by the following citation from a paper or letter dated April 23d, and transmitted by Washington to Ogden.

" 'Great seems to be their apprehensions here. About a fortnight ago a number of flat-boats were discovered by a sentinel from the bank of the river (Hudson), which are said to have been intended to fire the suburbs, and in the height of the conflagration to make a descent on the lower part of the city, and wrest from our embraces his excellency Sir H. Clinton, Prince William Henry, and several other illustrious personages—since which great precautions have been taken for the security of those gentlemen, by augmenting the guards, and to render their persons as little exposed as possible.'

"These precautions probably disconcerted the project of Colonel Ogden, of which we find no other traces."

After peace had been declared, Col. Ogden was honored by Congress with a commission of Brigadier General. That body granting him leave of absence in 1783, General Ogden visited Europe, and while in France was presented to Louis XVI. by his friend General Lafayette. The French monarch, wishing to pay him a compliment, and titles or orders being out of the question with a republican officer, granted him the distinguished honor of "le droit du tabouret." He died at the early age of thirty-six years, and was buried in the First Pres. churchyard, Elizabethtown, N. J. The horizontal slab over his tomb is thus inscribed:

"Sacred to the memory of General Matthias Ogden who died on the 31st day of March 1791
Aged XXXVI years

In him were united those various virtues of the Soldier the Patriot and the Friend which endear men to society.
Distress failed not to find relief in his bounty.
Unfortunate merit a refuge in his generosity.

If manly sense and dignity of mind
If social virtues lib'ral and refin'd
Nipp'd in their bloom deserve compassion's tears
Then reader Weep, for Ogden's dust lies here

Weed his grave clean ye men of genius for he was your kinsman Tread lightly on his ashes ye men of feeling for he was your brother"

Governor, or as he was usually called Col. Aaron Ogden[315] was, like his father and brothers, a man of remarkable characteristics. Born in Elizabethtown, N. J., he graduated at Princeton College before he was seventeen years old, and in 1775 became tutor in Barber's Grammar School, where Alexander Hamilton, Gov. Wm Livingston and Judge Brockholtz were pupils.

In the outbreak of the Revolution, he and pupils volunteered in the Continental army. Aaron Ogden rose rapidly from lieutenant and captain to the rank of Brigade Major and Inspector, one of the most important offices in the army, now abolished, and served throughout the war. He gained a great reputation as an efficient and accomplished officer. In the winter of 1775–6 he was one of a party who boarded and captured a vessel called "Blue Mountain Valley" lying off Sandy Hook, and took her to Elizabeth Port. He was in the Battle of Brandywine in the fall of 1777; was assistant aide-de-camp to Lord Sterling in the Battle of Monmouth in the summer of 1778; had his horse shot from under him in the Battle of Springfield, N. J., in 1780.

He at this time addressed a letter to his father, the Hon. Robert Ogden, which is still in the possession of one of his descendants. It reads as follows:

"Jersey Camp near Springfield
June 15th 1780.

"Honored Sir,

"Wishing to relieve that anxiety in you, which must fill every breast in the present posture of affairs, I set down to give you as much satisfaction as is in my power.

"On the night of the 6th Inst. the enemy landed at Elizth Town, it is supposed, with about 5000 troops, including three hundred Dragoons & a large train of artillery—their advance reached Connecticut farms soon after Day break, where they were opposed by some small parties of the Jersey Brigade & a few militia—they did not pass the defile till after they had received reinforcements from Town—much scirmishing happened during the day, in which almost the whole of Brigade were at different times engaged assisted with a considerable body of militia, who on this occasion merit much praise & have, I think. acquired to themselves lasting honor. Our loss in the Brigade is not very considerable. one Ensign killed, 3 wounded, 7 privates killed & 20 wounded. The enemy suffered much, several principal officers have been killed & wounded,—from the dead found after the action & from the accounts received from Inhabitants where their wounded were dressed, their loss in killed, wounded & taken prisoners can not be less than two hundred—I speak within bounds in my opinion—the difference between our loss and theirs may perhaps appear incredible, but let it be considered that they were harrassed by small parties on every side in such a manner that it was out of their power to make retaliation. That they were thoroughly sick of their situation appears evident from the silence & precipitancy of their retreat, which they performed under cover of the night & a heavy shower of rain—it was not known in our camp untill the next morning.—Genl Hand, with two Battalions of Continental troops & a body of militia, fell on their rear a little below where Ebenezer Pine lived—he charged them with vigour, but superior force soon obliged him to retire—his loss was trifling.

"Since that time nothing very material has happened—the advance of the enemy are as far up as the Town bridge the wooden bridge by Potters—their main body between the forks of the road & the ferries.—Our light parties do them very little injury in their present position.—

"To develope the object of the enemy in this excursion seems almost impossible—perhaps they may have been brought to believe that our small army would receive but little assistance from the militia—They may possibly suppose that our magazines of provisions are so small as not to be able to subsist a large body of men together but for a short time—I hope that such exertions will be made, as may disappoint our enemies in their expectations, and that hereafter our Continental regiments may be put into such a situation as may enable Genl Washington to make sufficient opposition without the aid of the militia, whose absence from their farms must be attended with bad consequence to agriculture on which our support depends.—

"Had every State in the Union compleated their Batallions, which might have easily been done—this distress would not probably have come upon us.— On the weakness of our army our enemies build their hopes—they say that those few can not long hold together,—and that they must be more than men, who will fight, without pay, clothes or food.—A few vigorous exertions on our side might destroy these expectations, & make them wish to be at peace with us—what can more speedily bring our foes to terms, than our being prepared for war?—Oh! that every one would exert his power & influence to give vigour to our operations this campaign—& peace may again be established. I wish that matters of trifling importance might be dismissed & that a spirit of unanimity might prevail.

"Doctor Wolsely arrived at Sussex on Sunday last, his wife & Hannah came with him, they are all in health. The Doctor proposes to stay about a week from this time, perhaps longer. Colo. Ogden has been ill, but is now fast recovering.

"I am Sir, with much respect,

"Your affectionate Son (Addressed) "Aar. Ogden.

"The Honourable

"Robert Ogden, Esq.

"Trenton."

At the siege of Yorktown he and his company stormed the left redoubt of the British, for which he received the approbation of Gen. Washington. Hearing the latter say he wanted the traitor Benedict Arnold taken alive, Major Aaron Ogden with two or three other desperate spirits attempted his capture. All were killed in the attempt except Major Ogden, and he was badly wounded.

In Irving's "Life of Washington" occurs the following: "Capt. Aaron Ogden, a worthy officer of the New Jersey line, was selected by Washington" to convey a letter from the captive Major André and one from himself to Sir Henry Clinton at Paulus Hook, relative to negotiations concerning André and Arnold. In André's dispatch he aims to assure Sir Henry of the latter's innocence in connection with his (André's) misfortune. Washington's dispatch apprises Clinton that André was convicted by his board of general officers for abusing the flag of truce, and that he was properly condemned as a spy. Capt. Ogden was requested by Washington to first call upon Lafayette, who suggested that he incidentally mention an exchange of André for Arnold. This Ogden did to the commanding officer at Paulus Hook, who conveyed the proposition to Clinton, but it was promptly rejected as incompatible with honor and military discipline. All negotiations having failed, Major André was executed on the gibbet Oct. 2, 1780.

After the war, Col. Ogden returned to Elizabethtown, studied law with his brother Robert[310] in 1783, and was licensed as an attorney a year later, Sept. 1784, notwithstanding the rule requiring applicants to pursue a course of several years' study. He became a very successful counsellor in Elizabethtown and had several cases in the Supreme Court from the April term, 1790, to three years later. In 1794 he was called to the rank of sergeant-at-law. In 1797, during the short war with France, he was colonel of the 15th Reg't, and was afterward known as Col. Ogden.

He possessed some of the very best characteristics of a good lawyer and would undoubtedly have risen to a higher rank than he actually did, but being an ardent Federalist, he was led into the political arena. In Feb., 1801, he was elected U. S. Senator to fill the unexpired term of Senator Schureman, and served two years. He was for several years Clerk of Essex Co. In 1803 he was elected a trustee of Princeton College, which institution conferred the degree of LL.D. upon him in 1816.

In 1812 he was elected by the Legislature to the office of Governor, and served one year. During his term he was appointed Major General in the U. S. army by President Madison, but the Senate declined to confirm the appointment. Later he organized a body of volunteers for the defense of New York. About this time he retired from the law and engaged in steamboat navigation, by which he lost his fortune. "The Judicial and Civil History of New Jersey" gives this account: "The Legislature of N. Y. had granted the exclusive right to Livingston and Fulton to navigate the waters of that state with steam vessels, for a term of years. Col. Ogden in connection with Daniel Dodd, started a line of steamboats between Elizabethtown and New York. In retaliation, the Legislature of New Jersey passed a statute granting exclusive privileges to Ogden and Dodd. An attempt was made to repeal the New Jersey statute and the parties appeared with their counsel before a committee and were heard. Livingston was represented by Thomas Addis Emmet, and Ogden and Dodd, by Samuel L. Southard and Joseph Hopkinson. The result was that the New Jersey law was repealed. Violent disputes originated in the courts and both Legislatures were appealed to. During these controversies Thomas Gibbons appeared on the stage, in opposition to Ogden and Dodd. He was a lawyer of consummate ability, a man of large research, of untiring energy, of an iron will and capable of employing means to attain an end which some honest men thought questionable. Suit after suit was brought. . . . Col. Ogden was dogged and persevering in his attempts to secure his rights. No aspersion could be justly made against his character; that remained untarnished; but, in the end, he was defeated, after a most harassing conflict. He lost his fortune, his wife died, and he never recovered the position which he formerly occupied."

In 1829 he moved to Jersey City. He was that year arrested for debt in New York, and "refusing the proffered aid of his friends, remained in confinement for several months, being finally released by an act of the Legislature providing that no Revolutionary officer or soldier should be imprisoned for debt. The law was so framed as to cover the case of Col. Ogden, and he was released. He died in 1839. His last days were solaced by his appointment to the office of Collector of Customs of Jersey City, created especially for him by act of Congress.

He was a founder of the Society of the Cincinnati,—became president of the State Society in 1824, and vice-president of the General Society in 1825. He was made president in 1829, and served until his death.

912. Capt. Henry Warren Ogden, b. Jan. 27, 1800; d. unm. Aug. 25, 1860.

"Hardyston Memorial" says of him: "He was scarcely more than a lad when he received a midshipman's warrant in the Navy, in which he continued till his death, having risen to the rank of Capt. He cruised in every quarter of the globe and was sent on many important expeditions. He served in the 'Essex,' commanded by Capt. David Porter, when she captured the British warship 'Alert,' the first American success of the war and whose flag was the first taken from the enemy.

"He was with the Essex when vessel and crew were captured off Valparaiso and while on the way north as prisoner of war was one of those who with Capt. Porter escaped in the long boat and finally landed on Long Island shore. In mature years he was Naval Commander in New York Harbor, and on his 'receiving ship,' the North Carolina, received the visits of many noted persons, both Americans and foreigners.

"He was generous and impulsive, and once dove into the sea to save a seaman who had accidentally fallen overboard. He never married, and died in New York City."

In his will made Aug. 20, 1855, and proved Nov. 17, 1860, he left to his brother Thomas Anderson Ogden[913] a farm in Sussex Co., one in Bergen Co., one near Dover, Morris Co., and another in Sparta, Sussex Co. He also gave $500 to the Prot. Epis. Soc'y for destitute seamen, in New York City.

913. Rev. Thomas Anderson Ogden, b. Dec. 25, 1802; d. unm. Dec. 8, 1878.

He graduated at Princeton College in 1821. "From 1839 to 1865, he was identified with the Carmel church, Mississippi, as Chaplain to the slaves on several plantations within its bounds; was a native of Sussex Co., N. J. He studied theology at Princeton and Andover; was ordained by the Presbytery of Abingdon, Va., in 1829, and served several churches in Virginia as supply till 1835, when he became an agent of the Presbyterian Board of Education. In this capacity he visited Mississippi, where, soon after, he accepted the invitation extended to him by prominent planters in the Second Creek neighborhood to undertake the religious instruction of the negroes. In this work, which he loved, he spent the remainder of his active life. In 1865, broken down in health, depressed by the desertion of the colored people among whom he had so long labored, he returned to the North, and closed his life among his surviving relations in New Jersey. He was a scholar, a catechist and expositor of a high order; an oracle in ecclesiastical law; a valuable counsellor in Church courts; a genial companion and an affectionate friend.''—South-western Presbyterian, Mar. 17, 1892. He was buried in the Pres. ch. yard, Elizabeth, N. J.

"Eli Whitney, the celebrated inventor, was b. at Westborough, Mass., and graduated at Yale College in 1792. While pursuing the study of law, in Georgia, he resided with the widow of General Greene, and it was at this time that he invented the cotton gin, a machine for separating the seed from the cotton. This invention has been of incalculable advantage to the southern planters: what before was performed at an immense sacrifice of time and labor, is now effected almost instantaneously. The favorable condition of internal trade in the southern section of the states, has in many respects been more promoted by the genius of Whitney, than by the labors of Fulton.

But he was not allowed to enjoy his own in peace: he suffered much in defending his rights from the encroachments of the envious or designing. In 1798 he contracted with the United States to furnish, for $134,000, ten thousand stand of arms, which he completed in ten years. He next contracted for fifteen thousand stand of arms.

"He died Jan. 8, 1825, aged 59. . . He was a man of unflinching perseverance, never yielding until he had accomplished what he had undertaken. In private he was very much respected and beloved."—"Blake's Biog. Dic."

Aug. 27, 1862; dau. of Major James Fairlie.

"The Old Merchants of New York City" chronicles the following data: "There are many honored mercantile names among the citizens of different periods, but none stand higher than that of 'Ogden.' Of these Samuel Gouverneur Ogden stood among those in the front rank. He was one of the New Jersey Ogdens, whose father was a clergyman, of Newark.

"He served the usual apprenticeship, or clerkship, in order to thoroughly understand the mercantile business, with the then (1795) great commercial firm of Gouverneur & Kemble, No. 94 Front street. Five years later, in 1800, Samuel G. Ogden went into business on his own account at 119 Pearl street. For some years he did an extensive shipping business, and owned several vessels, viz. the 'Empire,' the 'Indostan,' the 'Diana,' and the 'Leander.'

"About this time he married Miss Lewis, a daughter of Francis Lewis, and granddaughter of the celebrated Francis Lewis, the worthy old merchant who signed the Declaration of Independence."

Mr. Ogden's vessels were armed with 15 guns each, as was the custom for protection from pirates. When his oldest son Samuel was born, the event was heralded by a salute of 60 guns from his merchant ships.

In 1806, General Miranda, a native of Caracas, S. A., having been many years in the service of Spain, conceived the idea of freeing his native country from the Spanish yoke, and after visiting Europe, came to the United States to enlist the sympathies of this government. He proceeded to Washington, but not gaining more than the sympathy of Pres. Jefferson and Mr. Madison, Sec'y of State, Gen. Miranda went to New York and succeeded in securing the help of Samuel Gouverneur Ogden, and his friend and associate, Col.

W. G. Smith, son-in-law of the elder John Adams. Mr. Ogden immediately fitted up the "Leander" with 18 guns and all other necessary military equipments at his own expense, and dispatched her in company with the "Bee" and "Bacchus," with an entire force of about 200 men. It is said that Col. Smith confided the secrecies of the expedition to Aaron Burr, who at once informed the Spanish minister at Washington. Fast sailing vessels were at once dispatched to Caracas, and the Spanish government readily ended the expedition in complete failure. Some of the men were imprisoned, others hung, and Gen. Miranda was himself captured and died in prison at Cadiz. Mr. Ogden suffered a financial loss of about $200,000, but rejoiced that he had struck the first blow for the freedom of South America. Bolivar, "the Deliverer," acknowledged this, and expressed a readiness to compensate Mr. Ogden for his heavy losses. Messrs. Ogden and Smith were both prosecuted by the Government for having fitted out an expedition against a power in amity with the United States. The trial in New York City was a highly interesting one. Thomas Addis Emmet, Cadwallader D. Colden, Joseph Ogden Hoffman, and Richard Harrison, were their counsel. The defendants were honorably acquitted.

Mr. Ogden continued in business in New York with unimpaired credit. He lived at No. 9 Hudson street until 1815, when he went to France and established himself in commercial business at Bordeaux, doing a large business, and forming many valuable commercial connections. In 1825 he returned to New York, and became agent for several large business houses in France. His residence was at 41 Warren street, where he entertained in magnificent style. He died at his country home in Astoria, L. I., surrounded by his gentle wife, his children and grandchildren, in his 83d year.

Julia Fairlie, 2d wife of Samuel Gouverneur Ogden[406], was dau. of Major Fairlie, and gr. dau. of Chief Justice Robert Yates. The latter was born in Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 27, 1738. He received a classical education in New York City, and studied law with Wm. Livingston, Esq. He settled in Albany and was known as "the honest lawyer." He issued several essays on the rights and liberties of his country. He was a member of the Provincial Congress, and chairman of committee on military organization. In 1777 he framed the first Constitution of New York state, and was that year made Judge of Supreme Court. He held intimate relations with John Jay, Benj. Franklin, Chancellor Livingston, Gen. Philip Schuyler and Alexander Hamilton.

After the Revolutionary war Judge Yates was chosen with Gen. Hamilton and Chancellor Lansing to represent his state in the convention that framed the Constitution of the United States, and was a member of the state convention that ratified it. In 1790 he was appointed Chief Justice of New York. He twice ran for Governor, the second time receiving a majority of votes, but was not seated because of inaccurate returns. He retired from the bench in 1798 by constitutional limit, having been its ornament and pride for 21 years. The legislature then appointed him commissioner to settle disputed land titles, which office he held till near his death, which occurred Sept. 9, 1801, finishing his remarkable career "full of years and full of honors."

Major James Fairlie, father of Julia (Fairlie) Ogden, was a distinguished soldier of the Revolutionary war. He entered the army in 1776 when only 19 years old, and from 1778 was aide to Baron Steuben till the close of the war. Full of courage, but tender-hearted, he said his most painful duty was to obey Gen. Washington's order to be present at the execution of the unfortunate Major André. Count Pulaski, in writing to Benj. Franklin, said: "Speaking of the officers, there are some elegant young men among them,—Major Fairlie I would mention as one. He is quite young, only twenty-one, but for sagacity, wit, and knowledge of his profession, he has no superior: playful and satirical, or instructive, as he varies from one subject to another. I have taken much delight in his society, and think he has given me more instruction in pronouncing the English language than any other officer I have met with."

Major Fairlie distinguished himself in the battle of Monmouth, and remained with the army to the close of the war. He lived several years with Baron Steuben at his headquarters at Fishkill, and afterward at his log palace (which he facetiously called "The Louvre") in Steuben Co., N.Y. He assisted in founding the Cincinnati Society and, in 1784, was its second Secretary. He married Maria Yates, dau. of Chief Justice Robert Yates of Albany. He was twice member of the Assembly, Presidential Elector, Alderman, and delegate to frame the new Constitution of New York in 1821. President Madison offered him the position of Adjutant General during the War of 1812, which he declined. MAJOR FAIRLIE died at his home, 41 Cortlandt street, New York City, aged 73 years, and was buried with military honors, attended by the Cincinnati and the civic societies.

ANNA CORA (Ogden, Mowatt) RITCHIE was married before 16 years of age to JAMES MOWATT, a cultured young lawyer of New York City, who took up residence in a fine old Revolutionary house at Flatbush, L. I., called "Melrose." After 7 years of ideal happiness, Mr. Mowatt's eyesight began to fail, and he met with serious pecuniary losses. His wife having given early evidence of strong literary and dramatic talent, her devoted and heroic spirit prompted her to go on the stage for their mutual benefit. In 1841 she gave public readings, and her signal success led to preparation for dramatic effort. Her family strenuously objected to this, but her blameless life finally conquered their prejudices. She made her début at the Park Theatre as "Pauline" in "The Lady of Lyons." Her dramatic life developed her character and added new graces, and she gained laurels both at home and abroad. She wrote the play called "Fashion," which was performed with great success at the Park Theatre. Mr. Laurence Hutton gives Mrs. Mowatt the honor of having written the first American play. Mr. Mowatt died in London in 1849, and in obedience to his dying request, she wrote the "Autobiography of an Actress," in which her life story is charmingly told.

In 1854, having spent eight years on the stage, she retired, and married MR. WILLIAM FOUCHÉ RITCHIE, editor of the Richmond Inquirer. They made their home in a little vine-covered cottage in Richmond, Va., where Mrs. Mowatt-Ritchie was surrounded by a large circle of cultured friends. She became Vice President and an active helper in the Mt. Vernon Association. In 1860 Mrs. Ritchie accompanied an invalid sister to Paris, where her husband joined her a few months later. The Civil War caused Mr. Ritchie to return to Virginia in the interests of his business, but Mrs. Ritchie's impaired health forbade an ocean voyage. Despite ill health, she again took up her pen and contributed to the papers and magazines. She wrote three plays: "Fashion," "Armand," and "Gulzara." Among her stories were "Mimic Life," "Twin Roses," "Fairy-Fingers," "The Mute Singer," and "The Clergyman's Wife." She also wrote numerous essays and short poems. Surrounded by loving friends in her little villa at Twickenham, near London, she died in 1870, and was buried at Kensal Green beside the husband of her youth, Mr. Mowatt.

1156. Grace Priscilla Ogden, b. Brooklyn, N.Y., Sept. 18, 1840; m. July 7, 1875, Dr. Thomas Rainey, b. Yanceyville, N.C., Dec. 9, 1824; son of James Glen Rainey and Sophia Hendrick, his wife.

Grace Priscilla Ogden[1156] belongs to the Colonial Dames, Daughters American Revolution, Daughters of Cincinnati, and has read several biographical papers of merit before these societies.

Dr. Thomas Rainey is of Scotch-English ancestry. He was the oldest of 15 children by James Glen Rainey and Sophia Hendricks, of Yanceyville, N. C. He received his education in the Academy in Yanceyville, after which he went to Missouri and for a time engaged in school teaching. He became interested in scientific subjects, and gave his time for some years to lecturing along these lines in the Western States.

In 1847 he published "Rainey's Improved Abacus," a treatise on arithmetic and geometry, by cancellation, which had an extensive sale. He also established the Ohio Teacher and later the Western Review. He took part in the "Association for the Advancement of Education" held at Northampton, Mass., in 1850, also in the "American Association for the Advancement of Science," held at New Haven the same year, and was its local Secretary.

Entering politics, Dr. Rainey was a moving spirit in the Whig convention at Baltimore, that nominated General Scott for the presidency. He established the Cincinnati Daily Republican which became the first advocate for the organization of the Republican party. In 1853 his scientific friends urged him to go to South America, and had the U. S. Government appoint him Consul to Bolivia; his nomination was confirmed by the Senate, but he resigned. His friend, Hon. Jas. C. Dobbin, Sec'y of the Navy, urged him to drop literature, politics, and science, and go into steam in Brazil. In June, 1854, he set sail for the Amazon, where he spent much time in exploring the Para Valley. In 1855 he went to Rio de Janeiro, intending to make Brazil his future home, and this the Doctor always considered the great mistake of his life, "wasting" (as he termed it) "twenty years." He built and operated a fleet of steamers on the bay of Rio de Janeiro, which he controlled for some 14 years. Circumstances beyond his control, however, brought him financial loss and great disappointment, where success had seemed certain.

In 1856, Pres. Buchanan appointed Dr. Rainey to the mission of Brazil, which he accepted, but complications arose, and he was given the mission to Portugal instead, which he declined. But while in Europe he was again appointed to Brazil, the Senate confirmed the appointment, and Pres. Buchanan urged him to accept it, but he resigned.

The great financial crisis of 1857, together with the war clouds which began to dim the horizon, made investors wary, and brought business of all kinds to a stand. In the end Dr. Rainey, like many others, became the victim of other men less scrupulous.

Early in 1874 he returned to New York, and in June of that year married Miss Grace Priscilla Ogden[1156]. Soon after his marriage he undertook what proved to be his most unsuccessful venture,—that of building a bridge across the East River at Randall's Island. He spent many years and many thousands of dollars in the attempt to get the necessary legislation accomplished. The enterprise had warm friends, but it also had powerful opponents, and in the end the latter prevailed.

Dr. Rainey, with his kindly disposition and genial manner, and his accomplished wife, now live a retired life in New York City.

Margaret P. (Caldwell) Canfield[424], oldest child of Rev. James and Hannah (Ogden) Caldwell, was about 16 years old when her mother was brutally killed by a British soldier at Connecticut Farms, a hamlet near Elizabethtown, N. J. She was educated at Miss Hedden's select school in Newark. She was a woman of devout piety, "a mother in Israel," and deeply loved and respected by all who knew her. (See portrait, p. 98.)

Isaac Canfield, her husband, was of Morristown, N. J., and had been an active participant in the struggle for freedom, which ended but a short time before their marriage. He was a farmer and also kept a country store at the junction of the roads leading to Morristown, Dover, Whippany and Parsippany, and since called Malapardis. He later was a merchant in Morristown, and was appointed Major of the Morris Squadron, holding the commission from Dec. 2, 1807, to Feb. 3, 1812. He is said to have introduced the Virginia crab-apple into Morris county. Both he and wife are buried at Morristown, N. J. All their children were born at Morris Plains, except the youngest, who was born at Morristown.

CHILDREN (Chart 14):

1166. James Caldwell Canfield, b. Jan. 14, 1790; d. Feb. 14, 1827; m. Jan. 20, 1812, Betsy Vail, b. Jan. 7, 1794; d. Feb. 22, 1860; dau. of Henry Vail.

They had 5 children.

1174. Hannah Maria Canfield, b. Nov. 1, 1803; d. Maysville, Ky., Feb. 28, 1839; m. New York City, Feb. 11, 1836, Rev. Robert C. Grundy, of Kentucky.

They had 1 child.

1175. Rev. Josiah Flynt Canfield, b. Morristown, N. J., Mar. 22, 1808; d. Ocean City, N. J., Dec. 31, 1894; 1st m. Mar. 31, 1835, Sarah Campion; 2d m. Apr. 13, 1841, Sarah Elizabeth Jackson; 3d m. Sept. 3, 1845, Abigail Clark.

Rev. Josiah Flynt Canfield[1175] joined the New Jersey Conference of the Meth. Epis. Church, and after the Newark Conference was set off in 1856, he became a member of that body. He was a circuit rider for thirty years in the southern part of the state, having a great many charges. When he became superannuated, he removed to Springs Creek, near Curran, Sangamon Co., Ill., where he purchased eighty acres of land for farming and the cultivation of small fruits. He introduced some of the best varieties of fruit from New Jersey, particularly strawberries. He was largely instrumental in the introduction of the Early Rose potato, paying $48.00 per barrel for the seed, though he sold the increase at the market price of ordinary varieties, it ever being his desire to serve his fellow man. His last years were spent at Ocean City, N. J., and his remains were buried at Bargaintown, N. J.

There was 1 child by each the 1st and 2d m. and 3 children by the 3d m.

426. Hannah Caldwell (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Sept. 20, 1767; d. Feb. 20, 1825; 1st m. 1790, James R. Smith, b. 1761; d. June 4, 1817; son of Robert Smith and Janet McNaught, his wife; 2d m. 1820, Dr. John Richardson Bayard Rodgers, son of Rev. John Rodgers and Elizabeth Bayard, his wife. (See portrait, p. 98.)

James R. Smith was a prominent merchant of New York City. His residence was on Pearl street, then a fashionable quarter of the city, and afterward on Broadway. In 1820 his widow became the second wife of Dr. John R. B. Rodgers, a graduate of the University of Edinburgh in 1785. He was a patriot, an eminent surgeon, and a professor in Columbia Medical College. His father was the founder of Presbyterianism in New York City.

CHILDREN—First Marriage (Chart 14):

1176. Hannah Smith, b. ——; d.——; m. New York City, Matthew St. Clair Clarke, of Washington, D. C.

1177. Janet Smith, b. ——; d. ——; m. New York City, Rev. John X. Clarke, of Washington, D. C.

He was a brother of her sister's husb.

They had 1 child.

1178. James Caldwell Robertson Smith, b. ——; d. ——; m. Julia Halsey, b. Feb. 19, 1810; d. Feb. 10, 1872; dau. of Judge William Halsey and Julia Hedden, his wife, of Newark, N. J.

They had 3 children.

1179. Elizabeth Caldwell Smith, b. Mar. 28, 1808; d. Jacksonville, Ill., May 22, 1876; m. May 13, 1828, Governor Joseph Duncan of Ill., b. Feb. 22, 1794; d. Jan. 15, 1844; son of Major Joseph Duncan and Ann McLaughlin, his wife.

Elizabeth Caldwell Smith[1179] was educated in New York, and spent much time with her sister Mrs. Clarke in Washington. Here she met Mr. Duncan, then a member of Congress from Ill. and who had won renown as a general in the war of 1812. They first lived in Kaskaskia, an old French settlement on the Miss. river, and the first capital of Ill. They soon, however, removed to Jacksonville, where General Duncan continued to represent his state in Congress until 1834, when he was chosen Governor. He held the office four years, discharging its duties with fidelity to the state and honor to himself.

They had 10 children, only 3 of which grew to maturity.

427. John Edwards Caldwell (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Elizabethtown, N. J., Feb. 2, 1769; d. New York City, Mar. 9, 1819; 1st m. 1801, Louise ———; 2d m. 1806, Hannah (Ker) Van Wyck, b. ——; d. Fishkill, N. Y., Jan. 24, 1858, in 90th year; dau. of Rev. Nathan Ker and wid. of Theodorus Van Wyck.

After his father's death, John Edwards Caldwell[427] was by his guardian, Elias Boudinot, placed under the care of Rev. Dr. McWhorter of Newark, N. J. The Marquis de Lafayette, out of his great regard for the father, solicited and obtained permission to adopt and educate him, and upon his return to France in 1782 took his young charge with him as one of the family. He returned to America in 1791, and settled in Philadelphia where his guardian Mr. Boudinot was living. Here in 1801 he married his first wife, Louise, who died within a year, leaving an infant daughter. On June 25, 1801, he was appointed consular agent of the U. S. for the city of San Domingo, and other parts of the West Indies. He afterward removed to New York City, and in 1809 renounced Popery, which he had embraced in France, and became a member of the Cedar street Presbyterian Church of New York, being made an Elder in 1811. His name was connected with almost every good object of the day. He was one of the most active and influential founders of the American Bible Society, and until his death its General Agent. In 1816 he gave to this society $10,000. In Mar. 1816 he founded the Christian Herald, the first five volumes of which he edited and published at New York. He died greatly lamented at his home in New York City, Mar. 9, 1819. (See portrait, p. 98.)

His second wife, HANNAH (Ker, Van Wyck) CALDWELL, was the dau. of Rev. Nathan Ker, for many years pastor of the Pres. Ch. at Goshen, N. Y., where he died in 1804. She bore him no children, but tenderly reared her step-dau. Louise Caldwell.

Theodorus Van Wyck was son of Theodorus Van Wyck and Altje (Adeline) Brinkerhoff, his wife. His gr. father and gt. gr. father were also named Theodorus.

CHILD—FIRST MARRIAGE (Chart 15):

1180. LOUISE CALDWELL, b. Phila., Pa., 1801; d. Fishkill, N. Y., Apr. 26, 1837; m. 1823, REV. WILLIAM S. HEYER; b. 1799; d. Jan. 16, 1866, aged 67 yrs.

REV. WILLIAM S. HEYER was late of Newburg, N. Y., but had just prior to his marriage been installed pastor of the Dutch Ref. Ch. at Fishkill. Here their married life was spent. After the death of his wife LOUISE he married Anna M. Freeman, b. Feb. 1798; d. s. p. Newburg, May 11, 1881. They had 6 children.

MISS ELLEN HEYER, their third child, is now (1902) living in Newburg, N. Y., and has many interesting relics of the Caldwell family, among them being a watch given her gr. father John Edwards Caldwell[427] by the Marchioness de Lafayette, as a parting token when he left his foster parents in France to return to his native country to live.

428. JAMES BAXTER CALDWELL, ESQ. (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Elizabethtown, N. J., Jan. 8, 1771; d. Woodbury, N. J., Feb. 12, 1826; 1st m. HENRIETTA GILL; 2d m. NANCY BEVAN, of Philadelphia.

He was a talented lawyer, and took up his residence in Woodbury, N. J., where he was for many years an honored Judge of Gloucester Co. (See portrait, p. 98.)

CHILD—FIRST MARRIAGE (Chart 15):

1181. JAMES CALDWELL, b. ——; d. ——; m. ACHSA E. WARD.
They lived and died in Woodbury, N. J.

CHILD—SECOND MARRIAGE (Chart 15):

1182. ANNA CALDWELL, b. ——; d. unm. Philadelphia, 1896.

429. ESTHER FLYNT CALDWELL (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Oct. 26, 1772; d. Sept. 1844; m. May 16, 1798, REV. ROBERT FINLEY, b. 1772; d. ——; son of James Finley.

REV. ROBERT FINLEY was of Scotch ancestry. His father, James Finley, came from Glasgow to Princeton, N. J., in 1763, at the invitation of Dr. Witherspoon, a personal friend. Here Robert was born in 1772. He studied under Dr. Ashbel Green, and graduated from Princeton in 1788, at the age of 16. He taught school for several years in Charleston, S. C. and then decided to study for the ministry. Soon after receiving license to preach, he received a call from the Presbyterian Church at Basking Ridge, N. J., and this was his only charge. In 1817 he received a call to the presidency of Athens College, Georgia. He accepted the call, though at great cost in comfort and convenience to himself and family; a two weeks' voyage from New York to Savannah, and then a 200-mile drive over rough roads, taking fifteen days more. But they found kind people to welcome them, and gradually made a new home. The climate, together with the arduous labors in bringing the affairs of the college from a low ebb to a prosperous condition, proved too much for him, and his illness resulted in his death near the close of the year, dying Nov. 3, 1817.

After his death, the trustees volunteered to educate his eldest son James, free of charge. They also gave Mrs. Finley two valuable tracts of land in Athens. She died in Lebanon, Ill., in Sept., 1844, at the home of one of her children. (See portrait, p. 98.)

CHILDREN (Chart 15):

1183. Mary Ogden Finley, d. Apr. 13, 1799; d. Newark, N. J., 1863; m. New York City, 1817, John R. Davison.

John R. Davison was a wholesale merchant in New York City, and an Elder in the Old Brick Church (Dr. Spring's). He afterward removed to Newark with his family, and for many years was an Elder in Dr. Craven's church there.

They had 16 children.

1184. Helen Smith Finley, b. Dec. 11, 1800; d. Athens, Ga., Aug. 6, 1874; m. Aug. 9, 1820, Prof. James Camak.

They had 5 children.

1185. James Caldwell Finley, b. Oct. 10, 1802; d. Aug. 1885; m. Feb. 24, 1831, Margaret G. Smith, b. July 2, 1809; d. Aug. 1881.

They had 8 children.

1186. Robert Smith Finley, b. May 9, 1804; d. July, 1860; m. Julia Robbins, of Kentucky.

1187. Rev. Josiah Caldwell Finley, b. Nov. 28, 1805; d. Africa, circa 1839.

He was unmarried, and a missionary to Africa, where he was killed and eaten by cannibals.

1188. Anna Morford Finley, b. Feb. 15, 1807; d. unm. Lebanon, Ill., Sept., 1844.

1189. John Caldwell Finley, b. July 12, 1809; d. Pine Grove, La., Nov. 13, 1835; m. Eliza Fox.

They had 1 child.

They had 10 children.

1191. Hannah Smith Finley, b. Dec. 6, 1813; d. Jan. 4, 1892; m. Jan. 5, 1847, George McKinley, of Champaigne, Ill.

They had 4 children.

430. Josiah Flynt Caldwell (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Elizabethtown, N. J., Aug. 23, 1774; d. Washington, D. C., Nov. 15, 1859; m. Nov. 27, 1815, Margaret H. Magruder, b. ——; d. Mar. 7, 1878; dau. of Philip Magruder and Margaret Taylor, his wife.

At the time his parents were brutally slain by the British soldiery, Josiah Flynt Caldwell[430] was adopted by General Benj. Lincoln of Revolutionary fame, and sent to school at Hingham, Mass., the old home of the General. For some reason, not now plain, he was afterward bound as an apprentice to a hatter in Boston. The hatter's trade not proving to his liking, he ran away and for many years followed the sea. During the wars of Emperor Napoleon, Josiah Flynt Caldwell[430], as captain of his vessel, narrowly escaped capture a number of times from both French and English vessels. He afterward settled in Alexandria, Va. At the close of the war of 1812 he became financially embarrassed, gave up all he possessed to his creditors, and secured a clerkship under the government, which he held for more than thirty years, dying at the ripe old age of 85, respected by all who knew him. (See portrait, p. 98.)

CHILDREN (Chart 15):

1192. Elizabeth W. Caldwell, b. Sept. 19, 1816; d. May 6, 1817.

1193. Hannah Maria Caldwell, b. Apr. 8, 1818; d. Fonda, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1874; m. July, 1844, Stephen Sammons, of Fonda, N. Y.

They had 7 children.

1195. Margaret Magruder Caldwell, b. Aug. 5, 1821; d. Aug. 16, 1855; m. July 12, 1855, Thomas Robinson Rodgers, of New York City.

1196. Lafayette Caldwell, b. Aug. 12, 1823; d. Apr. 5, 1882; m. Nov. 2, 1853, Frances C. Babin, of Baton Rouge, La.

He was educated at West Point, and fought in the Confederate army.

They had 4 children.

1197. Elias Clarke Caldwell, b. Feb. 10, 1825; d. Washington, D. C., June 28, 1893; m. Sept. 5, 1861, Mary L. Taylor.

They had 2 children.

1198. John Calhoun Caldwell, b. July 26, 1826; d. Aug. 18, 1826.

1199. John Francis Caldwell, b. Nov. 18, 1827; living (1896); m. New Orleans, La., Jan. 1, 1862, Fanny McNairy, of Nashville, Tenn.

He lives at Dallas, Texas, and also served in the Confederate army.

They had 5 children.

1200. Emily Beale Caldwell, b. July 29, 1829; d. Sept. 1829.

1201. Esther Finley Caldwell, b. Dec. 5, 1831; d. July, 1832.

431. Elias Boudinot Caldwell, Esq. (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Apr. 3, 1776; d. May 30, 1825; 1st m. Elizabeth Boyd, of Georgetown, D. C.; 2d m. Ann Lingan.

The "Sayer Genealogy" says of him: "He was adopted by Elias Boudinot. He was a graduate of Princeton College, studied law with Hon. Elias Boudinot, and inherited his fine law library. He was appointed clerk of the Supreme Court at Washington in 1800, and held the office till his death, May 30, 1825. There is a fine portrait of him in the court room there." (See portrait, p. 98.)

CHILDREN—First Marriage (Chart 15):

1202. Anna Maria Caldwell, b. ——; d. ——; m. Samuel Hamilton, a Maryland planter. (No children mentioned.)

1203. Harriet Caldwell, b. ——; d. ——; m. Hon. Robert Wright, of Bladensburgh, Va. They had 5 children.

1204. Elias Boudinot Caldwell, Jr., b. ——; d. ——.

CHILD—Second Marriage (Chart 15):

1205. John Edwards Caldwell, b. ——; d. Pass Christian, Miss., Aug. 19, 1869, aged 54 years; m. Iberville Parish, La., Feb. 12, 1851, Mary Louise Lloyd.

They had 3 children.

432. SARAH CALDWELL (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Springfield, N. J., June 12, 1778; d. Somerville, N. J., Aug. 25, 1826; m. New York City, Apr. 22, 1800, REV. JOHN SCHUREMAN VREDENBURGH, b. New Brunswick, N. J., Mar. 30, 1776; d. Somerville, N. J., Oct. 4, 1821; son of Peter Vredenburgh and Margarita Schureman, his wife.

REV. JOHN SCHUREMAN VREDENBURGH was many years pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church at Somerville, N. J. All of their eleven children were born there, but were baptized at Raritan, N. J.

All the daughters of the family were gifted women, the most of them noteworthy, and carried out the spirit of the Caldwell motto: "Niti Facere Experiri" (endeavor, perform, prove).

CHILDREN (Chart 15):

1206. HANNAH SMITH VREDENBURGH, b. Jan. 24, 1801; d. Dec. 4, 1833; m. Nov. 17, 1824, REV. DR. JOSEPH ATKINSON PAINTER, b. 1799; d. 1873.

HANNAH S. (Vredenburgh) PAINTER was a sweet-spirited and amiable woman, acceptably filling the arduous position of a pastor's wife. She died at the early age of 32 years, when her fourth child, ANNA SMITH PAINTER, was three weeks old.

The latter was adopted by MRS. PAINTER's sister, Mrs. Woodward, of Elizabeth, N. J. She was b. Nov. 17, 1833; d. Memphis, Tenn., May 5, 1862; m. in aunt Harriet Woodward's home, May 20, 1857, to COL. A. B. COFFEY, of Tennessee. They had 2 children, who died infants. MRS. COFFEY died at Memphis, while the city was being bombarded by the Federal gunboats. COL. COFFEY was in the Confederate army, and was killed Apr. 15, 1865, in a skirmish with Stoneman's Cavalry, at Statesville, N. C.

The REV. DR. PAINTER was a Presbyterian minister. He was first settled at Minsport, Pa., second at Newbury, Pa., and finally at Kittanning, Pa.

They had 4 children.

1207. MARGARET SCHUREMAN VREDENBURGH, b. Sept. 21, 1802; d. Elizabethtown, N. J., Jan. 14, 1849; m. Elizabethtown, REUBEN VAN PELT, b. June 20, 1803; d. Elizabeth, N. J., Dec. 19, 1879.

MARGARET S. (Vredenburgh) VAN PELT was a model Christian wife and mother, and was greatly beloved by the entire community.

REUBEN VAN PELT was an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church, of Elizabethtown, N. J.

They had 7 children.

After the death of his first wife, REUBEN VAN PELT married her youngest sister, No. 1216, KATHERINE VEGHTE VREDENBURGH, then the widow of Rev. Jonathan P. Alward, and by whom she bore no children.

1208. MARIA CALDWELL VREDENBURGH, b. June 21, 1804; d. unm. Mar. 19, 1829.

1209. PETER VREDENBURGH, b. Dec. 12, 1805; d. Jan. 3, 1817.

1210. HARRIET VAN WYCK VREDENBURGH, b. Aug. 14, 1807; d. s. p. Elizabeth, N. J., July 1, 1876; m. MATTHEW W. WOODWARD, M.D., of Elizabeth, b. ——; d. Feb. 7, 1883, aged 76 years.

DR. and MRS. WOODWARD resided at Elizabeth, N. J., and had no children of their own, but adopted and educated two nieces, ANNA SMITH PAINTER[1206d] and MARGARET MONTGOMERY[1214a], both of whom had been left motherless. They were given a fine education, and both developed into lovely womanhood, well sustaining the characteristics of the Caldwell family.

1212. Elizabeth Nevius Vredenburgh, b. Dec. 22, 1810; d. Futteguhr, India, June 13, 1857; m. Rev. John Edgar Freeman. She was his second wife.

They went as missionaries to India, where in 1857 they were massacred in the Sepoy mutiny at Futteguhr (or Cawnpore). A beautiful monument was erected by the British Government over their graves and those of six other missionaries and their children at Cawnpore, who perished at that time. It stands in the city, and every vehicle that passes it slackens its pace to a walk, every band of music stops playing, and every person in passing bares his head.

It is worthy of mention that Elizabeth (Vredenburgh) Freeman's[1212] grandfather, father, and husband, were all clergymen. Her grandfather, the Rev. James Caldwell, pastor of the First Pres. Church of Elizabethtown, N. J., and an ardent patriot and chaplain of the Revolutionary War, was known as "the soldier's parson." His house and church were burned by the Tories, and himself was shot and killed at Elizabethtown Point. His wife, Hannah (Ogden) Caldwell[142], who had taken refuge at Connecticut Farms (now Union, N. J.), was shot by a British soldier while praying with her children. This tragic history ended with the shooting of Mrs. Freeman and her devoted husband by the Sepoys.

1213. Helen Wyckoff Vredenburgh, b. July 6, 1812; d. unm. Somerville, N. J., Dec. 29, 1849.

1214. Sarah Van Neste Vredenburgh, b. May 13, 1815; d. Mar. 12, 1849; 1st m. Daniel Strawbridge Montgomery; 2d m. John L. Watson.

There was 1 child by 1st m.

1215. Rev. John Finley Vredenburgh, b. Nov. 12, 1817; d. July 19, 1844 or 1845.

He was a missionary, and died at Batavia, Java.

1216. Katherine Veghte Vredenburgh, b. Sept. 1, 1819; d. Boston, Oct. 3, 1886; 1st m. Rev. Jonathan Pennington Alward, b. ——; d. s. p. Africa; 2d m. Reuben Van Pelt, her brother-in-law.

They went as missionaries to Africa, where Rev. Alward died, leaving no children. After his death his wife returned to America and lived several years in Elizabeth, N. J., where she married Reuben Van Pelt, husband to her deceased sister No. 1207, Margaret S. (Vredenburgh) Van Pelt.

There were 4 children by 2d m.

433. Maria Caldwell (Hannah Ogden[142], John[46], David[9], David[3], John[1]), b. Connecticut Farms, N. J., Sept. 29, 1779; d. New York City, Apr. 5, 1852; m. New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 22, 1804, Robert S. Robertson, b. ——; d. Apr. 26, 1866.

Upon the death of her parents, Maria Caldwell[433] was adopted by Mrs. Garret Noel of Elizabethtown, N. J., a steadfast friend of the Caldwell family. Her married life was mostly spent in New York City, where her husband was a merchant, senior member of the firm of "Robertson & Kelso." Mr. Robertson failed in business in 1823, and secured employment in the New York Custom House, a position he held for many years. They attended the Scotch Presbyterian Church, where Mr. Robertson's father was a Deacon, but it is believed they were members of old Cedar Street Church.

Mrs. Noel's only daughter Eleanor married Rev. Walter Monteith, and being early made a widow, and her mother being dead, she came to live with Mrs. Robertson[433], in whose home she was a welcome and beloved member of the family till her death in 1831, thus repaying the noble debt of gratitude. (See portrait, p. 98.)

CHILDREN (Chart 15):

1217. Alexander Robertson, M.D., b. Aug. 1, 1805; d. St. Thomas, Nov. 8, 1835; 1st m. Feb. 17, 1830, Henrietta Heyer, b. ——; d. s. p. Oct. 30, 1830; 2d m. Dec. 20, 1833, Harriet Gilbert, b. ——; d. within year after marriage; dau. of Clinton Gilbert.

Alexander Robertson[1217] was a physician, and, becoming broken in health, he visited the island of St. Thomas to recuperate, but died there.

There was 1 child by 2d m.

1218. Rev. Noel Robertson, b. New York City, Feb. 10, 1807; d. unm. Manayunk, Pa., Oct. 22, 1835

"Capt. David Ogden[447] came to Genoa [Cayuga Co., N. Y.] from Nanticoke, near Binghamton, in 1797. His wife came on horseback, carrying an infant in her arms. For nearly 40 years he was the 'middleman' of this section, dealing largely in grain, stock, pork and beef. For many years he was largely engaged in merchandise. After the completion of the Erie Canal (an enterprise which he promoted with money and influence) he was actively interested in boating; he was also the owner of 300 acres of land and was consequently a large farmer. In addition to this he at one time kept a public house, and was postmaster for many years. Many branches of his business were conducted under unfavorable circumstances; the country was new; the channels of trade were unformed,—the principal markets (Quebec, New York and Baltimore) were not only distant, but difficult of access. Railroads were unknown, the Erie Canal was not completed until 1825, and postal communication was slow and uncertain. Travel required much time and was often attended with danger. Under these circumstances business like his, so extensive and varied, demanded great executive ability and indomitable energy; qualities which he possessed in a remarkable degree. The town of Genoa owes much to the active life and public spirit of Capt. David Ogden."

Mary (Ogden) Kellogg[1277] was deeply interested in her family history, and took unflagging interest in tracing her ancestry back to Good Old John Ogden of Elizabethtown, N. J. She labored under the disadvantage of poor eyesight, and finally became blind. However, she continued her correspondence and searches and dictated many letters, keeping up the work to the end of her life. Her last letters were written in the effort to know definitely the link back of her grandfather No. 147, Joseph Ogden. She had been misled by the first Ogden chart, prepared by Francis Barber Ogden, some years ago, who had her grandfather grouped with the children of No. 87, David Ogden and Hannah Woodruff. This was found to be incorrect, and other children assigned to David having been proved to belong to No. 46, John Ogden and Hannah Sayer, Joseph was naturally placed with them. He without doubt belongs to the Ogdens of Elizabethtown, and the evidence at hand makes him the youngest child of No. 46, Judge John Ogden.

Mary (Ogden) Kellogg[1277] was an estimable Christian woman. Amid her great afflictions and deprivations, her sufferings and loss of sight but developed her womanly virtues, and she patiently and faithfully pursued her duties to the end, having been an inspiration and benediction to all who knew her.

After the death of ANNA (Ogden) WETMORE, JUDGE WETMORE married her sister, No. 457, JERUSHA OGDEN, by whom he had no children.

JUDGE WILLIAM WETMORE was born in Middletown, Conn., and died in Ohio. The "Wetmore Genealogy" says of him: "Judge William Wetmore, together with his sons William and Henry, had a flouring-mill and saw-mill, also a distillery in that part of Cuyahoga village lying in the town of Stow. He was much respected in northern Ohio, and like his brother Seth was very conscientious, never pursuing the wrong when he knew the right. Upon reading Rev. George B. Cheever's tract entitled 'The Deacon's Distillery' he at once turned his distillery into a sheep pen. He is said to have been the first settler of Stow, O."

and New Haven, and in 1821 was ordained and installed pastor of the church in Southington, Conn., where he labored with marked success for fifteen years. In 1836 he removed to Whitesboro, N. Y., where he was highly esteemed. Was a corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and a member of the corporation of Hamilton College. He next had pastoral care of a church in Marlboro', Mass., which he resigned in 1850, and returned to New Haven, giving up public life to pass the remainder of his days in the bosom of his family. He was a frequent contributor to the Christian Spectator and to the New Englander, and was the author of a volume of 'Discourses on Baptism and Close Communion.'"

His last ministerial charge was at Easton, Conn. He had visited his home in New Haven for a few days' rest, and was to have exchanged pulpits with a Bridgeport pastor, when he was taken suddenly ill on the preceding Saturday, and expired. He was buried in Grove St. Cemetery, New Haven.

A New Haven paper pays the following tribute to his worth: "Mr. Ogden was both gifted as a preacher and devoted to his parish work. His remarkable social nature and vivacious conversational powers won him many friends, and his generous disposition and untiring acts of kindness for others made those friendships lasting."

473. Catharine Ogden (Isaac[174], David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. ——; d. before 1823; m. Major Andrews, of the British Army.

She was probably born in Newark, N. J., and after her father, Judge Isaac Ogden affiliated with the Royalists during the Revolutionary War, and was compelled to find refuge in Canada, Catharine[473] doubtless accompanied the family, and passed through its vicissitudes there and in England.

475. David Ogden, Esq. (Isaac[174], David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. after 1772; d. before 1823; m. July 15, 1815, Ann Richardson, b. 1797; d. 1880; dau. of the Hon. John Richardson and Sarah Ann Grant, his wife, of Montreal, Canada.

David Ogden, Esq.[475] was a leading lawyer of Montreal. His marriage is thus recorded in Christ Church, Montreal: "1815 July 15, David Ogden, Esq of Montreal, Advocate—son of Hon. Isaac Ogden, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Court of Kings Bench of the District of Montreal, and Sarah Hanson his wife, and ANN RICHARDSON of same place, spinster, a minor aged 18 years, daughter of Hon. John Richardson, member of His Majesty's Executive Council for Province of Lower Canada, and of Sarah Ann Grant, his wife, were married by license of me.

J. MORMTAIN, Minister.

"In the presence of John Forsyth, Esq. merchant and John McGarrish, merchant."

Christ Church, Montreal, has a tablet to the memory of Hon. John Richardson, born at Portney, North Britain, 1755; died at Montreal, May 18, 1831; also a memorial window to him and his wife, Sarah Ann Grant.

Thomas Brown Anderson, Esq., of Montreal, brings for registration his marriage contract with Mrs. Ann Richardson, widow of late David Ogden[475], advocate, stipulating exclusion of community and of dower continuous, in lieu of which he endows her with £2000 as dower prefix, and other advantages. Date, Dec. 11, 1827.

He was a man of intelligence, mental equipment and executive ability, and one of the foremost men of his time. He was Captain of His Majesty's 56th Reg't, and for forty years Sheriff of Three Rivers, Quebec, Canada. He was probably born in New York City, as his father, Judge Isaac Ogden[174], a Royalist, fled to England at the evacuation of the British, Nov. 25, 1783. The family took up residence in Canada in 1788, where Judge Isaac's family were reared.

479. Hon. Charles Richard Ogden (Isaac[174], David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. Feb. 6, 1791; d. Feb. 1866; 1st m. Mary Aston Coffin, b. 1804; d. July 10, 1827; dau. of Gen. John Coffin; 2d m. by license Aug. 10, 1829, Susan Clarke, dau. of Isaac Winslow Clarke and Jane Desmond, his wife.

Charles Richard Ogden's[479] father, Judge Isaac Ogden[174], having united with the Royalist party during the Revolution, and for that reason being required to abandon his property in Newark, N. J., and flee to England in 1783, all his family became subjects of Great Britain. After the close of the war, he was appointed Judge of the Admiralty at Quebec by King George III. in 1788, and at once proceeded to his seat of office.

His son, CHARLES RICHARD OGDEN[479], was born in Quebec, Canada, Feb. 6, 1791, and was educated by the Rev. Mr. Doty of Three Rivers, and Mr. Shakel of Montreal, where he studied law. In 1812 he was called to the bar and began his practice at Three Rivers. Subsequently he returned to Montreal and formed a partnership with Mr. Buchanan of that city. The firm became eminent and enjoyed a large and lucrative practice. In 1815, he was elected member of Assembly for the town of Three Rivers, and continued to represent that constituency for seven successive Parliaments, and until advised by Lord Aylmer that, in the opinion of the Colonial Office, "it would be better that the public officers of the Province should exercise 'a cautious abstinence' from the great political questions of the day." Upon this hint, Mr. Ogden, being H. M. Attorney-General, resigned his seat in the Assembly and retired from political life, as he supposed, for ever.

The following facts are gleaned from a biographical sketch of his life published in a Quebec newspaper. "In 1815 he had received a silk gown from Sir Gordon Drummond, and in 1818, the Duke of Richmond had appointed him to act as H. M. Attorney-General for the District of Three Rivers. In 1823, Lord Dalhousie, in very flattering terms, recommended him for the office of Solicitor-General, and His Majesty was pleased to confer that office upon him, accordingly. In 1833, he was appointed Attorney-General for Lower Canada by King William IV. and was reappointed to that office by Queen Victoria on her accession to the throne. From the date of his appointment, until the year 1837, Mr. Ogden resided in Quebec; but in that year the breaking out of the rebellion made it his duty to proceed to Montreal, where he continued to reside until the union of the Provinces in 1841. In 1838 the Constitution of Lower Canada was suspended by Act of the Imperial Parliament, and the special Council for the affairs of that Province was created. As Attorney-General, and as a leading member of that Council, Mr. Ogden, who had in the meantime declined to accept the office of Chief Justice of the district of Montreal, offered him by the Earl of Durham, bore necessarily a large part in conducting the Government of the country, under Sir John Colborne (afterwards Lord Seaton), the Earl of Durham and Mr. Poulett Thomson, afterwards Lord Sydenham, and in the measures and proceedings necessary to bring into operation the Act for the Union of the Canadas, and to carry out its provisions, and he officially countersigned the proclamation by which the two Provinces were made one on Feb. 10, 1841, the first anniversary of Her Majesty's wedding day. The opinions held at the Colonial Office had by this time undergone a remarkable change, and instead of being enjoined a 'cautious abstinence' from politics, Mr. Ogden was informed by Lord Sydenham, that he was expected to take a most active part in them, to obtain a seat in the Legislative Assembly, and to form part of the Canadian Ministry; that his emoluments were to be reduced, and that he would have to reside at Kingston, the new seat of Government; and he was possibly not without a presentiment that his tenure of office might depend on the will of a parliamentary majority. These were not the terms upon which he had accepted office; they were hard, and he remonstrated against them; but he was told that H. M. Government held this change to be necessary to the success of the policy they had adopted, and he submitted, and was again returned by his old friends the electors of Three Rivers. He and his colleagues conducted the Government through the first session of the Parliament of United Canada, and brought that session to a successful close, introducing and carrying many important and useful measures. The untimely death of Lord Sydenham turned the administration of the Government upon Sir Richard Jackson, the Commander of H. M. Forces, from whom, after having made all the arrangements necessary for carrying out the legislation of the session, Mr. Ogden obtained leave of absence for six months, subsequently extended to a year, in order to make the voyage to Europe for the recovery of his health, which had suffered severely from the great labors and anxiety to which he had for several years been subjected. On his return, before his leave of absence had expired, he found that, during that absence, he and the ministry of which he formed part had been removed from office by Sir Charles Bagot, and that Mr. Lafontaine and his friends held the reins of Government. He remonstrated, represented that he had accepted the appointment of Attorney-General when the tenure of that office was virtually during good behavior, and claimed redress, but in vain. Sir Charles sent a message to the Legislative Assembly, recommending him for a super-annuation allowance of £625 per annum; but no motion was made to refer the message to the Committee of Supply, until the day next before that fixed for the prorogation, when it was met by an amendment that it should be considered in the next session, which, according to parliamentary usage, it could not be; and it was never renewed. Mr. Ogden felt that as a public man his connection with the Province was at an end. He retired to England and appealed to the Imperial Government, but was told that his claim was against that of Canada. His services were fully acknowledged and he was offered several colonial appointments of more or less value, which he declined; but having been in most flattering manner called to the English Bar, he eventually accepted the Attorney-Generalship of the Isle of Man, and was afterwards, upon the passing of the new Probate Act in 1857, appointed to the office of District Registrar at Liverpool, and held both these appointments to the time of his decease.

"As a public officer Mr. Ogden performed his duties, often of the most arduous and trying nature, ably, fearlessly and impartially; and that he fulfilled them to the satisfaction of his Sovereign and her advisers is manifest from the important offices successively conferred on him, and the high trust reposed in him and never disappointed. In the conduct of cases before the courts of criminal jurisdiction he was singularly successful, and this mainly because, while he was earnest in enforcing the law, he never forgot that justice should be administered in mercy. As a member of the Assembly of Lower Canada he was bold and uncompromising in his advocacy of what he believed to be the right, speaking plainly what he thought in the face of overwhelming majorities, respected and even liked by his bitterest political opponent for his manliness and honesty, his frankness and good temper. On the dark and troublesome days and deplorable events between 1837 and 1841, and Mr. Ogden's relations to them, it is unnecessary to comment here; a quarter of a century has since passed away, and we may leave them to the historian; he had a most difficult and painful duty to perform, and we believe few could or would have performed it better. Whatever differences of opinion may have existed as to the policy which he was called upon to carry out, one thing at least is beyond a doubt—in the readjustment of affairs after the storm was passed, he exerted himself strenuously to secure just rights to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

"In private life Mr. Ogden was an amiable and estimable man, of a genial and fun-loving temperament, fond of frolic and happy at a joke. Kind and liberal to all under him or about him, and never forgetting a friend or a service rendered, he had that power most essential to a public man, and possessed most remarkably by the greatest, of distinguishing those able to do good service and attaching them firmly and affectionately to him.

"He died as he had lived, a sincere and pious member of the Church of England, in which he had been brought up from his infancy, and to which he was most firmly attached."

Mary Aston (Coffin) Ogden, first wife of Charles Richard Ogden[479], and dau. of Gen. John Coffin, was an estimable woman. It is said her ancestors in Boston were the ones to whom the cargo of tea was consigned that started the Revolutionary war.

Susan (Clarke) Ogden, the second wife, was eldest dau. of Isaac Winslow Clarke, Deputy Commissary General at Montreal, and a niece of Lord Lyndhurst.

480. Peter Skene Ogden (Isaac[174], David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. 1794; d. Oregon City, Sept. 24, 1854, aged 60 years; m. Julia Reava.

Peter Skene Ogden[480] was one of the most illustrious members of Judge Isaac Ogden's[174] family. The father having espoused the Royalist side in the early part of the Revolution, and being required to abandon his property in Newark, N. J., and to flee with his family to Canada, the son, Peter Skene Ogden[480], was doubtless born there. His middle name was derived from the Skene family of Skenesboro, N. Y., on the southern shore of Lake Champlain, now known as Whitehall. They came from Skene, near Aberdeen, Scotland, where the family had been distinguished in war and literature. Philip Skene was Lieut. Gov. of Crown Point and Ticonderoga, and with his son, Andrew Philip Skene, entertained the same political opinions as did Judge David Ogden[50] and his son Judge Isaac Ogden[174]. There was a community of interests between the two families, and a warm and lasting friendship. An "Andrew" Skene, probably the son aforenamed, and an eminent jurist, was godfather of Peter Skene Ogden[480]. He and the latter's father, Judge Isaac Ogden[174], went to England to petition the Crown for redress in losses incurred during the war, not only for their fathers' families, but for Loyalists generally.

Peter Skene Ogden[480] was destined to become one of the most able, energetic and renowned spirits of the great Northwest section of America. He was for a short time in the service of Mr. Astor, but in 1811 he entered the service of the Northwest Company, and after the latter was amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay Company in 1821, he was at once transferred to the Western department. He was active in establishing trading posts with Indian tribes, and negotiating commercial relations with them. In one of his expeditions he discovered the Humboldt River. At this time he is described as being "short, dark-skinned, and rather rough in his manner, but lively and witty, and a favorite with everybody. He was a great practical joker, carrying his love of fun and frolic to great lengths."

For twenty years subsequent to 1824, John McLaughlin had been the dominant spirit of the Hudson's Bay Co. and of the northwest coast, residing at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River. Because of his humanity toward distressed emigrants and undue familiarity with United States settlers, the London management sought to weaken his position by vesting the supreme power on the Pacific in a board of management consisting of McLaughlin, James Douglas and Peter Skene Ogden as chief factors. When Dr. McLaughlin retired, Douglas and Ogden continued the management as a board with headquarters still at Fort Vancouver. Bancroft calls them "fearless, warm-hearted, open-handed and clear-headed."

In 1846 James Douglas had removed to Vancouver Island, where a post had been established at Victoria, and which became the Company's headquarters, and Peter Skene Ogden was in command on the Columbia. He was a man of wonderful genius and tact, and whenever the Hudson's Bay Co. had occasion to send one of their officers on a delicate and dangerous mission, PETER SKENE OGDEN was the man chosen for it. A writer says of him: "His even temper, his great flow of good humor, and his wonderful patience, tact and perseverance, his utter disregard of personal inconvenience and suffering, rendered him just the man for any difficult or dangerous task, He was greatly esteemed by his brother officers and almost worshipped by his men and by the Indians."

PETER SKENE OGDEN

After more than thirty years of these experiences, his last great work was in connection with the Whitman massacre at Waiilatpu in 1847 by the Cayuses, when the missionary Dr. Whitman, his wife, and nine other whites were slain by the savages. Within twenty-four hours after Mr. McBean's messenger arrived with tidings of the murderous work of the Cayuses, a force was equipped and dispatched under command of MR. OGDEN for Walla Walla, where the surviving captives were held by the Indians. The whole matter of rescue being left to MR. OGDEN, he made haste to negotiate with the Indians before an American army could reach them, knowing full well that if it were known that a company of militia was marching on Walla Walla, the rage of the savages would know no bounds, and that every captive would be slain. Taking sixteen men, he left Vancouver, Oregon, on Dec. 7, and hastened up the Columbia to The Dalles, where he found the Indians had the previous day taken four horses from the Mission enclosure, signifying nothing less than hostilities. Upon MR. OGDEN'S advice, Mr. Hinman removed his family and all other Americans at The Dalles to Willamette. OGDEN and his party arrived at Fort Walla Walla on the evening of Dec. 19, and found that none of the captives had been killed, although they had been "decreed against." Prior to MR. OGDEN'S arrival, and as soon as Mr. McBean had learned the intention of the Cayuses, he sent his interpreter to warn them that "they had already gone too far," and to request them to desist from further crimes. "When my messenger arrived," he says, "Indian women, armed with knives and other implements of war, were already assembled near the house where the captives were, awaiting the order of chief Tiloukaikt, who was present. On being informed of my request, he hung down his head and paused, then with a wave of his hand peremptorily ordered the women away, who, abusing him, called him a coward."

MR. OGDEN'S first effort was to call a council of chiefs to learn their plans in regard to their prisoners. Couriers were immediately dispatched and the council assembled on the 23d. The Indians' hope of securing peace with the Americans depended upon the retaining of Mr. Spalding and the captive families as hostages. OGDEN'S speech on the occasion was as follows: "We have been among you for thirty years, without the shedding of blood. We are traders, and of a different nation from the Americans. But, recollect, we supply you with ammunition, not to kill Americans, who are of the same color, speak the same language, and worship the same God as ourselves, and whose cruel fate causes our hearts to bleed. Why do we make you chiefs if you cannot control your young men? Beside this wholesale butchery, you have robbed the Americans passing through your country, and have insulted their women. If you allow your young men to govern you, I say you are not men or chiefs, but hermaphrodites who do not deserve the name. Your hot-headed young men plume themselves on their bravery; but let them not deceive themselves. If the Americans begin war, they will have cause to repent their rashness, for the war will not end until every man of you is cut off from the face of the earth! I am aware that many of your people have died. But so have others. It was not Dr. Whitman who poisoned them; but God who has commanded that they should die. You have the opportunity to make some reparation. I give you only advice, and promise you nothing, should war be declared against you. The company will have nothing to do with your quarrel. If you wish it, on my return I will see what can be done for you; but I do not promise to prevent war. Deliver me the prisoners to return to their friends and I will pay you a ransom, that is all."

Mr. Ogden wished to secure the rescue of the prisoners without altering the relations of the company with the Indians, whose friendship they had long possessed and did not want to lose; neither would he anticipate the action of the American Government or people. Bancroft continues: "The Indian impulse, shifting as the sands of the sea, gave way to Ogden's superior will. With some weak efforts to excuse the disposition to yield, Tauitau consented to the ransom of the captives. The Hudson's Bay Company's men were married to Indian women, and were therefore his brothers; he could not refuse his brother's request. Tiloukaikt, besides the tie of blood, recognized the claim of the company upon him made by allowing their dead to be buried side by side. 'Chief!' he cried, 'your words are weighty —your hairs are gray. We have known you a long time. You have had an unpleasant journey to this place. I cannot, therefore, keep the families back. I make them over to you, which I would not do to another younger than yourself.' " Peupeumoxmox remarked the Americans were changeable, but agreed to release of captives. The Nez Perce chiefs consented to return to Lapwai at once and bring Mr. Spalding the missionary and others at that station. Mr. Ogden sent a letter by the young chiefs urging Mr. Spalding to lose no time in joining him at Walla Walla. He despatched another letter to the Chemakane Mission in which he expressed his great anxiety which had not permitted him to sleep for two nights. This letter was not written till Dec. 31, and the alarm was occasioned by the fact that he had no sooner received the captives on the 29th as per agreement, than a rumor reached the natives of the arrival of the first company of volunteer riflemen at Walla Walla. But to his great relief Mr. Spalding arrived Jan. 1, accompanied by a large force of Nez Perces. "After spending another night in earnest council with these natives, always more friendly and tractable than their relatives the Cayuses, Ogden embarked the ransomed company for Vancouver, thankful to be able to do so."

"A courier bearing a dispatch to Gov. Abernethy of Oregon Ter'y reached Oregon City on Sunday morning. The letter, stating that Mr. and Mrs. Spalding, Mr. Stanley, the artist, and all the captive women and children were under Mr. Ogden's care and had reached Vancouver, was read before the congregation, and the greatest excitement prevailed of mingled gladness, gratitude, and sorrow." The ransomed captives were delivered to the Governor in Oregon City the following day. As the three boats passed Portland, as also on arrival at the Falls, a salute was fired, "the compliment being intended to express the general gratitude of the people to the gallant man who had effected their release."

On the 17th the Governor indited the following letter to Mr. Ogden: "Sir: I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to tender you my sincere thanks, and the thanks of this community, for your exertions in behalf of the widows and orphans that were left in the hands of the Cayuse Indians. Their state was a deplorable one, subject to the caprice of savages, exposed to their insults, compelled to labor for them, and remaining constantly in dread lest they should be butchered as their husbands and fathers had been. From this state I am fully satisfied we could not relieve them. A small party of Americans would have been looked upon with contempt; a large party would have been a signal for a general massacre. Your immediate departure from Vancouver on receipt of the intelligence from Waiilatpu enabling you to arrive at Walla Walla before the news of the American party having started from this reached them, together with your influence over the Indians, accomplished the desirable object of relieving the distressed. Your exertions in behalf of the prisoners will no doubt cause a feeling of pleasure to you through life, but this does not relieve them nor us from the obligations we are under to you. You have also laid the American government under obligation to you, for their citizens were the subjects of the massacre, and their widows and orphans are the relieved ones. With a sincere prayer that the widow's God and the Father of the fatherless may reward you for your kindness, I have the honor to remain, your obedient servant,

"George Abernethy,
"Governor of Oregon Territory.

"To Peter Skene Ogden, Esq.,
"Chief Factor Honorable H. B. Company, Vancouver."

Mr. Ogden replied as follows:

"George Abernethy, Esq., Governor of Oregon Territory. Sir: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your highly flattering letter of the 19th inst., and the high value you lay upon my services in rescuing so many fellow-creatures from captivity, but the meed of praise is not due to me alone. I was the mere acting agent of the Hudson's Bay Company; for without its powerful aid and influence nothing could have been effected, and to them the praise is due. And permit me to add, should, unfortunately, which God avert, our services be again required under similar circumstances, I trust you will not find us wanting in going to their relief. I have the honor to remain,

"Yours most respectfully,

"Peter Skene Ogden."

Mr. Ogden's letter appeared in the Spectator, prefaced by the remark that "the act of rescuing so many defenceless women and children from the bloody and cruel grasp of savages merits, and we believe receives, the universal thanks and gratitude of the people of Oregon. Such an act is the legitimate offspring of a noble, generous, and manly heart."

Peter Skene Ogden[480] came east in 1844, and in 1853 visited Canada, England, and the United States, and called upon his brothers and sisters. It had been his habit to correspond with his father and mother during their lives, and with his brothers and sisters to the time of his death, often inclosing contributions from his generous purse.

As to his domestic life, Peter Skene Ogden[480] married Julia Reava, a lady presumably of Indian descent, to whom he was always devotedly attached, and who was the mother of all his children. He died in Oregon City, Sept. 27, 1854, aged 60 years. His will is dated June 15, 1851, and was probated May 15, 1855. The executors were Sir George Simpson, Gov. of Rupert's Land, Archibald McKinley, of the Hudson's Bay Co., and Thomas B. Anderson, of Montreal, Can. The will disposes of about £4,600 beside Montreal Bank stock, and shares in Pugets Sound Agricultural Co., to his children, grandchildren, to Ann (Ogden) Hopkins[1334], to brother Henry's[476] youngest daughter, and to Fabien Resel, son of Joseph Resel, for his education, he having been adopted when 8 mos. old by Mr. Ogden.

JUDGE DAVID A. OGDEN[485] was born in New Jersey, his father Abraham Ogden[176] being Surrogate of Morris Co. and residing in Morristown until after the Revolutionary War, when the family removed to Newark.

"With all the advantages of a college education and early associations of the best character, together with strong hereditary claims to natural ability of a high order, he took up the study of the law in the city of New York, and in due time entered the profession, soon attaining both eminence and success. On 30 May 1797, he married REBECCA CORNELL EDWARDS, a southern lady of distinction, and was for some years a resident of the city of New York.

"It was at a time, however, when the public mind was largely under the influence of what was known at the time as the 'Expansion Idea,' and the great Louisiana Purchase of 1803. The nascent possibilities of the young and vigorous country were becoming more and more obvious to the thoughtful mind; they appealed most forcibly to the young lawyer. The example, too, of his personal friends and near relatives who were then investing in northern wild lands, and also urging him to represent their interests in that locality, so far strengthened his own convictions that he finally concluded to identify himself with the opening up and development of St. Lawrence county in the northern part of the state of New York and bordering on the majestic St. Lawrence river. Accordingly, during the intervals of business, he made frequent visits there, at the same time investing largely for himself and others in the wild lands of the county in the vicinity of Ogdensburg (which took its name from him) and of Hamilton, afterward called Waddington, at which point he proposed eventually to settle. Here he arranged plans for the utilization of the fine water power, and the construction of the necessary dam and bridge to the island, and other improvements, availing himself temporarily of local agents for the conduct and supervision of the work. Finally, in or about the year 1811, he went there with the full intention of remaining permanently and growing up with the country, and with strong faith in its future.

"A man of fine presence and high character,—alert, progressive, and large-minded,—in short, fitted by nature to be a leader of men, he soon became one of the most noted of all the pioneers of that portion of the state, quickly gaining their respect and confidence, and demonstrating at the same time his eminent fitness to be their counsellor and political representative. Accordingly we find him appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, serving from 1811 to 1815. Shortly after, he was elected Representative to Congress from the Twentieth District, serving from 1817 to 1821. Subsequently, he was again appointed Judge of Common Pleas from 1820 to 1824, and reappointed as such Judge from 1825 to 1829.

JUDGE DAVID A. OGDEN

"Concurrently with these public duties, Mr. Ogden's life was in all respects an unusually full and active one. His own private business and the cares and occupations of domestic and social life, the large representative interests committed to his charge, and the many demands made upon his time and resources by a community which looked up to him as its friend and adviser, gave him occupation enough to fully employ the administrative talent and executive ability with which he was gifted.

"He was one of the Commissioners appointed by the general government to define and settle the boundary line between Canada and the States, with reference more particularly to the islands in the St. Lawrence river. One of them, the Isle au Rapide de Plat, then so-called and afterward and still known as Ogden's Island, opposite the village of Waddington, containing nearly a thousand acres, was bought by him from Daniel McCormick, the original patentee, in 1815, and upon it he shortly afterwards erected a large and handsome mansion, in which he raised a numerous family, and which still remains to commemorate his name. The dearth of labor in the conditions then prevailing was a serious problem; the solution of it was much aided by Mr. Ogden, who personally exerted himself to tap the stream of Irish immigration at Montreal, and draw from it enough to supply the local demands of the settlement. At an early date he also initiated measures for the building of a church. Beginning it about 1812, and with some aid from Trinity Church, New York, and personal friends, but most largely through his own means and efforts, it was finally completed, paid for, and consecrated 22 August 1818. He gave it two hundred and fifty acres of glebe lands, and twenty-five acres for a cemetery. He also gave the village a considerable tract of land for a public park, showing in this way the spirit that animated him in all his relations to the people among whom he had come to live. It was a busy, useful and honorable life, but a short one, Mr. Ogden having died while yet in its prime, on June 11, 1829; and it was a life that did honor to his God, his country, and himself."

The following epitaphs are on tablets in the chancel of St. Paul's Church, Waddington, N. Y.:

"Sacred to the memory of David A. Ogden, born in New Jersey, Jan. 10th 1770; died at Montreal June 11th 1829.

"This tablet is designed not to delineate his public or private virtues, but to testify the veneration with which his memory is cherished by an afflicted family."

"Sacred to the memory of Rebecca Cornell Ogden, relict of David A. Ogden, born in Newberry, N. C. March 1st, 1776; died at Waddington, N. Y. April 19, 1852.

"This tablet is erected by her son David, as an earnest of his deep love and respect for her memory."

"The Old Merchants of New York" says that Abijah Hammond was one of the founders of the "Tontine Coffee House." The signers of the Tontine shares were many, and "they were the crème of the crème of New York society. They were the founders of our great commercial city, and their names should be honored as long as the city endures." The establishment was to be used as a Coffee House, "and for no other use or purpose, until the number of nominees should be reduced to seven," when the property was to be sold and the proceeds divided between the seven remaining shareholders.

The town of Hammond, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., was named for Abijah Hammond, who owned the township previous to 1814.

THOMAS LUDLOW OGDEN[488] was probably born in Morristown, N. J., his father, Abraham Ogden, Esq.[176] being many years Surrogate of Morris Co. and living in Morristown until the close of the Revolution, when he removed his family to Newark, N. J. His nephew, John Greig Ogden[1475] furnished the following biography:

"Graduating from Columbia College in the year 1791, he soon afterwards commenced the practice of law in the city of New York. He and his elder brother David A. Ogden[485] being partners became associated in business with Alexander Hamilton upon his resuming the practice of law after his retirement from the office of Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of Washington. MR. OGDEN became one of the leading lawyers of his day, devoting himself more particularly to the specialties of wills, trusts, and equity jurisprudence; he acted as counsel for corporations and prominent families in the city. He was for many years, and at the time of his death, a trustee of Columbia College, was for thirty-eight years a Vestryman of Trinity Church and Clerk of the Vestry, as standing counsel for which it was his official duty to defend the rights of the corporation with its vast property against assaults from many quarters. He was also prominent in the foundation and management of important church institutions and societies, and for many years represented the church in her conventions both general and diocesan. His death occurred in the city of New York Dec. 17, 1844. No higher tribute to his worth can be given than the following words inscribed on the monument in Trinity Church, New York, which was erected by its Vestry to his memory:

" 'Of a sound judgment and untiring industry, the one improved by diligent cultivation, the other quickened by religious principle, his long life was one of usefulness and duty to his family, his profession, and to society.

" 'Born and nurtured in the bosom of the Church, he gave back to her, with filial gratitude, his best powers, his most valued time, his dearest affections; and in all her institutions stood foremost in both counsel and action. Christian obedience marked his course. christian peace crowned his end, and in a christian hope he now rests from his labors.' "

His son John Greig Ogden[1475] was the author of the following biographical sketch:

"GOUVERNEUR OGDEN[491], son of Abraham Ogden[176] and Sarah Frances Ludlow, was born in New Jersey Aug. 10, 1778. Graduating from Columbia College in 1796, acquiring subsequently a legal education, and liberally endowed by nature, but without fortune, he was called at an early age to face the problem of life. His first undertaking was to accept, at the instance and on behalf of the leaders of the Federalist and conservative party in New York, a confidential mission to the old Natchez district of West Florida in order to have a conference there with the Honorable Winthrop Sargent who, up to 1801, had been its territorial Governor and stood high in the estimation of the cultured community then resident in the district. He accordingly left New York 8 February, 1803, for Philadelphia, going thence by stage to Lancaster; thence on horseback over the mountains to Pittsburgh where, on 18 February, he embarked with two men in an open boat, and after five weeks journey on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, rowing by day and floating by night, a situation full of exposure, hardship and danger, he finally reached Natchez on the 24th March. Here, at the political headquarters of that growing though distant part of the country, so great was the extent and strength of public sentiment on the subject of expansion, then as now a vital question, and just on the point of solution through the cession by France of the vast Louisiana tract, that it hardly needed his interview with Governor Sargent to confirm the obvious fact that the administration policy of expansion was then largely in the ascendent. After a week of rest and conference with Governor Sargent, he resumed his journey by boat to New Orleans, where he embarked 6 April on ship for New York, arriving there 21 April, 1803, a journey of two and a half months for an object obtainable today in as many hours. Thus returning, he resumed and completed his law studies. Afterwards, becoming deeply impressed by the then very prevalent idea of the desirability of investment in the wild lands of western and northern New York, he went to England and also to Germany, with the intention of impressing these views on foreign capitalists. In this he was successful, and returning home, he located himself at Hamilton (afterwards Waddington) on the St. Lawrence river. Here was the scene of his future labors, and of a domestic life rarely excelled in felicity. The erection of flour-mills and furnaces, the direction of the resulting business, and the management of the extensive landed interests committed to his care, the building of a large mansion called 'Ellerslie,' in which he raised a numerous family, all these added to a wide circle of social life embracing the best and most prominent people of the state and of the country, afforded the varied and abundant materials of a life not without its cares and responsibilities, but of more than common interest, happiness, and average attainment. Honored, esteemed and respected while he lived, he left at his death an unspotted character, and a name held in loving remembrance by all who knew him. He died at the residence of his son G. Parish Ogden, Troy, N. Y., March 4, 1851, in the 72d year of his age."

"Ellerslie" was built by GOUVERNEUR OGDEN[491] in 1804. It was destroyed by fire in 1840, the accompanying illustration being drawn from a photograph taken about 1887.

Mar. 22, 1803; d. Waddington, Jan. 1, 1878; dau. of William Meredith and No. 499, Gertrude G. Ogden, his wife.

ISAAC OGDEN'S[495] biography is thus given by the St. Lawrence Republican, of June 18, 1867:

"The recent decease of one of the oldest citizens of our county demands from the press more than the ordinary notice of his departure. ISAAC OGDEN, who died at Waddington (N. Y.) on the 6th instant, at the advanced age of eighty-three years, was a man of more than ordinary talent and business enterprise. He was born at Newark, N. J., on the 11th day of October, 1784. He received a liberal education, and was a ripe scholar. At the age of eighteen, after the death of his father, Abraham Ogden, then Attorney General of the State of New Jersey, he went abroad to enter a commercial house of high standing. Here his unusual talent for business, his assiduous attention to his duties, and his strict integrity in all matters committed to his care, so won the confidence of his employers that soon after his majority he became one of the members of the house, and one of the most trusted of its agents in the transaction of an extended commerce, devolving upon him responsibilities of great magnitude.

"Ardently attached to his native country, and desiring to return to it at the earliest period his engagements would permit, he, while abroad, declined many advantageous business connections, which would have made his residence in a foreign land, a permanent one. After an absence of eighteen years, spent principally in France, he returned to this country and established himself in a mercantile business in New Orleans, where he amassed a large fortune, which was wrecked in the commercial convulsions of 1836. For the next few years, his most earnest efforts were directed to the extrication of himself and his associates from their pecuniary embarrassments, and this accomplished, with a cheerful courage, he turned from the strife and turmoil of commerce, to the peaceful pursuit of agriculture, and sweets of domestic privacy. From his beautiful retreat at 'The Island,' one of those exquisite gems which adorn the majestic St. Lawrence, he watched the moral and political changes of the times with intense interest, and often with a prescience almost prophetic. And here, surrounded by an interesting family, his career drew to a peaceful close, cheered by the hopes of a gospel which he early embraced, and which had sustained him amid the many trials of his extended life, and here in a beautiful spot on his loved 'Island' home, he awaits the fruition of his Christian faith.

"In manners, he was a gentleman of the old school, and in his opinions, he was clear and decided. His frankness carried conviction of the honesty of his purposes, and inspired a respect for his person and character, and his unwavering kindness of heart, and pureness of life rendered him the idol of the family circle where his memory will long be tenderly revered, and his many virtues cherished.

"He was held in peculiarly tender reverence by a large circle of friends, from the fact that, added to his many genial qualities of heart and mind, he was the last of a noble generation of men and women, many of whom were associated with those most loved and honored in our country."

David B. Ogden, Esq.[498] was a very eminent lawyer of New York City. He was born at Morrisania, N. Y. "He was for many years amongst the most prominent of the famous lawyers who adorned the bar of the U. S. Supreme Court; being associated with, or pitted against Webster, Wirt, Pinkney, and other giants of the day. His arguments were characterized by a directness and simplicity of statement both of law and fact, that caused Chief Justice Taney to call him the 'Sledge Hammer of the Court.' He died on Staten Island July 16, 1849, in his 74th year, and was buried in what is called the Marble Cemetery."—"Sketch of Trinity Church, Newark, N. J."

DANIEL OGDEN[571] was an earnest young patriot of the Revolutionary War, and served two terms in the Federal army in his father's stead, being in the battle of Springfield, while his father, John Ogden, was at home in Morristown, N. J., actively engaged in the patriot cause. He died at Walton, N. Y., being stricken with paralysis while standing by the open grave of his wife, and died a few hours later.

575. ABRAHAM OGDEN (John[232], David[62], Thomas[12], David[3], John[1]), b. Nov. 24, 1771; d. Aug. 10, 1825; m. Feb. 4, 1802, ABIGAIL WEED, b. Sept. 30, 1788; d. Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1850; dau. of Lieut. James Weed and Sarah Richards, his wife.

"ABRAHAM OGDEN[575] was born in Hanover township, Morris Co., N. J., Nov. 24, 1771. From papers left by his son, the late William B. Ogden of Chicago, and from the land records of Morris Co., the location of the house in which Abraham Ogden[575] was born has been ascertained.

"His father, John Ogden[232], at the time of the Revolutionary War, owned and operated a mill on a stream that empties into the Whippany river near Whippany village. Where the road leading from Morristown, N. J., to Parsippany crosses this stream, the remains of the house and mill could be seen only a few years ago. Here John Ogden made flour for the army at Morristown, and it is stated that his wife often made the flour into bread for the hungry soldiers. The property afterwards came into possession of his son Abraham[575] and so remained until May 3, 1819, when he sold it to John Canfield.

"When about 18 years of age, Abraham determined to seek his fortune elsewhere, and set out for Washington, the then newly-adopted seat of government. Arriving at Philadelphia he visited the Dickinson family, who had formerly lived in Morris Co., and was convinced by them that the upper Delaware country offered greater advantages to energetic settlers than did Washington. Accordingly he joined a company that Jesse Dickinson was organizing, and went with it to what is now Cannonsville, in Delaware Co., N. Y.

"They built the first mill on the Delaware river, calling it the Federal Mill, as it was built about the time of the adoption of the first Constitution of the United States establishing Federal authority. The settlement was known as the 'Dickinson Settlement,' 'The City,' and as 'Federal Bar.' Finally it became 'Cannonsville,' which name it has since retained.

"What induced ABRAHAM OGDEN[575] to leave the Dickinson Settlement does not appear, but in 1797 we find him on the west branch of the Delaware, just above the present village of Walton, N. Y. With him were his brothers Isaac[576], Jacob[578] and William[580], the latter a boy of 11 years. Abraham and Isaac purchased land adjoining the east line of the Walton tract and erected a saw-mill just below Weed's Bridge, so called after Lieut. James Weed, a Revolutionary War officer who had settled there a few years before, and whose youngest daughter was destined to become ABRAHAM OGDEN's wife.

"Abraham and Isaac divided their land between them, Isaac taking the lower half. As an evidence of the industry displayed by them it may be stated that within three years after their arrival they had built them each a house, and had a saw-mill in operation, with a carding machine at work in the upper story. Soon after this they added a fulling mill, and were manufacturing woolen goods suitable for the demands of the times.

"During the administration of President Monroe, the state of New York, in order to encourage the manufacture of woolen goods, offered a silver tea set as a prize for the best woolen goods made in the state. This prize was awarded ABRAHAM OGDEN, and is still in possession of his descendants. In design it was emblematic of the woolen industry, and is shown in the accompanying illustration.

"The land comprising the Walton tract was covered with a growth of immense pine trees, and these had only to be cut and rafted down the Delaware to Philadelphia to find a ready market at a profitable price. The winters were spent in felling these trees and getting them to the river bank, where they were made into rafts and floated down the river by the aid of the spring freshets. A portion of the original Ogden tract is still called the 'Mast lot,' from the great number of masts and spars that were cut from it and sold to agents of the Government at $50 a piece. So valuable did this lot become that others laid claim to it through an alleged flaw in the survey; but after being tried out in the courts the Ogdens were sustained in its ownership, and afterwards sold it for $18,000.

"ABRAHAM OGDEN575 was an excellent business manager and his affairs were greatly prospered. His dealings in lumber and wool became extensive and often made visits to New York and Philadelphia necessary.

"At the age of 31 he found himself in circumstances that warranted his taking a life partner, and on the 2d day of February, 1802, he married ABIGAIL WEED, the youngest child of Lieut. James Weed and Sarah Richards, his wife. The marriage took place at the home of the bride, Rev. David Harrower, the first settled minister at Walton, performing the ceremony.

"MRS. OGDEN was born in New Canaan, Conn., Sept. 30, 1788, and, like her husband, was of Revolutionary stock. Her father, Lieut. James Weed, was also born at New Canaan, and when a boy of 14 enlisted in the French and Indian War. After the war he returned to New Canaan, and about 1764 married Sarah, daughter of James Richards. When the War of the Revolution broke out he enlisted in Capt. Hoyt's Company, and served under different commanders until peace was declared, rising to the rank of Lieutenant.

"After the war several families left New Canaan and settled on the west branch of the Delaware river in New York, and in the spring of 1791 Lieut. Weed joined them, locating himself a few miles above the present village of Walton. He spent the summer in clearing land and in building him a log house, returning to New Canaan in the fall for his family. Only tradition is left to tell of their journey to the new house, and that only says they came by way of Kingston, crossing the mountains on pack horses. This brief mention gives slight token of the hardships endured, or the difficulties overcome on such a journey, and by such means of conveyance, of a large family, some of them young children, and with such household belongings as are indispensable even in a new country. But they arrived safely, on the evening of Nov. 3d, and doubtless found a warm welcome awaiting them from old acquaintances and neighbors from the old home they had exchanged for the new. The bridge across the Delaware near their home was called 'Weed's Bridge,' and the settlement that sprang up around them has since been known by that name.

"ABRAHAM OGDEN and his young wife began housekeeping in a plank house that he had built near the saw-mill, and just below Weed's Bridge. In this house their four oldest children were born. In the meantime another and a better house had been builded and into this they moved Oct. 14, 1809. Here until 1820 they lived happy contented lives. The work was hard, and there was plenty of it, but they could foresee fortunes which hard work could not fail to give into their possession.

"As early as 1791 these busy people had found time to build a log house, for a school house during the week, and a church on Sundays. In 1802 a library was established which was added to from time to time until in 1809 it was incorporated as the 'Walton Library' by act of the Legislature.

"In 1820, in the midst of his usefulness, MR. OGDEN was stricken with paralysis, and from that time until his death, on Aug. 10, 1825, he was entirely helpless. His mental faculties however remained unimpaired, and with the assistance of his son, William Butler Ogden, then a lad of 15, he was able to direct from his bedside a successful termination of his business affairs. He was buried in the burying ground near the log church he had helped to build, and where many of his neighbors were already resting from their labors.

"Mrs. Ogden survived her husband some twenty years. When her son William B. settled in Chicago she made his house her home, where she died Oct. 9, 1850. Her remains were brought to Walton and buried in the new cemetery in the southeast part of the village, and those of her husband were removed from the old burying ground and placed by her side."

The Butler family, here connected with the Ogden family, was first represented in America by Jonathan Butler[a], an Irish gentleman, who settled in Saybrook, Conn., in 1724. He married, Dec. 8, 1726, Temperance Buckingham, daughter of Daniel Buckingham, and Sarah Lee, his wife. Their children were Jonathan[b], Elnathan[c], Stephen[d], Ezekiel[e], b. Apr. 12, 1734, John[f], Charles[g], Temperance[h], Anne[i], Sarah[j], and Hester[k] (probably not named in order of birth).

Ezekiel Butler[e], the fourth named, married Mabel Jones of Saybrook, Conn. She is said to have been a lineal descendant of Col. John Jones (one of the Regicides) and his wife Henrietta, sister of Oliver Cromwell. Ezekiel Butler[e] and Mabel, his wife, had Ezekiel, Jr.[l], Elias[m], Mabel[n], Medad[o], born at Branford, Conn., Jan. 23, 1766; died, New York City, Feb. 27, 1847, Temperance[p], John[q], Mary[r] and William[s].

EARLY CAREER.

William B. Ogden[1578] was a specimen of robust boyhood, athletic, and fond of all boyish sports. He was especially fond of deer-hunting among his native hills in Delaware county, New York, and was remarkably accurate as a rifle shot. He developed into splendid physical manhood, being a little above medium height, and possessing large dark gray eyes, broad forehead, a ruddy complexion, a clear, musical voice, all tending to give him a manly and imposing presence.

He determined quite early in life to acquire a liberal education, and devote himself to the practice of law. He had hardly commenced his academic course, at the early age of fifteen, when his father's sudden prostration of health required him to return home to assume the management of his father's business, and the care of the family. Although the business so heroically assumed required great attention, and carried him to many cities, he found opportunity to cultivate his mind by reading, and gained much practical knowledge by wide observation during his travels.

Meanwhile, at the age of eighteen years, he entered the military service of his native state, and was elected a commissioned officer the first day of duty; on the second day he was appointed Aid to his esteemed friend, Brig. Gen. Frederic P. Foote. The Hon. Selah R. Hobbie, for many years the distinguished Ass't Postmaster General of the United States, was a member of Gen. Foote's staff at the same time, and had been an intimate friend of Mr. Ogden from boyhood. Upon the retirement of Major Hobbie as Brigade Inspector, Mr. Ogden was appointed to the position, and served for several years. During Gen. Jackson's presidency, Mr. Ogden was made postmaster of his village, Walton, and so remained until his removal to Chicago.

CHICAGO LIFE.

At the age of twenty-one he became a partner in a mercantile firm that was moderately successful, but the play of his unusual powers naturally demanded a larger sphere of activity. He remained a few more years in his native county, when his attention was called to the possibilities of Chicago by his brother-in-law Charles Butler, Esq., and he determined upon a trip west. He reached Chicago in June, 1835, when the site of the future great metropolis was marked by little more than Fort Dearborn and a few huts, and when there were few more than 5000 persons between Lake Michigan and the Pacific. Mr. Ogden lived to see the population increased 2000 fold. His remarkable foresight convinced him that this terminus of Western lake navigation would become the centre of a vast empire of commercial life. He at once united with friends in the purchase of extensive real estate and established a land and trust agency known as the "American Land Co." The concern grew into one of the greatest institutions of the West. His first real estate ventures in 1835–6 were eminently successful, but he became financially embarrassed in 1837–8 by assuming liabilities for his friends whom he had endeavored to aid. He struggled with these embarrassments till 1842–3, when he fully cleared himself of the entanglements.

VAST ENTERPRISES.

His real estate enterprises were immense. His sales for himself and others exceeded many millions of dollars, requiring many thousands of deeds and contracts signed by him. He laid out and constructed over one hundred miles of streets at his own expense and that of his clients, and built two bridges over the Chicago river. He constructed the first floating swing-bridge at Chicago, before having seen one.

Nearly all the public improvements of the city were originated by him, and he projected and built thousands of miles of railways passing through, or centering in Chicago. In this vast development, he was actuated as much by an abiding faith in the future of his country as by consideration of return of the invested capital. He early engaged in introducing McCormick's mowing and reaping machines in the West. He built up the first large manufactory to produce them, and at his suggestion the first reaper was sent to the London Exhibition of 1851.

MAYOR OF CHICAGO.

Mr. Ogden was the first Mayor of Chicago, and while an incumbent of that office, an event occurred, the outcome of which made one of the brightest pages of his history. Some frightened debtors had been led by scheming demagogues to call a meeting to devise measures by which the law for the collection of debts might be suspended. Inflammatory speeches had been made, in which the debtors' sufferings and pecuniary dangers had been described. The Mayor was called upon, when, in a masterly address in which he displayed wonderful tact and persuasiveness, he exhorted his fellow citizens not to commit the folly of proclaiming their own dishonor. He entreated the embarrassed to courageously bear up against adverse circumstances, remembering that no misfortune was as great as personal dishonor. "Above all things," said he, "do not tarnish the honor of our infant city." His pleadings prevailed. He always personally exemplified the American spirit of hopefulness and self-help. Pride of citizenship impelled him to ever come forward in times of emergency, when either his city or country needed mature judgment, and energetic, intelligent action. It was ever his aim to maintain public faith and credit.

RAILWAY SCHEMES.

His fertility of resources, and unbounded enthusiasm that led him to open up to commerce and agriculture the great Northwest, and to establish facilities for the immense shipping trade of the great lakes, naturally made him a leading railroad promoter and magnate. The scope of his railway schemes was truly marvelous. "His acts are written in lines of iron all over the West." While he directly labored to connect the richest and most promising sections of the great Northwest with Chicago by many railway routes, he planned a direct and continuous line from New York to Chicago, and thence westward to the Pacific. He was President of the Galena & Chicago Union R. R. Co., President of the Northwestern R. R. Co., President of the Illinois & Wisconsin R. R. Co., President of the Buffalo & Mississippi R. R. Co. in Indiana, until merged in the Michigan Central; President of the Chicago, St. Paul & Fond-du-Lac R. R. Co., the road of the latter company being constructed largely from his own means. He was also President of the Wisconsin & Superior Land Grant R. R. Co. He served as president of the great National Railroad Convention held at Philadelphia in 1850, whose work was to take measures for the construction of the Pacific Railroad. He was first President of the Union Pacific R. R. and held the position until the demands of his other vast business enterprises compelled him to retire as the executive head. He was a Director and afterward Receiver of the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago R. R., but generously refused the offered $25,000 salary, saying the road needed all available money. The construction of most of the foregoing railroads was accomplished only after the most energetic and indefatigable exertions that would have disheartened most men. He labored more as a pioneer, and his services were to a great extent gratuitous and unselfish. When he retired from the Presidency of one of the greatest railroad corporations of the world, the Northwestern Railroad, in June, 1868, having been connected with the road since 1847, the stockholders unanimously adopted the following resolution:

> "Resolved, That his [W. B. Ogden's] connection with this Company, dating back for a period of twenty-one years, his disinterested labors in its behalf without fee or reward during the whole time, the benefit he has conferred upon it and the country, demand our grateful acknowledgments, and we hereby tender him our warmest thanks for his long services and our best wishes for his long-continued health and prosperity."

As to official position, Mr. Ogden was also the first President of Rush Medical College, President of the Chicago Branch of the State Bank of Illinois, President of the Board of Sewerage Commissioners of Chicago, and President of the Sturgeon Bay & Lake Michigan Canal & Harbor Co.

EDUCATION.

Bishop Clarkson, an intimate friend of Mr. Ogden, gives the following concerning his education: "Mr. Ogden, although not a scholar himself, was yet the liberal patron of learning, and of art, and the cherished guest and companion of scholars, of men of learning. His wonderful conversational powers, and his amazing capacity of gathering and assimilating knowledge and information on all subjects, made him 'the peer, if not the prince,' of the most cultured companies. He had an enthusiastic love of whatsoever was beautiful in nature, and true and real in man. Meanness instinctively shrank away from his presence, and falsehood and dishonesty cowered before his glance."

His intellectual and ethical tastes are thus spoken of by the Hon. Isaac N. Arnold of Chicago: "He was a lover of music and painting and poetry. Indeed, he possessed a sensibility to beauty in every form, and to the expression of noble sentiment in the arts and in literature, very rare in a man so absorbed in business and in great enterprises. He was never more attractive than in his library reciting the poetry of Bryant, Halleck, Holmes, Burns, Moore, and Scott; or at his piano, playing an accompaniment to his own voice as he sang with expression, if not with artistic skill, the simple ballads of Burns and Moore, and other songs popular thirty years ago. . . . His was one of those sympathetic natures that brought gladness into every circle he entered. His smile was like the sunshine to the landscape. He developed and brought into action whatever was good in those with whom he associated. . . . His nature was an inspiration and a stimulant. . . . No one entered his presence who was not made happier, and made to think better of themselves, and of others, of life and humanity."

HIS POWERS OF ORATORY.

Much has been said of Mr. Ogden's unusual powers of expression, both in ordinary conversation, and when before an audience. Mr. Arnold relates the following interesting occurrence of July 23, 1839, which demonstrates his happy choice of language, striking metaphors, and eloquent delivery. A large and magnificent steamer, the "Illinois," lay at the wharf of Newberry & Dole, and the people of Chicago, scarcely 4000 in number, who had purchased a suit of colors worthy the splendid boat, were gathered en masse at the harbor to present the same to Capt. Blake, her commander, and to Oliver Newberry, her owner. At that time Chicago had no completed railway line to the Atlantic, and was connected socially and commercially only by steamboats. It was a balmy summer afternoon, and Fort Dearborn, directly opposite, and all the shipping in the river were gayly decorated with the national colors. Wm. B. Ogden had been selected to make the presentation speech.

Mr. Arnold thus describes the occasion: "Mr. Ogden was a natural orator, and his manly voice, on this occasion, could be distinctly heard by the crowd on the wharf as well as on the deck of the steamer. After complimenting the 'splendid specimen of naval architecture' on which he stood, and expressing his pleasure in being the organ of presenting the 'appropriate gift' to the steamer bearing the name of our State, he spoke of the wonderfully rapid advance of our country, and the means of communication, bringing the East and the West, the Hudson and the Great Lakes, and the Mississippi into convenient neighborhood. I remember a bold and striking figure in which he compared the 'prairie fires,' which at that time annually were seen to invade our wide, and then unsettled, city limits, to the 'pillar of fire by night,' lighting the 'path of Empire on its westward way.' He then paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Robert Fulton, but for whose genius, he said, 'the lake and the prairie around us would have still remained in the wild solitude of nature.' There would have been, but for Fulton, no steamer 'Illinois,' no Chicago, and the broad and beautiful prairies around us would have continued long 'to waste their sweetness on the desert air.' Turning to Capt. Blake, and unfurling a splendid silk banner, fit for an admiral, Maj. Gen. Scott standing at his side, he said: 'We present to you our country's flag. . . . To you it is no stranger; under a most valiant chief (bowing to Gen. Scott), whom a grateful people have not forgotten to praise, bravely and honorably have you defended it in war. . . . Stand by it in peace—stand by it forever.' In conclusion, he said: 'For this noble craft, we would ask of Him who rules the raging storm and bids the rising waves be still, to save her from storm and tempest, from rocks and shoals, and bring her in safety to her destined haven. . . . Oft shall she bring to us, as she cuts through the swelling waves, many that we love, and when, with eager haste, it shall be our privilege to return once more to scenes of childhood's happy hours; once more to seek a parent's blessing, a sister's, brother's fond embrace; once more to view our native hills, and valleys, and streams; where, when a child, we gambolled wild and free, through every wooded glen; safely, swiftly, will she bear us, until we greet again our Fatherland.'

"Walter L. Newberry, on behalf of his brother, Oliver Newberry, replied, and then, with Gen. Scott and a gay and merry party, she steamed north to Gross-Point, near where now is Evanston, thence down to the Calumet, and returned to her dock."

IN EUROPE.

In 1854–5 Mr. Ogden visited Europe and remained abroad about one and a half years. Being a careful and accurate observer, he gave much attention to various institutions and great public works. The canals of Holland, especially the great ship canal at Amsterdam, suggested to his practical mind the importance of a ship channel by which the waters of Lake Michigan might flow through the Chicago and Des Plains rivers into the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, thus affording free and direct steamboat navigation to and from Chicago. He later was a leading contractor on the Illinois-and-Michigan Canal, and one of its ablest advocates.

HOME LIFE.

While in Europe, Mr. Ogden gave much attention to art, and purchased a number of rare pictures and articles of virtu, many being the product of American artists working abroad, with which he adorned his mansion at Chicago. He built the latter in 1837, having chosen a lot in North Chicago, and where his delightful home was surrounded by native forest trees and shrubbery. Although at this time unmarried, he early brought to his home his mother and his sisters, and he welcomed his many friends to a most cordial and generous hospitality. The most intimate of the latter have tenderly drawn a veil over "a parcel of carefully-preserved, but long-ago-faded flowers; roses, pansies, some old garden flowers,—a ribbon, a glove,—some notes, and a little poem,—all tenderly-cherished relics of one from whom, many and long years before, he had been separated by death, and around whose grave, amidst all the active and absorbing scenes, in which he was still living, his memory still lingered fondly and faithfully."

It was one of his sincerest pleasures to welcome to his home, his neighbors and fellow-citizens, visitors and strangers. There was no formality, but while all his guests were made to feel perfectly at ease, there was always a high-bred courtesy manifested and a solicitous consideration for others. It was Mr. Ogden's thought to gather to his fireside all the most worthy and distinguished of American social life, no matter how poor or humble. If distinguished for merit, culture, or ability, they were most cordially received. "Here he entertained Van Buren, Webster, Poinsett, Marcy, Flagg, Butler, Gilpin, Corning, Croswell, Tilden, as well as Bryant, Miss Martineau, Fredrika Bremer, Margaret Fuller, the artist Healy, Anne C. Lynch, and many others, comprising some of the best representative men and women of our own country, and the most distinguished visitors from abroad. The guest always found good books, good pictures, good music, and the most kind and genial reception. Mr. Ogden himself, however, was always the chief attraction; he was in his way without an equal as a conversationalist. His powers of narration and description were unrivalled."

FINANCIAL CRISIS OF 1857.

While pushing the building of the Chicago, St. Paul & Fond-du-Lac Railroad which was carrying a large floating debt, and pending a sale of his mortgage bonds, negotiations abroad suddenly failed, the paper of the company went to protest, and Mr. Ogden, who had been an endorser to the extent of nearly $1,500,000, found himself in close quarters. It was a time of general financial depression, and many strong commercial houses went to the wall. However, he cheerfully and promptly undertook the herculean task of paying the large sum, aided by the advice and confidence of such friends as William A. Booth, Pres. American Exchange Bank, Caleb O. Halsted, Pres. Manhattan Co., and his counsellor, Hon.

Samuel J. Tilden of New York. The creditors of the road allowed Mr. Ogden to continue in control, and to use his own judgment, and through the assets of the company and the free use of his private estate, soon retired all the paper of the company upon which he had been endorser.

A debt is owed our common humanity by the recital of an incident connected with Mr. Ogden's financial straits, and which tends to show the unbounded confidence and high esteem with which he was held by his many friends. The financial house of which Mr. Ogden was the head at Chicago had been for many years the agent of Samuel Russell of Middletown, Ct., a wealthy, retired merchant, and founder of the house of Russell & Co., of Canton(China). Upon learning of his friend's embarrassment, Mr. Russell immediately placed his entire estate at his disposal, amounting to nearly a half million of dollars. Robert Eaton, an English gentleman of wealth and culture residing at Swansea, Wales, sent $80,000 to Mr. Ogden, to be used at his own discretion. Matthew Laflin, of Chicago, wrote from Saratoga offering $100,000 from himself and friends, and Col. E. D. Taylor, long of Chicago, repeatedly tendered like substantial aid. Although Mr. Ogden did not avail himself of these most generous offers, they must have afforded him great comfort and satisfaction in his trying position.

HIS POWER OVER MEN.

While building one of his Wisconsin railroads, the farmers and villagers along the route were induced to make large stock-subscriptions, having been persuaded to do so by the promise of large returns from the development of the territory traversed by the road. Hard times came, and while the subscriptions had been paid, the road was not completed, and the people became exasperated, because they believed they had been swindled. They publicly declared that if the author of their misfortunes should come over the track of the luckless road, he would be tried without judge or jury, tarred and feathered—imprisoned—shot. Mr. Ogden learned of their threats, and, despite the pleadings of his friends, had handbills distributed through the towns along the line announcing his coming, and that he would publicly address the people. Believing themselves wronged, they prepared for a scene of violence. As Mr. Ogden presented himself, he was greeted with hisses and groans. Although alone and unarmed, he calmly faced his accusers and appealed to their sense of justice and fair play. He proceeded in his captivating manner to give the exact status of the situation, clearly explaining the cause of the railroad's incomplete condition, and how, because of the stringent times, he had personally lost more than all of them combined, and that with patient waiting and judicious adjustment of the affairs of the road, the tide would surely turn in their favor. His clear statement of facts, with his old-time oratorical ability, brought the enraged populace to their senses; and instead of lynching him, they appointed a committee to wait upon him, which said: "Mr. Ogden, we are authorized by the farmers, and other stockholders along the road, to say, if you wish it, we will double our subscriptions."

THE PESHTIGO LUMBER ENTERPRISE.

In 1856, Mr. Ogden organized a lumber company for operations along the Peshtigo river in Northern Wisconsin. The company bought nearly 100,000 acres of pine lands, on which they constructed extensive saw-mills, and founded a thriving village. They constructed a harbor on Green Bay at the mouth of the Peshtigo, and in a short time were prepared to ship 50,000,000 feet of lumber per annum to the Chicago market.

In 1860, he purchased at Brady's Bend, on the Alleghany river, in Pennsylvania, an estate of 5000 acres on which were extensive mines of iron and coal, rolling mills and furnaces, and a village of about 5000 population. Joined by friends, he organized the Brady's Bend Iron Co., capitalized at $2,000,000, employing some 600 men, making 200 tons of rails daily.

VILLA BOSCOBEL.

Mr. Ogden's business interests causing him to spend so much time in New York, he determined upon possessing an eastern residence. This was consummated in the spring of 1866, when he purchased of J. Kennedy Smyth[1154] a handsome Gothic villa called "Boscobel" at Fordham Heights, Westchester Co., N. Y., and adjoining High Bridge. He made some additions, and extended the grounds until they contained 10 acres, with a frontage of a half mile on the Harlem River. The grounds were tastefully laid out, having a conservatory, stables, green-houses, and everything that abundant means could suggest and provide for. The many gabled house is of blue-stone, with Ohio freestone trimmings, and surrounded by broad verandas, from which well-shaven lawns slope down the hill. He also enlarged and beautified his homestead at Chicago and divided his time between the two establishments, but becoming weary of business, he retired to "Boscobel" to spend the remaining years of his life, and enjoy a well-earned repose.

COMMERCIAL FORESIGHT.

The advanced ideas entertained by Mr. Ogden are shown by the fact that, at this early day, he had plans prepared for a subway under Broadway, New York City, which plans are yet in possession of the family. They contemplated a double-track railway, with a roadway on either side for trucks and heavy traffic. He was also deeply interested in the Panama Canal project, and took steps toward the formation of a syndicate to undertake its building; his prophetic vision foreseeing the time when both these undertakings would become a necessity.

DISASTERS OF 1871.

He was still interested in many vast enterprises in the Northwest, but had entrusted their management to other hands. But his release from active business affairs did not last long. On Oct. 8, 1871, the wires flashed the news to him at "Boscobel," "Chicago is burning!" He hastened West to survey the appalling work of the flames that had so nearly destroyed the city, and rendered homeless 100,000 of its population. He arrived Oct. 10, only to view the smoking ruins of vast business and residence blocks, the many public buildings, City Hall, churches, banks, hotels, stores, warehouses, homes,—all in utter ruin. His own luxurious home, with its gathered treasures of a lifetime, was totally destroyed. The labors of forty years lay in ashes, but Mr. Ogden met the great calamity with heroic fortitude, and plans were soon on foot to rebuild the Ogden Building, the Lumber Exchange, and many other institutions with which he was directly connected.

The next day he received the intelligence of the utter destruction, also by fire, of his immense lumber establishment at Peshtigo, Wis. He tarried at Chicago only long enough to inspire hope and courage in the stricken and disheartened people, and hastened on to Peshtigo, where his great soul was more needed by the despairing survivors. Gen. Strong accompanied him. From an eminence they overlooked the thousands of acres of burnt forest lands. All was gone. The thriving village of Peshtigo, with its factories, mills, shops, stores, churches, boarding-houses, hotels, dwellings, warehouses, bridges, had been leveled by the flames within a few hours. Many horses and mules and other domestic animals were burned, but the more shocking was the loss of the lives of 315 men, women and children who perished in the fire. In the face of these terrible calamities that would have utterly crushed and disheartened most men,—the two fires having entailed a financial loss alone to Mr. Ogden of over $2,000,000,—he was calm and neither murmured nor complained. "It is the act of God," said he; "we are not responsible. We will rebuild this village—the mills, the shops—and do a larger winter's logging than ever before."

He at once applied his old-time energy, and superintended the reconstruction, remaining until December, and worked with the men day after day from dawn till dark, constantly exposed to the inclement weather. Mr. Arnold says: "When night came, he would go on an open car, drawn by mules, eight miles to the harbor. All the evening, until late in the night, he was engaged with his clerks and assistants, in drawing plans, writing letters, and sending telegrams to his agents, and the next morning, break-of-day would find him again at the head of his men at Peshtigo. During all this period, he was cheerful and pleasant, and inspired every body with courage and faith in the future. This terrible strain upon him, and overwork, for a man of his years, probably shortened his life." He rebuilt the mills, machine shops, and dwelling-houses, and the village in a short time contained about 2,000 inhabitants. Having repaired his great losses, he again retired to "Boscobel."

POLITICS.

Mr. Ogden was what would now be termed, an Independent Democrat, always putting principle before party, though strongly attached to the principles of true Democracy. He came prominently into public life in 1834, being elected that year to represent his native county in the New York Legislature. He was less than thirty years old, but was elected to the Assembly purposely to represent the interests of the projected New York & Erie Railroad, which sought state aid. On Mar. 20, 21, 22, 1835, he made a remarkable speech in favor of the road. It was a bold, sagacious, prophetic speech, that revealed the wonderful foresight and ability of the speaker. He at that time outlined the probable routes of the great railway lines of the country that took shape at a later day.

While in the N. Y. Assembly, he became intimately associated with such prominent men as Martin Van Buren, Silas Wright, Wm. L. Marcy, Benj. F. Butler, Azariah C. Flagg, Edwin Croswell, and John A. Dix. It has already been stated that Mr. Charles Butler, a brother of Gen. Benj. F. Butler, Attorney General of the United States under Jackson and Van Buren, married a sister of Mr. Ogden.

He was never an office seeker, and several times opposed candidates of his own political party whom he considered unfit for office. During his Chicago life he was often elected to City Councils, but public office having no charms for him, he accepted only that he might subserve the best interests of his city or country. In 1852 he declined a nomination for Congress. He was opposed to slavery, and during the Civil War acted with the Republican party. He enthusiastically supported Abraham Lincoln, and was elected to the Illinois Legislature on the same ticket. Feeling it a time of great emergency, he accepted a seat in the state Legislature, though at cost to him of great self-denial. In the same year, 1860, the expediency and propriety of nominating him for the Presidency was strongly urged, because of being foremost and immeasurably ahead of all other men in maintaining public credit, and advancing public improvements. What prompted this sentiment was the value of his labors made manifest by his public works all through the Northwest.

PHILANTHROPIES.

Mr. Ogden's early struggles, and the acquiring of a masterly spirit of self-help, made him an inspiration to others who often sought his cheerfully given advice. At one time, he said to a lady who had been reduced from affluence to poverty, and who came to seek advice for the training of her inexperienced children: "Madam, don't have the least concern. If your sons are healthy and willing to work, they will find enough to do, and if they cannot begin at the top, let them begin at the bottom, and very likely they will be all the better for it. I was born close by a saw-mill, was early left an orphan, christened in a mill-pond, graduated at a log school-house, and, at fourteen, fancied I could do any thing I turned my hand to, and that nothing was impossible, and ever since, madam, I have been trying to prove it, and with some success."

He was singularly hospitable, and ever manifested a kind and charitable spirit. Bishop Clarkson adds: "When he was crowded with business enough to weigh down half a dozen common men, and when people were waiting to confer with him on important interests,

I have known him to leave it all, in order to carry a bunch of flowers from his conservatory to an invalid neighbor, or to stop at the door of a friend to inquire after a sick child. Men who live a merely selfish life never do such things. So was there about him always a true considerateness for others, a toleration for their opinions, a gentleness to forward their weaknesses, a willingness to listen to their grievances, and a cheerfulness that made them think more lightly of their woes. These were the qualities that made him so true a friend, and so valuable a neighbor. . . .

"It does not often happen that a man passes away from earth who at one time or another, or in one way or another, helped or inspired or benefited as many struggling and anxious men as William B. Ogden did. And this is one of life's noblest records. In times of trouble and distress, men who knew him instinctively turned to him, not merely because he was a rich man, but because he was full of the better wealth of sympathy and hopefulness and kindheartedness.

"The courtesy that was inborn, the considerateness for others that was uppermost in his nature, the sunny cheerfulness that in the days of his health pervaded the icy atmosphere around him, the outstretched hand for the distressed and the unfortunate, the patient counsel for the hundreds who naturally came to him in their perplexity—the pleasant words that came from a generous heart fell with such soothing power on broken spirits. These were the things that made Mr. Ogden as truly a benefactor of his kind, as the railroads he projected, in the cities he built, or the material developments that he brought about. His benefactions, private and public, were very large; no one really knew how much he gave. During his thirty years residence in Chicago there was scarcely an enterprise, benevolent, charitable, or literary, that did not number him among its most liberal supporters. His name is associated with the early struggles of most of the institutions of the city that have now become strong and great, and always as a generous helper as well as a judicious foundation-layer."

Among the institutions of the Northwest which he generously aided were—Rush Medical College (of which he was first President), the Theological Seminary of the Northwest, the Historical Society, the Academy of Sciences, the Astronomical Society, the University of Chicago (of which he was President of the Board of Trustees), and the Chicago Woman's Home.

RELIGION.

Mr. Ogden was reared in the faith of the Prot. Episcopal Church, and was attached to St. James', Chicago, and later was a vestryman of St. James', Fordham, N. Y. Bishop Clarkson says: "Mr. Ogden was always a believer in Christianity, theoretically, and a consistent and ceaseless helper in its work, although he did not until late in life give his personal allegiance to its divine Founder, or appropriate to himself its precious consolations. But when he did come at last to lay his soul at the foot of the cross of Christ, it was with all the trustfulness of a confident faith, and with all the humility of a true penitent.

"During all the years of his connection with St. James' Church he responded to its many calls and claims with unstinted hand. And there is many a church now standing in the West in whose walls he freely invested, and many a poor missionary who had been made more comfortable by his benefactions. And this is after all a practical Christianity of more worth than empty pretensions or ostentatious lip service."

He was not only ready to contribute largely to every missionary enterprise, but to make up every shortage in the offerings of others. He was in failing health during the last year of his life, but despite much suffering, he maintained a cheerfulness and manliness ever characteristic of him.

IN MEMORIAM.

In a work entitled, "Biographical Sketches of the Leading Men of Chicago," published about 1867, the following estimate is given of Mr. Ogden ten years before his death. It is here repeated to show the appreciation of his life and efforts while living: "William B. Ogden is a man of noble mould. We claim not that he is faultless, or free from the imperfections and failings of our common humanity; but as a man, a brother, a citizen, a public-spirited, a charitable, a benevolent, and capable man, we acknowledge no superior, and no name in the Northwest calls up so many acknowledgments of public indebtedness for general benefits resulting from individual energy, enterprise, and ability, as that of William B. Ogden.

OGDEN FREE LIBRARY, WALTON, N. Y.

Memorial to No. 1578, William Butler Ogden

"Former generations have commemorated the deeds of the worthy in monuments of bronze and marble. It is the glory of the nineteenth century, that general utility and the elevation and amelioration of the condition of all classes are its primary objects. In this century, men are to be measured and praised or censured by their works.

"The public improvements of the Northwest, radiating from the home of his adoption, are noble monuments, commemorating in their usefulness both the character and enterprise of the subject of this sketch."

After Mr. Ogden's death, a meeting of the Historical Society of Chicago was held Dec. 10, 1877, at which time Robert H. Clarkson, Bishop of Nebraska, and Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, President of the Society, read interesting papers. According to the Inter-Ocean their common theme was: "One who, more than any other man, living or dead, had laid the foundations of Chicago's splendor."

Bishop Clarkson (from whose pen we have previously quoted), among other things, said: "My purpose is simply to give my own estimate of his character, and of those qualities, mental and moral, that attached men to him, and made him so capable and influential." In speaking of his first impressions, in 1849, of his "manly strength and elegant presence," he said, "He impressed me then as hardly any man had ever done before, or has ever done since, as one of the largest-minded and most comprehensive men I had ever seen. . . . He was always a leader and master spirit. . . . If he had given his life to the practice of the art of persuasion, he would have been the peer of Henry Clay. And if he had followed his original purpose of preparing himself for the legal profession, his name would have gone into history alongside of that of Daniel Webster. Had the love of politics or statesmanship seduced him from commercial pursuits, he would unquestionably have taken rank with Lincoln and Douglas and Seward. His great powers were always used on the side of right and justice and for the public weal. No man had ever a keener sense of honor, and though his active life and positive character necessarily brought him sometimes in conflict with other men, his personal integrity was ever unassailed."

The first portrait of William B. Ogden, painted by Mr. Geo. P. A. Healy, was destroyed in the Chicago fire. Upon the request of the Chicago Historical Society, Mrs. Ogden ordered a second portrait painted by the same celebrated artist, and when it was finished, it was presented by her at a memorable meeting of the Society, Dec. 20, 1881. Edwin H. Sheldon, Esq.[1584], in behalf of Mrs. Ogden, made the presentation address, in which he said: "I lived under the same roof with Mr. Ogden for a quarter of a century, and for nearly all that time we carried on our house jointly, thus enforcing a very close and long-continued intimacy. These years brought to each of us, as they do to all, days of trial, of suffering, and of sorrow, and yet in all that time, looking back with careful scrutiny, I can not recall one harsh or unkind word received from him. His patience and forbearance were great; his friendship steadfast; and his good will unbounded. I speak strongly, perhaps; but only as I feel justified in doing, from an acquaintance of over forty years."

Next followed a masterly memorial address by Hon. I. N. Arnold (from which several extracts have previously been taken), when the Hon. Thomas Hoyne was called to the chair, and the Hon. Elihu B. Washburne paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Mr. Ogden. Among many excellent things, Mr. Washburne said: "Mr. Ogden was a man of education, intelligence, and refinement. As a business man, he had broad and enlightened views, a bold spirit, and unerring sagacity. Of courtly and polished manners, there is no society in the world he would not have adorned."

The funeral ceremonies took place Aug. 6, 1877. The procession moved from Mr. Ogden's late residence, the Villa Boscobel, to St. James' Church, Fordham. The pall-bearers were Gouverneur Morris, William A. Booth, Parke Godwin, Oswald Ottendorfer, William H. Sheldon, Martin Zoborowski, Lewis G. Morris, Franklin Edson, Gabriel Mead, and Andrew H. Green. The services at the church were conducted by Bishop Clarkson, assisted by the Rev. Joseph Blanchard. The remains were taken to Woodlawn Cemetery for burial.

Judge Isaac Ogden[576] and his brother Abraham left Morristown, N. J., in 1797, and settled in the town of Walton, Delaware county, N. Y., where they purchased land adjoining the east line of the Walton Tract. Here they erected a large fulling mill, and became so successful in the manufacture of woven fabrics, that the Government at one time awarded them a medal for the excellency of their cloth.

In early life Judge Ogden[576] began to take an active interest in political and social affairs, and at different periods held offices of emolument and honor. He was a vestryman in Christ's Church; was member of Assembly 1812–14; Collector of U. S. Internal Revenue 1813–21; State Senator 1816–19, and again 1824–26; was County Judge 1816–28, and Presidential Elector in 1840.

"Later in life he retired from active political life, and enjoyed a well-earned rest in the quiet and comfort of a farmer's life."

Recompense Stansbury was of the family of that name in Scotch Plains, N. J.

Eunice Ogden[577] was born in Morristown, N. J., where she was married, and where they lived for several years. In 1810, her husband sold his farm for $1000, and with that amount purchased 1000 acres of heavily-timbered land in Ohio, near the present site of Worthington. Here they both died, he in 1843, and she in 1854, and both were buried in New Cemetery at Worthington. Their only child was born in Morristown, N. J.

Y., Mar. 8, 1874; was self-educated; admitted to bar as attorney in 1827, and as counsellor of Supreme Court in 1829; practiced in Buffalo till 1847, when elected State Comptroller. Political life began in 1828, when he was elected to state legislature by Anti-Masons; served three terms, retiring in 1831; that year he brought about act abolishing imprisonment for debt. In 1832 was elected on Anti-Jackson ticket to Congress; re-elected as Whig in 1836, and served to 1842, occupying "first rank for integrity, industry, and practical ability;" voted for abolition of slavery. Defeated for Governor of New York in 1844 by Silas Wright. Elected Comptroller of New York state in 1847. Jan. 1, 1849, suggested essential principle of present national banking system. Elected Vice President U. S. in 1848. Upon death of Pres. Zachary Taylor, MILLARD FILLMORE took presidential oath of office July 10, 1850. Was exceptionally pure and patriotic. During administration, Commodore Perry was sent on expedition to Japan in 1852, and treaty ports were opened. Treaties were made with S. A. countries 1851–2; Plata and Amazon valleys explored. Retired from presidency Mar. 4, 1853. "He left the country at peace within and without, and in the enjoyment of a high degree of prosperity in all departments of its industry." Was candidate for President in Whig convention in 1852. Travelled in Europe 1856; while there nominated for President by American party. Retired to Buffalo; commanded a corps during Civil War, and was President of Buffalo Historical Society.

He married Caroline Carmichael in 1858, and spent his last years in Buffalo. "The famous Fillmore house, where President Fillmore and his gracious wife dispensed a lavish hospitality for many years, is on Niagara Square, one of the pleasant parts of the city of Buffalo. . . . Later, during its existence as an apartment house, the old mansion touched the White House again, for to it came as a bride Mrs. Cleveland's mother, Mrs. Perrine, after several seasons with her daughter in the Executive Mansion.

"Though again refitted, and converted into a fashionable hotel, the original style of the house has been carefully preserved. The drawing room is just as it used to be. Here are the curious shaped mirrors that tell no tales, although they have reflected many a company of distinguished guests; also the heavy cornices, quaint cabinets, odd-shaped pieces of rosewood furniture, and French tapestry rug. In a niche on the main stairway a marble bust of President Fillmore looks out upon the new-old scene. To the taste and generous investment of a woman, Buffalo owes the careful restoration and preservation of a historical house, Miss C. B. Burtis being its present owner and manager of the new enterprise."

Dr. Oliver Wayne Ogden[619] was a physician, and succeeded to the practice of his uncle, No. 243, Dr. Isaac Ogden, in New Germantown, N. J. In the year 1829, and during the J. Q. Adams administration, he was appointed U. S. Marshal for the District of N. J. and removed to Perth Amboy to live. He became so involved in adverse business transactions that his property passed out of his hands, including "Barnet Hall" which estate he had inherited. He was State Commissioner for the lease of oyster lands in 1831. His brother Dr. Elias Ogden[623], of Natchez, Miss., having secured the title to "Barnet Hall," Dr. Oliver Wayne Ogden[619] returned to the estate, and for several years prior to his death gave up his very extensive medical practice, and devoted his time to his farm and the very fine mill on it. He died at "Barnet Hall" and was buried with his wife and several other members of the Ogden family in the family burying ground on the estate. At his death, his dau. Laura E. Ogden[1729], received the title to "Barnet Hall" from her uncle Dr. Elias Ogden.

Dr. Elias Ogden[623] was born in Morris Co., N. J., and studied medicine with his uncle Dr. Isaac Ogden[243], at New Germantown, N. J., after which he removed to Port Gibson, Miss., where he built up a lucrative practice. While in Port Gibson, he married Mrs. Ann M. Lane, née Routh, who owned one of the largest and finest plantations in that section of the country, lying in the suburbs of Natchez, Miss. Here he built an elegant residence called "Kenilworth," retired from the active practice of his profession, and devoted himself to the care of the extensive estate belonging to his wife.

Dr. Elias Ogden[623] accompanied Gen. Devereux to Bolivia, S. A., as surgeon, when the Bolivians were fighting for their independence. After the expedition returned to the U. S., Dr. Ogden settled upon his estate "Kenilworth" and retired from active life.

The Rev. Joseph B. Stratton, of Natchez, wrote of him a few years ago: "I officiated at his burial. He was an estimable man, respected by the whole community; he died Feb. 2, 1845, and was buried in the Routh Cemetery in the suburbs of Natchez. Mrs. Ogden died about the close of the war, at Berkley Springs, Va., where she is buried. They were both members of my church."

Gen. John A. Quitman, LL.D., father of Fredrika Quitman, was a man of great talent, attainment, and distinction. His father Rev. Frederick Henry Quitman was born in Germany, and graduated at University of Halle; became Lutheran missionary to Curaçoa Id. (Dutch W. I. Ids.), where he married Anna Elizabeth Hueck and remained twelve years, thence coming to the U. S. and received pastoral charge at Schoharie, N. Y., and later at Rhinebeck, N. Y., where, on Sept. 1, 1799, John A. Quitman was born.

John A. Quitman was educated by his father. At 17 years of age he was instructor in Hartwick Academy, Otsego Co., N. Y., teaching Greek, Latin, English and arithmetic. In 1818 was professor in Mount Airy College, Germantown, Pa., remaining one year. Thence removed to Chillicothe, O., having engaged with Hon. Platt Brush to study law and tutor his children. Completed law studies in three years and was admitted to bar in Natchez, Miss., and became partner with Mr. Griffith, a leading lawyer, rapidly rising to distinction. Elected State Senator of Miss. and twice Chancellor of state. Was Brig. and Maj. Gen. of militia, preparing a military system for the state. He was president of the board of trustees of Jefferson College, Miss. Princeton College conferred degree of A.B. and La Grange College, Tenn., degree of LL.D.

Politically, he early adopted doctrine of "States' Rights" as expounded by Thomas Jefferson. In 1836 organized, largely at own expense, company of Mississippians to relieve Texans, and restored order among people flying before Santa Anna. In outbreak of Mexican War in 1846, he received commission of Brig. Gen. from Pres. Polk, and acted under Gen. Taylor. At taking of Monterey, he led his 500 men over redoubt to central square of city, his horse being wounded, and his hat brim torn off. Under Gen. Scott he led the assault at Vera Cruz, and commanded the expedition against Alvarado.

On May 12, 1847, was commissioned Brig. Gen. in regular army. At taking of City of Mexico, Gen. Quitman's troops stormed fortress of Chapultepec and the Belen Gate, and were the first to plant American colors on battlements of enemy. He received Gen. Scott with military honors on Grand Plaza of city, who immediately made Gen. Quitman Governor of City of Mexico. On Sept. 7, 1848, he received commission as Brevet Maj. Gen. for distinguished services. Dec. 2, 1848, the U. S. Congress presented him with sword handsomely jewelled and engraved, given by hand of Pres. of U. S. Citizens of Natchez also presented him with a gold and jewel-hilted sword, suitably engraved; also received sword from citizens of Charleston, S.C.

He was elected Gov. of Miss. in 1848; member of Congress in 1855 and 1857. He was a great and pure statesman, rivaling in influence and power John C. Calhoun. He died July 17, 1858, "personally the most popular man in America." The Miss. Legislature and bar, and the U. S. Congress paid his memory every honor.

Tiffin, O., Jan. 27, 1840; dau. of Abishai and Lucinda Hoisingden, of Woodstock, O.; 2d m. dau. of Col. Thomas Hunt, then wid. of Gen. Josiah Snelling, U. S. A.
Rev. Jonathan Edwards Chaplin[1973] grad. at Yale College in 1808. He studied law, removed to Buffalo, N. Y., and in 1815 was admitted to practice in Supreme Court of N. Y. In the war of 1812, he was appointed aide to Gen. Porter, and contracted intemperate habits, which continued many years, and nearly proved his ruin. In 1818 he removed to Urbana, O., to practice law, and in 1820 married Harriet Hoisingden, but continued his downward career. "With great versatility of talent, a ready wit, and an almost exhaustless fund of anecdote, he had a sort of popularity with the town classes, even after he had reached a point of extreme moral degradation.

"In 1830 his mind took a new direction; he abandoned his evil habits, professed faith, and became a member of the Meth. Epis. Church. Though regarded as a highly accomplished lawyer, he deemed it his duty to preach, and was licensed as a local. From 1833 to 1837 he was Principal of Norwalk Seminary, Ohio. In 1834 he was admitted to the Ohio Conference. He left the Seminary and labored by appointment of the Conference with great acceptance and success in Elyria, O., 1838, Tiffin, O., 1838–9, and Maumee City 1841.

"While at Tiffin his wife died, leaving him with two children, the youngest only a few weeks old. He second married, at Maumee City, the widow of Gen. Josiah Snelling, then late of the 5th Infantry, U. S. A., and daughter of Col. Thomas Hunt, another distinguished officer of the army. In 1842 he was appointed principal of the branch of the State University at White Pigeon, Wis., and the college prospered under his administration. But under these labors his health gave way, and he resigned his place in the institution. He died Sept. 15, 1846, aged about 57. With his last breath he cried: 'All is peace; all is glory.'

"Before his conversion he seemed to have lost utterly all power of resistance to the craving for drink, and yet amidst it all there remained amiable and able traits of character. Unlike most inebriates he was always in good humor, and no man at any time doubted his stern integrity. Was never profane, vulgar or wicked in language, and was never known to speak an unkind word to his wife in his wildest moments of dissipation. After conversion he became a temperance advocate, and his lectures on temperance were like a tempest, sweeping all before them, and scores were reclaimed. As a preacher he was energetic, impressive, eloquent and successful in winning souls. To the needy he was more likely to give the whole of his last loaf than half. Multitudes honored and revered him while living, and remembered him with gratitude and veneration."

There were 2 children by his 1st m. and none by the 2d m.

Col. William Edwards[872] was apprenticed to his uncle Col. Oliver Spencer, who was at that time a tanner and currier at Elizabethtown, N. J. Col. Edwards introduced the system of tanning leather now used in nearly all the tanneries of the United States, which requires but about one-fourth of the time previously taken by the old European process.

He removed from Elizabethtown to Northampton, Mass. where he built his first tannery. He sent his first leather to Boston in 1794. The hemlock bark having failed in the Connecticut valley, he determined to utilize the vast hemlock forests of the Catskill Mts., and in 1817 removed to Hunter, Green Co., N. Y. He erected his model tannery on Schoharie creek, from which he annually shipped 10,000 sides of sole-leather to the New York market. He invented many machines and appliances for the better production of leather, and made water-power lighten manual labor in many ways. The great success of American manufacture of leather is to be traced directly to the improved methods first employed by Col. William Edwards[872].

Col. Joseph Jackson was born in a log house on the north bank of the Rockaway River, in Morris Co., N. J., about a mile above the present village of Rockaway. He was educated at the Morris Academy, where he specially studied French and surveying.

There were but five houses in Rockaway at his birth, but by the establishment of various industries he became known as the founder of Rockaway village. He owned and operated the Rockaway grist-mill, saw-mill, a store, and two forges, beside other business enterprises. He was especially active in the mining and manufacture of iron, and entered a partnership with his brother William Jackson, in operating a rolling mill at Paterson, N. J., and when the Government advertised, in 1820, for a sample 5-ton lot of round iron for the navy yard at Washington, the sample submitted by Jackson Brothers was accorded the best, and a contract was made with them for 200 tons. They were the first manufacturers in the U. S. to make rolled round iron.

Col. Jackson was the means, Nov. 1796, of getting a post-office established at Rockaway village, and was acting postmaster until removed by Pres. Tyler in 1843. Feb. 26, 1801, he was made Major of 1st Battalion, 3d Reg't, Morris Militia, and in 1804, Colonel of Reg't. He was in active service in the War of 1812, but resigned his position in 1817. He was a strong adherent of Gen. Jackson, but late in life became a Whig.

He was Judge of the Common Pleas Court, Morris Co., from 1813 to 1832, and was a Ruling Elder of the Rockaway Presbyterian Church. For years before his death, he was sole owner of the Rockaway rolling mills, and had many profitable contracts with the Government.

Dr. Samuel Fowler was a direct descendant of John Fowler, who came from England and settled on Long Island before 1665. He was one of the most distinguished men of North Jersey, and a physician of wide repute. His was the leading mind in all medical consultations, and at the meetings of the medical society. Of great versatility of talent, he engaged in many enterprises and was successful in all.

He 1st m. 1808, Ann Breckenridge Thompson, dau. of Col. Mark Thompson, of Changewater, N. J., an officer of the Revolution, and a member of Congress under Washington's administration. The only child by this marriage became the wife of Hon. Moses Bigelow, of Newark, N. J.

After his 2d m. (to Rebecca W. P. Ogden[886]), he carried on the manufacture of iron at the Hamburg, N. J., forges, and his business sagacity made remunerative a hitherto failing business, which gave an impetus to this industry hitherto unknown in the county, and which has been felt ever since.

Dr. Fowler was also a distinguished naturalist and mineralogist, and collected a valuable cabinet of American minerals. He corresponded with many scientific men at home and abroad, and was an honorary member of many of the scientific societies of Europe and America. He was a personal friend and warm supporter of Gen. Jackson, and was elected to the 24th and 25th Congresses. He died at Franklin, N. J., and is buried in the North Church Cemetery.

Col. Francis Barber Ogden[894] was appointed Consul of the U. S. to Liverpool by Pres. Andrew Jackson in 1829, and continued in that office until 1840, when Pres. Van Buren transferred him to Bristol, which consulate he held until death.

He was of an inventive turn of mind, and employed his leisure time in devising improvements in the marine engine. He was the first to apply the principles of the expansive power of steam. He joined with Capt. Ericsson in constructing the first experimental steamboat launched upon the Thames, and which, as a token of his respect, Mr. Ericsson named the "Francis B. Ogden." He died and was buried at Bristol, England, the following being inscribed upon his monument:

"Sacred to the memory of Colonel Francis Barber Ogden, a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, and Consul of the United States of America for this Port. Born at Boonton in the State of New Jersey, U. S. A., March 3, 1783: Died at his residence in this City July 4, 1857, aged 74 years."

Mrs. Ogden's family, the Pownalls, are said to be of great antiquity in the County of Chester, England.

Chetwood De Hart.

JUDGE ELIAS B. DAYTON OGDEN[902] was one of the most prominent of Gov. Aaron Ogden's children, and was born at Elizabethtown, N. J. He graduated at Princeton at 19 years of age, and immediately began the study of law. He was licensed as an attorney in 1824, as a counsellor in 1829, and was made Sergeant-at-Law in 1837, being the last lawyer in New Jersey who ever received that appointment. He began his legal career in Paterson, N. J., which at that time was a small, struggling town on the Passaic river, but which rose rapidly in importance from its growing factories. DAYTON OGDEN (as he was generally called) had many competitors in his chosen profession, but soon became an able advocate, and secured a large clientage.

Paterson was then included in Essex Co. and its lawyers were obliged to attend court at Newark, the county-seat. Soon after receiving his counsellor's license, young OGDEN was appointed Prosecutor of the Pleas, the most important office of the kind in the state. In the prosecution of his duties he displayed great assiduity and unusual legal talents. The criminal business of the county was very large, requiring unusual labor and time, and obliged him to be in Newark four times during the year. But while MR. OGDEN always performed his whole duty as Counsel of the State, he succeeded in retaining all his private practice, and his numerous clients never complained of his inattention to their interests. This condition of affairs was the result of his great industry and care in the conscientious discharge of all his legal duties. He filled the office of Prosecutor for two terms.

His political party early recognized his abilities, and twice elected him to the State Legislature. In 1844, when the best talent of the state was required irrespective of party affiliation, he was chosen a member of the Constitutional Convention.

He was appointed Associate Justice in 1848, and reappointed in 1855. At the expiration of his second term, Gov. Charles S. Olden, knowing the great worth of Mr. Ogden's legal talent, departed from the usual political procedure, and reappointed him, although of the opposite political faith, and thus did honor to Judge Ogden and to himself.

His judicial opinions were rendered after full and careful examination, and were always regarded as sensible and just. Among them was one in which he denied the right of judges of a State court to interfere for the release of a prisoner held by the judgment of a Federal court.

Judge Ogden was a man of sound judgment and sterling common sense; to his fellow members of the bar, he was genial and affable; as a judge he was painstaking and conscientious; and during his long term of office he enjoyed the respect and confidence of the whole community. At the expiration of his last term, he removed to Elizabeth, and occupied the homestead of his father, Gov. Aaron Ogden, where he was born, and where he died in 1865.

Judge Edwards[918] was the son of Hon. Timothy Edwards, and gr. son of Pres. Jonathan Edwards of Princeton College. Coming of the Dwight and Edwards families, he inherited their strong intellect, will and character. He received a legal training, and in early manhood went to New York City, where he was elected Surrogate, which office he filled for several years. Later he was a State Legislator, and for many years Corporation Counsel for the city. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1821, and gained great credit as a sound, able, and conservative statesman. After adoption of the Constitution he was appointed Circuit Judge of the Supreme Court for the circuit including New York, which office he filled until he was 60 years old, the age limit under the Constitution. A portion of the Whig party once ran him for Governor. He afterward held an appointment in the Custom House under Collector Maxwell, but spent the closing 20 years of his life in retirement at his home on Staten Id. He was an early and active member of the old Republican party, and died in the midst of the Civil War with the firm conviction that the Union would be perpetuated.

Judge Charles Jos. Ogden[2447] was educated at Romain's Institute, New Orleans, and at an early age began the study of law. He was a bright student and passed an examination for admission to the bar before he was 20. He remained in New Orleans but a short time after having qualified, and took up residence in Omaha, Neb., where he opened an extensive and lucrative practice. He became one of the ablest attorneys in the state, and was appointed Judge of the District Court at Omaha, serving three years with distinction. He resigned to attend to his large private practice. No decision made while judge was ever reversed by the Supreme Court of the state. He was a lifelong Democrat, was leader of that party in his adopted state, and was one of the organizers of the National League of Democratic Clubs. He was a brilliant orator and made the opening speech at the Baltimore convention, having been elected chairman at the Hoffmann House, New York City, in 1888. Judge Ogden was chairman of the Dem. State Central Committee that elected James Boyd governor of Nebraska. When the latter was unseated, it was Judge Ogden that went to Washington and had him reinstated. He died suddenly of apoplexy, having practised law for nearly 30 yrs. He left no children.

Charles Kinnis Ogden[1338] was educated at Lenoxville, Province of Quebec, Canada, under the Rev. Mr. Doolittle; also at the high school of Montreal, under the Rev. Mr. Simpson. He was Postmaster of Three Rivers, P. Q., Canada, for many years, and was interested in the telegraph and insurance business. He erected a fine building in Three Rivers for the use of telegraph and insurance companies, and as a post-office. He was a local agent of the Hudson Bay Co. Mr. Ogden never had connection with any secret or political organizations, and was always liberal in his views. He was a valued and consistent Episcopalian, and was chiefly instrumental in building a fine rectory for the English church clergyman at Three Rivers. His wife was the daughter of a merchant of Quebec.

Sept. 29, 1852; d. Jan. 30, 1891; dau. of Maj. Gen. Boyd Saunders.

David A. Ogden[1342] obtained a commission in the British Army when only 21 years old He went to England and was soon ordered to India. He fought in the Afghan war of 1878–80 with valor and distinction, for which he was made Captain in the "Prince of Wales' Own." He then served as Lieut. Colonel with the 5th Westmoreland. He afterward retired from the army and settled in the Island of Guernsey, whence he removed to Alderney, and there spent the remainder of his life.

His father-in-law, Maj. Gen. Boyd Saunders, was in command of the Bengal cavalry at Sealhote, N. W. India, when the mutiny of 1857 broke out. Through the faithfulness of a native servant, he and his family were hidden, and escaped the awful massacre. Their lives only were saved, as every thing they possessed was taken or destroyed by the maddened rebels. He was later appointed to assist in the trial of the rebel leaders.

Peter Ogden[1362] became, as his father Peter Skene Ogden before him, Chief Factor of the Hudson Bay Co. He inherited the best characteristics of his father, was fully trusted by the Company, and had the love and respect of the men under him, and the Indians with whom they traded.

Phrisine Brabbant, who became his wife, was of a French-Canadian family, and was born at Edmonton, on the Saskatchewan River. A year after her decease, a son-in-law thus wrote: "God bless the noble, good, holy woman,—my mother in name and deed. I was taken in hand by her as a wild, reckless lad just off the ocean, and she moulded me as she chose, although such a retiring woman. She was to me mother, mentor, director and adviser, and created an imperishable love and veneration in my heart."

The following children were residents of British Columbia, and more or less connected with the Hudson Bay Co.:

2646. Peter Skene Ogden, b. 1844; d. Frazier Lake, unm., Oct., 1870.

He was a clerk in the Hudson Bay Co. and was very popular with all who knew him. He possessed great strength, and was fond of athletic sports. His death was peculiarly sad. While hunting with some Indian companions, he followed the dogs in pursuit of a bear with such speed, he left his fellow-hunters far behind. When they came up, they found Peter and the lolling dogs lying on the ground beside the dead bear, awaiting their arrival. Being over-heated, he took a severe cold, from the effects of which he died a week later. The shock was so severe on his father that it caused his death, and both father and son were buried on the same day.

Capt. Duncan C. Ogden[1410] was the son of Judge D. A. Ogden, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., the associate of Hon. Alexander Hamilton in the practice of law. He was born in New York City, but early in life located in New Orleans to engage in commercial pursuits with his uncle. The trouble between Texas and Mexico aroused his patriotism, and in the summer of 1838 he went to Galveston and cast his lot with the new republic. He was at once appointed Captain in a new regiment called into service to resist a second invasion by Gen. Santa Anna. He commanded his company in the Cherokee War, and in the perilous expedition of Col. William G. Cook in running the military road from Red River to Austin. Capt. Ogden was in a number of murderous skirmishes with the Indians in behalf of his adopted state. At the Mexican invasion of San Antonio in 1842 he was taken prisoner by Gen. Adrian Wall and taken to Mexico, where he was confined in the Castle of Perote for eighteen months. He escaped with the other prisoners, but led by intense thirst to hazard his person, he was recaptured and sentenced to death. He was reprieved and through Cassius M. Clay was finally released.

Being a man of intellectual strength and superior education, he was elected to Congress by a grateful people. He served his district in Washington with as great ability as in war, and upon the expiration of his term, retired to private life. He resided in San Antonio, where he died, universally beloved and respected.

Elizabeth (Cox) Ogden was a native of Kentucky, but the family emigrated to Texas in 1829, when she was three years old. Her loyalty to Texas was as passionate as that of her husband. She was a "Daughter" both of the Republic and of the Confederacy, and was active in all their public functions in San Antonio. She was a woman of remarkable mental vigor and intelligence to the time of her death in her 78th year.

George Parish Ogden[1473] was born at Waddington (formerly Hamilton), St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. He was educated at the village school, Ogdensburg Academy, and by private tutors. He went to Quebec, Canada, in 1835, and resided there fifteen years, during which he made several voyages to England. In 1850 he removed to Troy, N. Y., where he was engaged in private banking and brokerage. In 1887 he removed from Troy to Boston, where he resided until his death.

1474. Henry Vining Ogden (Gouverneur[491], Abraham[176], David[50], Josiah[10], David[3], John[1]), b. Oct. 15, 1822; m. Oct. 27, 1852, Caroline Briggs, b. Jan. 27, 1825; dau. of Edmund Briggs and Hannah Killingly Walford, his wife.

Henry Vining Ogden[1474] was born at Waddington, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. His father, Gouverneur Ogden[491], early in life saw the vast possibilities of the wild and romantic region of the Adirondacks, and determined to aid in its development. He engaged in the erection of mills and furnaces, and built a mansion called "Ellerslie" at Waddington, where his large family of children were born. The father, being a graduate of Columbia College, New York, naturally desired that his sons should receive a liberal education.

Henry Vining Ogden was sent to the Vermont Episcopal Institute, Burlington, then under the supervision of the Rt. Rev. John Henry Hopkins, Prot. Epis. Bishop of N. Y. While thus preparing for college, the great financial panic of 1837 occurred, which caused the failure of his father in business. His college education being frustrated, and with an ambition to make his own livelihood, he decided upon entering commercial life. He went to Montreal, Canada, and entered the commission and grain exporting house of J. & T. Gordon. His clerkship here unfolded his native powers, and gained for him that spirit of self-reliance which so largely contributed to his later success in the business world, and which brought his services in greater demand.

Believing that greater possibilities awaited him in the West, he left Montreal via the Great Lakes, and travelled as far as Cleveland, O., whence he crossed the state to the Ohio River and arrived at St. Louis by water, in Aug., 1843. He quickly found employment as levee and forwarding clerk in the large commission house of Jas. E. Woodruff & Co., one of the members of which was Edward K. Collins, of New York, the projector and part owner of the Collins Line of ocean steamers. In 1847 he saw brighter prospects in the South, and despite the prevalence of yellow fever in New Orleans, he decided to go to the latter city. With an enlarged business experience, he readily secured a position with Kelly & Conyngham, a large commission cotton, sugar and tobacco house, the firm also being financial agents of several banking houses of Kentucky. In the spring of 1848 he was taken with yellow fever, but happily recovered, becoming fully acclimated. In 1851 he accepted the unsolicited position of bookkeeper and assistant cashier in the general agency of The Sun Mutual Insurance Co. of New York. The advancing business of fire-underwriting had become important, and was in the line of Mr. Ogden's business tastes. While thus engaged in 1854, he unexpectedly was offered the resident secretaryship of The Liverpool and London and Globe Ins. Co., Southern Dept., with headquarters and local Board of Directors in New Orleans. Recognizing this as an all-important opening, he accepted the position. The business was prosperous until the breaking out of the Civil War, and when New Orleans surrendered to the Federal fleet in 1862, Mr. Ogden cast his lot with the Southern cause, believing the North had not the right to coerce the South to relinquish her slaves without due compensation, and entered the Confederate service. He sent his family North in 1860, and as a member of 5th Co. Washington Artillery of New Orleans, served with great devotion during the entire struggle. He participated in seventeen pitched battles, was in numerous skirmishes, and had four horses killed under him, but himself escaped personal injury. As a soldier, he was cool in emergency, unflinching in courage, and was ever animated by a Christian spirit and devotion to duty. His record had the entire approval of his officers, and he was honorably discharged and duly paroled at the close of the war. His wife and family rejoined him after a separation of five years.

When Mr. Ogden returned to New Orleans in May, 1865, he found the L. L. and G. Ins. Co. had felt constrained to appoint another resident secretary in his place; but he was offered, and accepted, the secretaryship of The Crescent Mutual Ins. Co. of New Orleans. While thus employed, in 1872, Mr. Ogden was notified by the British Foreign Office of his appointment as acting British Consul at New Orleans, pending the arrival of a new incumbent. He discharged the duties of the Consulate with such satisfaction to the Foreign Office for five months, it signified its appreciation of the important services rendered by Mr. Ogden in the following letter:

"Foreign Office,
"May 21, 1872.

"Sir: I am directed by Earl Granville to inform you that the Secretary of State for the Colonies has acquainted His Lordship that Mr. Ogden, while Acting British Consul at New Orleans, was of great service to the Governor at British Honduras in matters connected with its postal arrangements of that Colony; and I am to instruct you to inform Mr. Ogden that Lord Granville has received with satisfaction this testimony of the zeal evinced by him while temporarily in charge of Her Majesty's Consulate.

"I am, Sir
"&c. &c. &c.
(Signed) "E. Hammond.

"To Albany Fonblanque, Esqr
"&c. &c."

At a meeting of the citizens of New Orleans on Jan. 28, 1870, it was resolved to send a delegation of seventy citizens to Washington to confer with President Grant concerning the very dangerously disturbed political conditions existing in the city of New Orleans, largely consequent upon the enfranchisement of the negro. Mr. Ogden was one of the fifty or more delegates who accepted and went. Upon arriving at Washington, the delegation soon arranged an interview with the President. On that occasion, the Hon. John A. Campbell, ex-Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, acted as spokesman, and clearly placed and explained the political conditions obtaining in New Orleans to President Grant and the U. S. Attorney General, Geo. H. Williams, who was present throughout the interview. Subsequently, the delegation were twice before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, Senators Matthew H. Carpenter and Levi P. Morton presiding on the different occasions. The foregoing incident shows the high esteem and confidence reposed in Mr. Ogden by his fellow citizens.

In 1879, the resident secretary of the Southern Dep't of the Liverpool and London and Globe Ins. Co., who had been appointed in Mr. Ogden's place, suddenly died, and, with many others, he applied for the position. His reappointment was very gratifying to Mr. Ogden, as well as being a high compliment from his old company.

In 1893, and when 70 years of age, he suffered a stroke of apoplexy, accompanied by paralysis of the left side. He partially recovered from this, but had a second attack in 1895 and felt the necessity of resigning his secretaryship, to take effect Dec. 31, 1896. He was the first manager appointed by any foreign company having a department and headquarters in the South, and is today (July, 1903) the oldest survivor of the old fire-underwriting regime in the city of New Orleans. For the few past years, Mr. Ogden has resided in Milwaukee, Wis., going there from New Orleans in May, 1896.

Politically, Mr. Ogden was originally an old line Whig; consequently he had natural predilections for the Republican party; but a candid study of the political situation at the opening of the Civil War led him to fully espouse the Southern cause. The political conditions prevailing in Louisiana after the war confirmed his opinions, and he acted till late years with the Democratic party. Mr. Ogden always had a candid and unprejudiced judgment, and the following excerpt of a recent letter to a friend is apropos here, and characteristic of the man: "I felt badly when the Confederacy went down. Now I am sure the resolution of the Northern people that human slavery should be destroyed, and the Union should be maintained, successfully carried out, was the greatest tribute ever paid the Anglo-Saxon race."

Mr. Ogden is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. For more than thirty years he had been Secretary of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Louisiana; for about fifty years a member of the Vestry of Trinity Church, New Orleans; and for twenty-five years successively Junior and Senior Warden. Trinity Church has given six Bishops from among its rectors to the church at large, and Mr. Ogden's close association with these devoted and distinguished men furnished him with rare privileges for extended and liberal culture.

He has long been actively identified with the charitable work of New Orleans. He responded to the first call to organize the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and was made member of the first Board of Directors; was President of the Sunday League, the first organization in New Orleans for the better observance of the Sabbath,—the Society being active today; was President of the Society for the Indigent Blind, for which much money was collected for a suitable building and its equipment, which were passed over to the control of the state when the latter agreed to maintain the institution. For over thirty years Mr. Ogden was Director and Treasurer of the largely endowed orphan asylum known as the Society for Indigent Protestant Boys; was a member of the Board of Commissioners of the Fink Home for Protestant Widows and Orphans, another largely endowed institution.

"Upon resigning his position with The Liverpool and London and Globe Ins. Co. in 1896, and so severing a connection dating back forty-three years, the officials of the company signified their appreciation of his long service by voting him a pension for life, quite in accord with their well-known reputation for liberality, so that a connection beginning long ago will virtually end only with his death."

He was educated at Harvard, but ill health prevented him from taking his degree. He was afterward graduated from Columbia College Law School, and as member of the Bar. His chiefs were Judge Lacombe and Judge Beekman, and he did excellent work for the city in the office of the Corporation Counsel. For five years previous to his death, Mr. Ogden was the Secretary of the Committee of Counsel of the Lawyers' Title Insurance Co. In this position he rendered very efficient service, and the Company sustained a heavy loss in his death. Mr. Ogden was by nature kind, gentle and amiable, and, doubtless because of these qualities, few men in New York City had so large a number of friends.

George W. Ogden[1565] was born at Walton, N. Y. While a young man, he left his native town, Oct., 1836, and travelled by stage, canal and boat to Milwaukee, Wis.; thence by ox-cart to Lake Koshkonong, about 70 m. west of Milwaukee, and in four days arrived (Oct. 20, 1836) at the foot of the lake and made his claim on Rock River. Here he established himself as a farmer, was married in a few years, and reared all his children. He was a capable man, and was highly respected by all who knew him. He was always active and prominent in town and county affairs, being a leading Democrat until the nomination of Lincoln for President, when he voted for Lincoln and emancipation. He died at Milton, Wis.

His widow, Electa (Coon) Ogden, was born at Almond, N. Y. She is still living (Nov. 2, 1902) and possesses good health and unimpaired mental faculties.

Gabriel S. Mead succeeded his father, Alan Mead, in the tanning business at Walton, N. Y. The latter was one of the pioneer settlers of Walton, and about 1803 opened a tannery for general business. In 1810 he purchased the large tannery of John and Nathaniel Steele, and in 1815 introduced an improved process of grinding bark. Gabriel S. and his brother John succeeded their father in the business, and in 1842 built a more extensive tannery on "West Brook," Walton, which was burned in 1857, but rebuilt in 1858, when Mead, North & Co. became the firm name.

His wife, Eliza Ann Irene (Ogden) Mead[1566], was a prominent woman socially, and possessed rare and beautiful virtues. Her mental activities and general interest in public affairs are shown by a diary which she kept open from her school days. Her house was the rallying point in the projecting of important plans for the good of the community, and where peace was made between contending factions. Modest and retiring, but broad-minded and benevolent, she was the centre and inspiration of all good works in both church and community. She responded to every appeal of charity, and her cheerful presence was greatly appreciated in the homes of sickness and distress. Her tender nursings, timely counsels and general helpfulness endeared her to all classes, and her death was regarded as a public calamity.

Charles Butler, LL.D., was born at Kinderhook Landing (now Stuyvesant), Columbia Co., N. Y., and lived to be nearly 96 years of age, having used glasses and a cane but a short time before his death, although his life was despaired of from pulmonary troubles 60 years prior to the end. He also successfully resisted an attack of pneumonia but a year before his death, and closed his long, useful and honorable career in great peace at his home, 78 Park Ave., New York City.

Dr. Butler's mother was a lineal descendant of Oliver Cromwell. He received his early education in the district school at Kinderhook, and subsequently entered Greenville Academy, Greenville, N. Y. After leaving that institution, he studied law with Martin Van Buren, and was admitted to the bar in 1824. He began his legal practice in Geneva, N. Y., where he obtained large loans on bond and mortgage for many farmers who were suffering from lack of capital. In 1825, a few years after the Erie Canal was opened, which he actively sought to promote, he foresaw the vast possibilities of future western commerce, and while stopping in the little village of Chicago, then numbering but 200 inhabitants, he predicted the little Lake village was destined to become the largest inland city of America. In 1835 he induced his brother-in-law, William B. Ogden, to take up residence there, and himself became heavily interested in the Michigan Southern, Chicago and Rock Island, and Chicago and Northwestern railroads.

As a young man he was a personal friend of John Jacob Astor, and induced the great millionaire to invest money in the development of the country about Geneva, where he was at the time practising law. He was a warm friend of Samuel J. Tilden, and was associated with him in many legal battles. He successfully fought the repudiation movement in Indiana. He enjoyed the firm friendship of several great literary men, as James Anthony Froude and Matthew Arnold, and received many personal letters from Thomas Carlyle. During the great theological battle between the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Briggs and the Union Theological Seminary, Dr. Butler was a tower of strength for Dr. Briggs and the more liberal thought he represented.

MAHLON DICKERSON OGDEN, Esq.

No. 1581

Dr. Butler went to New York City in 1834, and became an active member of the Council of New York University. He and his wife, Eliza Abigail (Ogden) Butler[1577], helped to found the Protestant Half Orphan Asylum and also the Union Theological Seminary. In 1836 he took a seat in the Council of New York University, and was made President of the Council in 1849, but resigned upon going abroad. He was again made President in 1886.

The Wabash University conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. in 1853, and later the New York University did the same; although he was eminently qualified, he had no penchant for titles and preferred the plain address. He was one of the founders of the Union League Club, a member of the Century Association, Sons of the Revolution, New England Society, American Fine Arts Society, Metropolitan Museum of Arts, and American Museum of Natural History.

His splendid philanthropy, his eminence as a lawyer, and his fine qualities of manhood made him a conspicuous and beloved citizen for very many years. Dr. Butler made many generous gifts to charitable and educational institutions, the most important being an endowment of $100,000 which he gave in Mar., 1890, to found the Edward Robinson Chair of Biblical Theology of the Union Theological Seminary, and at the same time $100,000 to New York University in memory of his son, Abraham Ogden Butler, and his elder brother, Benjamin Franklin Butler, who was Attorney-General in the Cabinet of Andrew Jackson.

He enjoyed a remarkably successful birthday anniversary in completing his 93d year. His many friends of all ages surrounded the hospitable table at his home, and the ninety-three brightly-burning candles could hardly impress the minds of his friends with the actual length of his days, because of his physical vigor, active mind, and very great joy of soul. Full of years, honors, riches, and with the profoundest love and esteem of a multitude of friends, his unselfish and benevolent life ended in great comfort and peace. His body was interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, and upon his monument occur these well-chosen words: "Loving and devoted in every relation of life, large-hearted, liberal, patriotic and devout, a leader in civic and Christian efforts for the public good."

William Billings Sheldon and Ann Bonesteel, his wife.

Mahlon Dickerson Ogden[1581] was born in Walton, N. Y., and named for his father's personal friend, Hon. Mahlon Dickerson, Governor of New Jersey. He was graduated from Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., and studied law in the office of Chief-Justice Swain, at Columbus, O. In 1837 he went to Chicago, formed a partnership with Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, and finally entered the firm afterward known as Ogden, Sheldon & Co. He was the legal member of the firm to advise in regard to titles, etc., in the large land deals of those days.

He possessed a very high character as a business man, and his genial disposition and amiable qualities of mind and heart won for him a host of friends in both private and public life. The high order of his business qualifications made him a valued and influential citizen. He purchased the block just north of Washington Park, and there built his residence. Surrounded by heavy shrubbery, it was the only building left untouched by the great Chicago fire of 1871 on the North Side, in the long stretch from the river to Lincoln Park. He later took up residence in the suburb of Elmhurst.

He was successful in his business ventures, and his death was mourned by a large circle of representative commercial and public men of Chicago. His funeral was held at St. James' Episcopal Church, North Side, which was crowded with an earnest and devout assembly. The services were conducted by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Clarkson of Nebraska, who had been rector of "old St. James'" at a time when the Ogden family were prominent members of that congregation. Bishop McLaren was present, but being ill, took no part in the services. Bishop Clarkson paid a glowing tribute to the worth of Mr. Ogden, the high position he had held in the development of the city, and the great loss sustained by the people of Chicago. The pall-bearers were Messrs. E. C. Larned, Henry W. King, E. Y. Watkins, W. H. Bradley, George M. Higginson, E. S. Chesbrough, Judge Thomas Drummond and Hon. Isaac N. Arnold. The remains were deposited in the family vault in "Graceland," where the singing of "Nearer, my God, to Thee," "Rock of Ages," and "Lead, Kindly Light," ended the solemn and impressive services.

HOUSE IN WALTON, N. Y., IN WHICH NELSON KNOX WHEELER AND (No. 1582) EMILY BUTLER OGDEN WERE MARRIED

Emily Butler Ogden[1582] was born in Walton, N. Y., and had the advantages of the educational institutions of her early life. As might be expected of one of the ancestry from which she descended, she well maintained the standard of a clear, firm mind and a strong character which distinguished the Ogden family for centuries, and of which she and all her sisters and brothers were remarkable examples.

She was a woman of splendid presence, and possessed the highest type of the social and Christian graces. She was eminently high-minded and right-minded in all her relations in life, was respected by all who knew her, and was best loved and appreciated by those who knew her best. She was the type of all that is finest in woman, and was so wise and calm in her judgment, that her decision on any subject was never disputed by any of her family. She was noted throughout all her large family connection for her wonderful control of children, all obeying her immediately, and without any punishment. Her brother-in-law, Mr. Butler, who knew her intimately for fifty-seven years, said her self-control was so great that he had never known her to speak sharply or impatiently.

Emily Butler Ogden's strength of judgment and poise of character are readily explained by that dominant factor of her ancestry—strength of intellect. It is an interesting fact, and illustrative of hereditary law, that an unusual number of the descendants of John Ogden, of Elizabethtown, were teachers, lawyers, judges, governors, military men, and state and national legislators; all the learned professions have been well represented. In peace and in war, they have always been found in the fore-rank, maintaining their strong intellectual, social and moral prestige.

Judge Nelson Knox Wheeler was the eldest son of William Wheeler, of New London, Conn., and Eleanor Knox, his wife, of Blanford, Mass., daughter of William Knox, and granddaughter of Capt. William Knox, of the war of the Revolution. Gen. Henry Knox, of Revolutionary fame, was of the same family.

Nelson Knox Wheeler was born in Blanford, Mass., and when six weeks old the parents removed to Partridge Id., on the east branch of the Delaware River, the babe Nelson being carried by his mother on horseback the entire 150 miles to the town of Hancock, N. Y. The hills of the Delaware surrounding their forest home were covered by a dense growth of heavy pine timber, and here the father engaged in the manufacture of lumber and the running of rafts to the Philadelphia market. After a residence of about ten years in Hancock, the family removed northward to Deposit, Delaware Co., N. Y., in the year 1814, where Mr. Wheeler united with William Butler and Silas Crandall in buying the entire tract of land comprising the present portion of Deposit lying in Broome Co., a few village lots having been previously purchased. The west boundary line described in the deed of conveyance was "a line of marked trees" and now the county line in the village between Delaware and Broome Counties.

There were few inhabitants in Deposit at that early day. There was one public house or "tavern," one or two stores, one school-house, but no church. It was here at the district school that Nelson K. Wheeler began his education. In due time he and his older sister were sent to an academy at Oxford, Chenango Co., for one year. From Oxford, he entered the Cortland Academy, Homer, N. Y., where he prepared for college. Thence he entered Hamilton College one year in advance and remained two years, when he matriculated at Union College, and graduated in 1828.

Having chosen the legal profession, he studied law in the office of Samuel Sherwood, Esq., in Delhi, N. Y., and began its practice there in 1832 in partnership with the Hon. Noadiah Johnson, who was then a Member of Congress. After the death of Mr. Johnson, he formed a partnership with his brother, Truman H. Wheeler, Esq., under the law firm of "N. K. & T. H. Wheeler," which existed until 1849.

Nelson Knox Wheeler was married to Emily Butler Ogden[1582] in Walton, N. Y., by the Rev. Mr. Maxwell, of the Scotch Pres. Church of Delhi. The accompanying illustrations are of the quaint doorway and hall of the Walton house and of the old Colonial mantel and closet of the room in which the marriage ceremony was performed. They established their home in Delhi, where two sons and three daughters were born to them, and in 1849 they removed to Deposit. Here they resided upon a large estate they named "Laurel Bank Farm," and the two youngest children, daughters, were added to the household.

While in Delhi, Mr. Wheeler was for one term District Attorney of the county, and was Judge and Surrogate one term. He was the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas under the old system, and during his incumbency occurred the notorious "Anti-rent" troubles of the county. He was twice elected member of the State Legislature, and served with distinction.

In 1865 he went west to attend to the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage in Illinois and Wisconsin, and to take part in the reorganizing of the Chicago, St. Paul & Fond du Lac R.R. Co. After spending a few years in the West, he returned to his family in Deposit. He still retained his law practice, but his time was largely employed in the supervision of his extensive farm lands. He later accepted the office of Deputy Collector of Customs in New York City, under Collector Hiram Barney, which office he held for several years, and until appointed by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of New York as Police Justice for a term of ten years, commencing Jan. 1, 1874. He held this office to the time of his death, Sept. 21, 1880. He was interred in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Deposit, N. Y.

NO. 2971, WILLIAM OGDEN WHEELER.

William Ogden Wheeler[2971] was born in Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y., Oct. 14, 1837, and died in New York City, Jan. 27, 1900.

When about twelve years of age, his parents removed from Delhi to Deposit, in the same county, where the family had long held large landed possessions; his grandfather, William Wheeler, having been one of three purchasers of a large tract of forest land, the western boundary of which is described in the deed as "a line of marked trees," and which afterward became the dividing line between Broome and Delaware Counties. A portion of this original purchase has ever since been in the possession of the family.

Deposit, the Indian name of which is "Oquaga," was originally in Delaware County, a part of the village also being in Broome; the population having increased more rapidly in the latter, it is now officially called in Broome Co.

Here the early years of William O. Wheeler were passed. His health, always delicate, deprived him of his full share of the enjoyments common to that delightful period of life. He loved to excel in any sport or undertaking, and doubtless the fact that he could not fully join in the rough-and-tumble sports of his more robust companions caused him many unhappy hours. This love of excellence seems to have been born in him and to have followed him through life. Anything that was worth doing at all, was with him worth doing well, and he had little patience with any one who attempted to excuse half-way work of any kind.

Delicate health also deprived him of the advantages of a college education; but private tutors, a love for reading, keen powers of observation, and a wonderfully retentive memory so made up for this, that it was never missed.

When about twenty years of age he for a time managed his father's farm, "Laurel Bank," but this not proving a congenial occupation, he went to Chicago and entered the employ of his uncle, William B. Ogden[1578]. About this time Mr. Ogden had purchased the residence near High Bridge, N. Y., known as "Villa Boscobel," on which he contemplated making alterations and improvements. This work he entrusted to his nephew, William Ogden Wheeler, and the result was another proof of the far-sightedness of that far-sighted man. Mr. Wheeler found this work thoroughly congenial, and his natural taste for landscape gardening was fully gratified in seeing the results of his own planning develop into the thing of beauty which "Boscobel" became.

After the completion of this work, Mr. Wheeler travelled for a number of years, visiting other countries, as well as becoming better acquainted with his own. In 1882 he purchased the Judge Sterling property in Sharon, Conn., which, after improving and beautifying, he named "Sterling Elm," in honor of the magnificent elm tree standing guard at the entrance,—one of the largest, if not the largest and most beautiful elm in the state of Connecticut.

Here he delighted to entertain his friends and acquaintances. On one occasion, when General Sherman was to be his guest, he invited his neighbors to come and shake the General by the hand, an invitation that was accepted not only by his Sharon neighbors, but by those from adjoining towns. Hundreds were present, yet such an adept in the art of entertaining was Mr. Wheeler, that the affair passed off without a hitch. Every grade of society was represented, and perhaps Mr. Wheeler's faculty for making all in his house feel equally at home was never more severely tested, yet each one at parting was made to feel that he had done his host a personal favor by partaking of his hospitality and helping him make the visit of his illustrious guest a pleasant one.

For several years before his death, William B. Ogden had interested himself in genealogy, intending to trace his family back to the original immigrant. Being a very busy man it was more in the nature of recreation with him than otherwise; yet his wide acquaintance gave him an advantage that enabled him to gather a mass of genealogical information, only to be lost forever at the burning of his Chicago home at the time of the great fire there. A few notes, mostly made from memory, were all that remained at the time of his death in 1877.

With this slender genealogical capital as his only stock in trade, Mr. Wheeler now set out to complete the work his uncle had begun,—that of making an Ogden Genealogy that should begin with the founder of the family in America, and end with the latest known descendant. It is doubtful if he realized the magnitude of this self-imposed task, and yet he may have, for as difficulties began to develop he seemed the more determined to overcome them. That nothing might stand in the way, he gave up his home in Sharon to his sister, Mrs. A. C. McClurg, and opened an office in Morristown, N. J., which seemed to be the most advantageous point to work from. He now gave his own time to tabulating the results of searches made under his direction, not only in the States, but in Canada as well; also some correspondence was had with searchers in England. No expense was spared, and no amount of time or effort was considered too great to accomplish what he had undertaken.

His perseverance and patience were a revelation to those employed by him in the work. When a searcher came in empty-handed, as was often the case, he would say in his cheery way: "The next best thing to finding what you are looking for, is to find out where it cannot be found; it narrows the search just that much."

While the Ogden work was under way, Mrs. Tiffany, Mr. Wheeler's sister, became interested in tracing the ancestry of her grandmother, Eleanor (Knox) Wheeler. This he found time to assist her in, and succeeded in tracing the line back to William Knox, brother of John Knox, the reformer. It was Mr. Wheeler's intention to follow out and complete this line as soon as the Ogden work was done. But while "Man proposes, God disposes." His health, never of the best, began to give way. Several years of steady application to this brain-racking work had so impaired his nervous system, that symptoms began to develop which he dared not disregard.

Reluctantly he left his work to another, and spent a winter in the South. For several years he had been practically homeless, and he began to feel that home was the place for him now. Accordingly he purchased the so-called Taylor property in Sharon, adjoining "Sterling Elm" on the north, to which, after some necessary repairs and alterations, he came and settled down for rest and recuperation. But the spirit was upon him; he wanted to be in closer touch with the work. The office in Morristown was closed and the work continued in Sharon, mostly by letter, often from dictation, and always by his direction, up to the day of his going to New York City to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Tiffany, a journey from which he never returned. In a few short weeks both brother and sister were sleeping in beautiful Woodlawn Cemetery, there to rest "until the day dawns, and the shadows flee away."

Thus in brief outline is the life of William Ogden Wheeler traced. The character of the man, that which endeared him to so many, and which caused such sincere mourning when he died, has hardly been touched upon, nor can it be more than touched upon in the space of an article like this. The obligations under which he has placed the Ogdens and allied families in rescuing their history from fast perishing records, and placing them in permanent form for preservation can neither be estimated nor appreciated. Beginning at a time when genealogical pursuits had only begun to excite the interest they have since attained, he found little to encourage, and much to discourage him from persevering as he did. It was his beloved mother's ancestry he was tracing. His mother's brother, William B. Ogden, whom he also loved and honored, had begun it, when death cut short his efforts. It seemed left to Mr. Wheeler to carry the work forward, or it might never be done.

WILLIAM OGDEN WHEELER'S WORKSHOP

Where material for this Genealogy was collected

This was enough for him to know. It was his work now, and he did it, and doubtless he shortened his life in the doing of it.

This was one characteristic of WILLIAM O. WHEELER,—to do with his might whatever he believed was his to do. Another characteristic, and one which so wound itself about all others that it can hardly be treated by itself, was his affectionate nature. His love for his friends was a ruling passion with him. Mention has already been made of his fondness for entertaining, a thing commonly done for the pleasure derived from doing it. Not so with MR. WHEELER. One who knew him well can testify, he was never happier than when planning happiness for others, and the better he succeeded in doing this, the greater was the satisfaction he derived from it. In all this he was ably seconded by his personal attendant, Peter Rasmussen, a giant in stature, with a heart in proportion to his size, and almost as widely known as MR. WHEELER himself.

MR. WHEELER's condition of health demanded just such service as Peter could give; strong of heart as well as of hand and withal as gentle as a little child, his equal in the sick-room was difficult to find. His attachment for MR. WHEELER was phenomenal, and so necessary to each had the other become, that nothing short of the death of one or the other was expected to part them. Yet when loved friends came to need such care as Peter was peculiarly fitted to bestow, he was allowed to go and to remain as long as earthly assistance was of use to that friend.

To illustrate the unselfish kindness of MR. WHEELER, one incident of many known to the writer may be mentioned. Two old ladies of education and refinement, but whose income called for the closest economy, were invited to spend a summer at his home in Sharon. Knowing their aversion to accepting charity, he so disguised the invitation that it had the appearance of a business proposition. MR. WHEELER had to go away for the summer, and would they do him the favor of coming to Sharon and keeping his horses exercised and entertaining any who might call during his absence? They accepted the invitation and spent a summer full of enjoyment, such as they had long been strangers to. They drove all about the country, entertained and were entertained, made many pleasant acquaintances, and whatever thoughts they may have had of the future, they did not allow them to sadden the joys of the present. They were children again, without a care in the world, happy in the thought they were doing their good friend a kindness, and without a suspicion that their good friend was knocking about from place to place, waiting for the time when he could return to his own comfortable home without cutting short the happy times they were having. When MR. WHEELER returned, and the old ladies went back, it was to a home made brighter, not alone by recollections of the delightful outing they had enjoyed, but by a substantial sum of money which he insisted was only a fair equivalent for the service they had rendered.

There are many charitable people, many whose hearts go out to those who suffer and are in need, but there are few who put themselves to personal inconvenience in order that others may be happy and comfortable.

Instances like the foregoing are many, though this is the only one it seems best to mention. What he did was done in a manner to attract the least notice to himself, and yet give the greatest comfort to those benefited by his generosity. It is only fair to state, however, that this trait was inherited, and is one for which the family have been noted for generations, though perhaps none ever carried it to finer points than he.

His charity did not take the form of endowing churches or colleges, nor is it known that he gave to foreign missions. He chose to relieve present needs rather than to provide for possible needs of the future, and in so doing he many times accomplished both.

In writing a biography of MR. WHEELER, one is hampered by the recollection of his aversion to having his acts of charity spoken of. Otherwise many things could be mentioned that would clearly show the unselfish nature of all his charitable acts. In his own quiet way he sought opportunities of sharing with those less fortunate the benefits wealth had bestowed upon him. How many hearts he made happier, and how many burdens he made lighter may never be known. His most intimate friends knew only by chance, for he fulfilled the injunction, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

If this book had been finished in his day little, if any, mention would have been found in it of his long and patient labor upon it, which it is now the writer's happy privilege to acknowledge.

REV. CHARLES COMFORT TIFFANY, D.D.

The subject of this mention was a graduate of Dickinson College, Pa., and studied for the ministry at Andover Theological Seminary. During the last year of the Civil War he was Chaplain of the Sixth Connecticut Regiment, U. S. Volunteers. He had been pastor of the First Congregational Church of Derby, Conn., since 1857, and in 1867 he became rector of St. James' Church, Fordham, N. Y., remaining there until 1871, when he went to Boston as assistant minister in the Green Foundation of Trinity Church, and was in charge of St. Mark's Church. In 1874 he became rector of the Church of the Atonement in New York City; in 1880 he was made rector of Zion Church, where he remained until this parish was merged into that of Zion and St. Timothy. In 1884 Dr. Tiffany was elected Archdeacon of New York, from which office he retired in 1902.

While rector of Zion Church, New York, he married Miss Julia Henrietta Wheeler[2972], eldest daughter of Judge Nelson Knox Wheeler and Emily Butler Ogden[1582], his wife. After marriage they spent their winters in New York City, and the summers at their residence in Sharon, Conn. Dr. Tiffany died at North East Harbor, Me., Aug. 20, 1907.

"Mr. Edwin H. Sheldon, who died on Thursday, Dec. 18, 1890, at the house of his niece, 293 Madison Ave., in the sixty-eighth year of his age, was born in Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y. He there studied law in the office of Erastus Root, an eminent lawyer and politician, and was admitted to the bar.

"He married the youngest daughter of Mr. Abraham Ogden, of Walton, N. Y., and in 1849 removed with her to Chicago, where he became associated with his brother-in-law, the late Mr. William B. Ogden, in the large land office still existing under the name of Ogden, Sheldon & Co.

"He always took an active interest in the moral as well as the material interests of his adopted city, where his integrity and capability in business brought him into many positions of responsibility and trust.

"His purity of character and good judgment, combined with a genial disposition, and refined tastes which gave him unfailing enjoyment in nature and books, made him a delightful and valued companion."

He built a beautiful memorial chapel at Delhi, N. Y. (St. John's Prot. Episcopal), as a tribute to the worth of his parents. It was dedicated May 23, 1890, by the Bishop of Albany.

SAMUEL EDISON, JR.[1792], came of good old Dutch stock, his ancestry being traced back for 200 years, when they were extensive millers in Holland. Members of the family emigrated to America in 1730, and settled in New Jersey and on Manhattan Island. One Thomas Edison was a prominent banker in New York during the Revolution, and his name appears on the Continental money of that period. The Edisons are a long-lived family, and of strong, athletic build. SAMUEL EDISON, JR., was 6 ft. 2 in. in height, and in 1868, when 64 yrs. old, outjumped 250 men belonging to a regiment stationed at Ft. Gratiot, Mich. His father lived to be 98 yrs. of age, and his grandfather died at 102.

SAMUEL EDISON, JR.[1792], was born in Digby, Nova Scotia, his father's family having moved from New Jersey when the father, Samuel, Sr., was a lad. In early life SAMUEL, JR., removed to Canada, where he remained until the rebellion of 1838; he then removed to Michigan, and lived in Detroit one year, subsequently going to Ohio, where he lived until 1852. Thence he returned to Michigan and took up a permanent residence at Port Huron. He had learned the tailor's trade, but later entered commercial life, and engaged consecutively in the grain, commission, lumber, nursery, and land businesses. He was associated with Mr. G. W. Halfman, a chemist, in the manufacture of laundry and toilet soaps, baking powders, flavoring extracts, etc., their manufactory being known as the "Fidelity Chemical Works." He was a man of fertile resources and of great energy of character; hence he readily obtained a competency. Besides, he was a man of much intelligence, and for many years held the office of a magistrate.

His remarkable energy and activity are demonstrated in the following pleasing incident: About the year 1889, and when 85 years of age, he wished to visit Europe. His son, Thomas A. Edison, the famous electrician, gave him a letter of credit for $1,500, and the old gentleman, accompanied by a chum 65 yrs. old, whom he called "The Boy," sailed away, expecting to be gone but a few weeks. They were gone over four months, visiting England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Germany, and Holland, travelling on foot much of the way. They reached home safely, reporting excellent health and an enjoyable trip.

His advanced age finally brought its attendant weakness, and while en route to Ft. Myers, Fla., his son's winter residence, he died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Poyen, at Norwalk, O. He was buried at Port Huron, Mich., his old home.

NANCY (Elliott) EDISON, his wife, was of Scotch descent, and was a native of Chenango Co., N. Y. She was well educated, and for several years taught in a Canadian high school. "She was an industrious, capable, literary and ambitious woman."

3213. ELIZA S. EDISON, b. May 19, 1844; d. Dec. 18, 1847.

3214. Thomas Alva Edison, b. Feb. 11, 1847; 1st m. Dec. 25, 1871, Mary Stilwell, b. Newark, N. J., 1855; d. Aug. 9, 1884; 2d m. Feb. 24, 1886, Mina Miller, dau. of Louis Miller, Pres. of Chautauqua University.

Thomas Alva Edison[3214] was born at Milan, Erie Co., O., and when seven years old his family moved to Port Huron, Mich., where the remainder of his boyhood was passed. While a mere lad he started in business as a newsboy on the Grand Trunk Railway. In 1862 he published a weekly, called the Grand Trunk Herald, and did the printing in a freight-car, which also served the youth as a laboratory for experimental purposes. A bottle of sulphuric acid was accidentally broken, and the irate conductor struck young Edison on the ear, causing serious and permanent deafness. For saving the child of a station-master from being run down by a train, the father taught him telegraphy in return at Mount Clemens. He became a brilliant and rapid operator, and soon made his first important invention, an automatic transmitter of a message. From the West he went to Boston, where he invented the vote-recorder. For valuable inventions in stock-printing in connection with the Gold and Stock Telegraph Co. of New York, he received $40,000, which enabled him to build a permanent laboratory for experimental purposes.

His crowning achievement in telegraphy was the quadruplex system that followed his duplex. Among his other great electrical inventions are the microphone, the carbon transmitter, and the phonograph (1878). The most used of his inventions is the incandescent light, brought out in 1879. He built his laboratory at Orange, N. J., in 1886, where his later experiments have been conducted, and the kinetoscope was made a commercial success.

Mr. Edison has received many honors at international expositions and from foreign governments, among which are his appointment as a chevalier of the Legion of Honor from France in 1878, and as a commander in 1889. In 1892 he received the Albert Medal of the Society of Arts of Great Britain. His power of concentration and continued effort have been marvelous, he having, during fifteen years, worked on an average of twenty hours a day. His patents number nearly one thousand. His ingenuity in triumphing over seemingly insurmountable difficulties, and in attaining what seemed quite impossible, has secured for him the name of Wizard. As an ingenious inventor who can apply scientific truth to a practical end, Mr. Edison truly stands at the head.

JAMES COCHRAN OGDEN[3234] in 1857 was engaged in the grocery business in Lexington, Mo. In 1859 he removed to St. Joseph, Mo., where he was a member of the wholesale grocery firm of Kinney & Ogden, which relation continued till the early part of the Civil War.

In 1864, he was with Kercheval, Kinney & Powell, who, with 600 head of oxen and 60 wagons, loaded with groceries, crossed the plains, and located at Virginia City, Mont., the firm clearing about $150,000. The following year, MR. OGDEN entered the firm of C. D. Smith & Co., a grocery jobbing house in St. Joseph, Mo., the firm later becoming Smith, Kerr & Ogden. MR. OGDEN later withdrew, and as Buck & Ogden, at St. Joseph, engaged in the jobbing of hats. He established a number of retail grocery houses in small towns near that city, and was with the one at Union Star, Mo., when he died.

JAMES C. OGDEN[3234] was an excellent business man, and possessed a remarkably straightforward religious character. "His religion was always on hand—week days, as well as Sundays."

THE JAMES KILBORN OGDEN FAMILY TREE

Presented at his Golden Wedding, 1868

Now property of S. Wyler, Dealer in Antique Jewelry and Silverware, No. 4, West 28th St., New York City

James Kilborn Ogden[1834] was born in Elizabethtown, N. J. In the spring of 1814, and when 21 years of age, with one John Baker, he left home, and travelled horseback as far west as Pittsburg. Here the two young men cut trees for a raft, and upon it floated down the Ohio river, landing at Cincinnati, O., in the fall. He was by trade a potter, and at once established a pottery, the first west of the Alleghanies. He was a man of sterling integrity, possessed great business capacity, and was one of the most widely-known men of Cincinnati. Successful in business, he acquired much wealth for the day, and was, withal, a consistent Christian gentleman.

The golden wedding of Mr. Ogden and his wife was celebrated in 1868, at which time their children presented the worthy couple with an oak tree wrought in gold, a reproduction of which is herewith given. The golden oak is about ten inches high, the trunk and three main branches being finely engraved to closely resemble the natural oak bark. Each leaf is minutely engraved, and each acorn bears the initials of a member of the family. The base is an irregular circle, about nine inches across, and is made of oxidized silver. Upon this base are six fallen acorns, each one engraved with the name of a deceased member of the Ogden family. The oak is inscribed with the year of marriage, 1818. The scroll at the base of the tree bears the name of James K. Ogden, with birth year, 1793, and year of death, 1869. The gold shield, also at base of tree, bears the names of James K. Ogden and Margaret H. Ogden, his wife. This interesting and valuable heirloom is now in the possession of Mr. S. Wyler, dealer in antiques, at 4 W. 28th street, New York City, and should be secured by some member of the Ogden family who appreciates the traditions of a worthy ancestry.

1839. John Ogden (Ezekiel[794], Ezekiel[284], John[77], Jonathan[14], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Feb. 18, 1801; d. Jan. 23, 1891; m. Sept. 21, 1836, Jane Eliza Gray, b. Dec. 7, 1810; d. Jan. 8, 1904; dau. of Alfred Gray.

John Ogden[1839] was born in Essex Co., N. J. Beside the English blood inherited from his father's side, he possessed excellent Scotch blood through his mother's ancestry. She was descended from John Magie, who was banished from England because of his ultra Protestantism during the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

John Ogden in early life learned the trade of wagon-builder, and followed that vocation for 12 yrs. He then engaged in mercantile life in Elizabeth, N. J., where he remained for 4 yrs. In the fall of 1834 he removed to Cincinnati, O., and in the spring of 1835 he went to Chicago and attended the great bond sale and made a number of investments. In Sept., 1835, he went to Milwaukee and bought several hundred acres of land, and built the first tavern for public entertainment in the little settlement. It was a small log structure and was located at the old mouth of the river in the Kinnickinnic valley. Four years later Mr. Ogden sold it to a man living on the east side, and agreed in the contract of sale to deliver the building to the purchaser. To his surprise he could find no man who would undertake to move the building. He thereupon went to Chicago, secured two scows, and successfully moved the tavern up the river, to the amazement of the natives.

From the time John Ogden[1839] located in Milwaukee as a pioneer settler, he took an active part in religious matters. On Apr. 11, 1837, assisted by Moses Ordway and the Rev. Cutting Marsh, he organized the first Presbyterian church in the territory of Wisconsin. He was one of the first Elders, and was later ordained a Deacon. This First Pres. Church of Milwaukee was afterward consolidated with the North Pres. Church, becoming known as Immanuel Pres. Church.

Mr. Ogden never took an active part in politics, but was a steadfast Republican. During territorial times, Governor Doty appointed him Justice of the Peace.

In 1843 he established the first carriage manufactory in Milwaukee, and remained the head of the firm until 1867, when he was succeeded by his sons under the firm name of G. W. Ogden & Co.

He died at his residence Jan. 23, 1891. Had he lived a few weeks longer he would have been 90 years of age. His health gave way but a month before he died. Upright in his dealings, and of sterling religious character, his honorable career ended in great peace.

CHILDREN (Chart 5):

3243. Abigail Ogden, b. June 30, 1838; d. unm. Jan. 29, 1892.

Oct. 17, 1839, Mary Barr Campbell, b. Shippensburg, Pa., 1822(?); d. Cincinnati, Apr. 26, 1889; dau. of Ebenezer Campbell and Ellen McCune, his wife.

Samuel Ogden[1840] began life as a carriage-builder in New Jersey. He later removed to Cincinnati, O., and engaged in mercantile business, but soon took up real estate enterprises in Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Chicago, in which he was eminently successful.

He was a man of marked integrity, charitable in his contact with all men, helpful to the weak and worthy, and especially to young men just starting in business. His life was more eloquent than his words, and his death was deeply lamented by all who knew him.

CHILDREN (Chart 5):

3250. George Campbell Ogden, M.D., b. Mt. Auburn, Cincinnati, O., Mar. 10, 1841. Graduated from Miami University, and later from the Ohio Medical School, where he received his degree. He spent much of his life in Cincinnati in the study of natural and physical science. He resides at present (1903) in Covington, Ky.

3251. Charles Augustus Ogden, b. Aug. 13, 1843; d. Oct. 14, 1877. He was trained as a chemist, but did not long follow that calling. He was a man of great versatility of genius, and was an adept at art, poetry and music. He was especially skillful with the violin, and became very popular because of his talents and acquirements.

Whaling and Louisa Tuttle, his wife; 2d m. John A. Tremble, Esq., a lawyer, from whom she was subsequently divorced, and permitted by the court to resume the name of her former husband. She resides (1903) in Covington, Ky.

1841. Rev. Joseph Meeker Ogden, D.D. (Ezekiel[794], Ezekiel[284], John[77], Jonathan[14], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 21, 1804; d. Chatham, N. J., Feb. 13, 1884; m. 1849, Emeline Atwood Sweasey, b. Newark, N. J., Apr. 26, 1822; d. Chatham, N. J., Aug. 17, 1890; dau. of Richard Sweasey and Hannah Hayes, his wife.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Ogden[1841] was graduated from Princeton College in 1824. He entered the Presbyterian ministry, and was installed first pastor of the Pres. Church of Chatham, N. J., in Nov., 1828. This church was organized Oct. 23, 1823, and the Rev. Asa Lyman, of Morristown, N. J., became its stated supply. His health having failed, he was compelled to resign his labors in 1827, and the congregation called the Rev. Dr. Ogden to become their settled pastor. The original house of worship soon became inadequate to accommodate the growing congregation, and a new church was erected in 1832. This building was subsequently enlarged and beautified in 1882, the efficient labors of the pastor, and the growing regard of the people requiring more extended accommodations. Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Ogden[1841] was not only popular with his own church and community, but was well known and appreciated throughout the state, having officiated at scores of weddings in various quarters. He resigned his church at Chatham, Sept. 23, 1873, having enjoyed an uninterrupted and successful pastorate of 45 years. Both pastor and wife sleep in the church burying-ground at Chatham.

CHILDREN (Chart 5):

3253. William Wilberforce Ogden, b. Mar. 1850; m. Marana N. Jarman.

3254. Caroline Townley Ogden, b. Aug. 16, 1851; m. Francis L. Minton.

3255. Joseph Wallace Ogden, b. Apr. 1853; m. 1884, Charlotte Ward.

Resides in Morristown, N. J., and is a successful broker on Nassau St., New York.

In July, 1902, members of the Pres. Ch. of Chatham, N. J. (see biographical mention of Rev. J. M. Ogden[1841] above), of which church his father had been pastor for 45 yrs., opened a subscription for the building of a new church. After securing pledges for $6,000 they approached Mr. Joseph W. Ogden[3255], who, upon scanning the list of subscribers, said, "I will tell you what I will do. If you will take this list back and get the men and women whose names it bears to withdraw their subscriptions, I will provide all the money required to build the church." The descendants of William C. Wallace, who was born the same year as the Rev. Dr. Ogden[1841], who graduated in the same class at college, and was his lifelong friend and parishioner, requested that they be permitted to provide the funds for the interior decoration. Mr. Ogden accepted the proposition, and the trustees decided to change the name of the church to the Ogden Memorial.

3256. Edward Prine Ogden, b. July 15, 1855; d. Feb. 2, 1899; m. Sarah Minton.
3257. Henry Day Ogden, b. Mar. 1856; m. Mary Freeman.

1843. Jonathan Ogden (Ezekiel[794], Ezekiel[284], John[77], Jonathan[14], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Essex Co., N. J., June 12, 1807; d. Chicago, Ill., June 4, 1888; m. Elizabeth Gorham, b. Conn., Sept., 1810; d. July 17, 1868.

Jonathan Ogden[1843] began his life-work in Essex Co., New Jersey, but in early manhood joined his two brothers John[1839] and Samuel[1840] in removing to Cincinnati, O., which was ever afterward his home. He was successful as a business man, and was widely known and esteemed. He was within a few days of his 81st birthday when he died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Philip D. Armour, in Chicago, while the latter was travelling with her husband in Europe. An obituary notice in a current newspaper ended with these words: "The late Jonathan Ogden was a man of blameless life. Throughout all its relations, he was a modest, quiet gentleman, genial in disposition, sincere in his friendship, and honorable in all his business transactions. After more than fifty years of residence in this community, he has passed away without an enemy, and sank peacefully to rest from old age, upon his Redeemer's bosom. The life of such a man is a daily example of rectitude to the oncoming generation."

He graduated at Nassau Hall in 1856, studied law, and was admitted to the bar June, 1859. He was active in politics and had an extensive law practice in Morristown, N. J. In 1871 his health began to fail and he removed to Vineland, where he died. They had 5 children.

3361. Cornelia Van Wyck Halsey, b. June 28, 1838.

She was educated at Troy Female Seminary. She is a member of Emma Willard Association, N. J. Society of Colonial Dames.

3362. Edmund Drake Halsey, Esq., b. Rockaway, N. J., Sept. 11, 1840; d. Rockaway, Oct. 17, 1896; m. Newark, N. J., May 27, 1869, Mary Halsey Darcy, b. Nov. 3, 1843; dau. of Henry Gray Darcy and Anne Mackenzie Drake, his wife, of Newark, N. J.

Edmund Drake Halsey[3362] was of the eighth generation in line of descent from Thomas Halsey, Sr., the Puritan immigrant of Southampton, L. I. He was graduated from Princeton College in 1860, and for two years studied law in Morristown, N. J., when the claims of his country prompted him to enlist as a private in Co. K., 15th Reg't, N. J. Vols. He rose rapidly in rank, being promoted Serg't-Major, Second Lieut. Co. F., and First Lieut. Co. D., all within the first year of his service. Although only 24 years of age, he served as Judge Advocate of courts-martial almost continuously in 1864. He participated in the marches and engagements of his regiment until Jan. 12, 1865, when he resigned and was honorably discharged because of broken health, which he never fully regained. He at once resumed his law studies, and was admitted as an attorney in Nov. 1865, and as a counselor in Feb., 1869.

Mr. Halsey's early life revealed a nobility of soul, purity of purpose and integrity of conduct that shaped his entire course through life. This high order of manhood was the foundation upon which he rose to eminence in professional and business life. It made him the trusted friend and adviser of persons in various walks in life, a moving spirit in charitable enterprises, and a bulwark to human society. An entry in his army diary made while his regiment was at Brandy Station in Apr., 1864, reveals the integrity and intent of his heart. "There has been quite a religious feeling throughout the regiment and, as you may say, throughout the army, of late. Next Sunday, Alanson proposes to hold communion and to receive some ten or fifteen into the Church. Providence permitting, I will be among the number, yielding to what I feel to be my duty, and hoping that such a step may add to my happiness here and hereafter. I deeply regret not having done it before." By "Alanson," he meant the Rev. Alanson Haines, Chaplain of the Reg't and a relative. His after religious life was straightforward and consistent, and for more than 29 years he was a Trustee of the Rockaway Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Halsey became known throughout the state as a cultured gentleman, an able lawyer, and a prominent man in public and business affairs. A biographer says of him: "He was a man of unusual culture and extensive learning in history and literature, a man of sound judgment and clear intellect, a good lawyer, with great business ability. With great simplicity and purity of character, he was modest and unassuming; seeking no advantage for himself, he gave himself freely for others, and was faithful in the performance of every trust and every duty. Working with untiring energy during many years of delicate health, he filled an important place in the community, and his kindness, generosity and devotion to others, his fidelity and perfect integrity, made him respected and beloved by all."

He followed his legal profession in Morristown from 1865 until his death, having been engaged in much important litigation concerning the water rights of the Morris Canal and Banking Co., and to the settlement of disputes concerning titles and boundaries between important mineral properties of Morris Co. The latter years of his life were largely employed in the care of estates as counsel or trustee. He was many years a Director, and from 1894, was President of the National Iron Bank; was Director of the Morristown Gas Light Co. and a Manager of the Morris Co. Savings Bank; and for 17 years a member of the Township Committee of Rockaway. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and served the party in the State Legislature during 1875 and 1876. He was a member of the Loyal Legion from 1888.

Mr. Halsey was especially interested in researches in local history. He probably knew more of North Jersey in regard to colonial and revolutionary events than any other one man, and especially the early history of his native county, which he had given special study from boyhood. His collection of books and early documents of Morris Co. had no equal. His favorite study was genealogy, in which he had few peers, and "while ardently pursuing the ancestral lines of many families, he derived quite as much pleasure in giving as in receiving information." His chief genealogical work was the history of "Thomas Halsey and His Descendants in America," to which he contributed a large amount of original matter. He was more or less associated for several years with Mr. William Ogden Wheeler in original researches for this "Ogden Genealogy," and the two were greatly attached in their co-operative labor of love. He also was Secretary and then Treasurer of the Washington Association of New Jersey, and a life member of the New York and the New Jersey Historical Society.

Mr. Halsey's sympathetic and generous nature led him to take an active part in private and public benevolence, and to ally himself with several important charitable societies. He devoted much attention to the management of the Morris County Children's Home, of which he was one of the original trustees. A biographer adds: "His was an active, useful, noble life, and his departure leaves a vacancy that can never be filled. The value of the privilege of knowing such a man can only be measured by the grief one feels when he has gone."

His death came as a sad surprise to his legion of friends. The funeral services were conducted at his late residence in Rockaway by his pastor, Rev. Thomas A. Reeves, assisted by the Rev. William M. Pickslay, of St. John's Church, of Dover. The pall-bearers were Vice-Chancellor Pitney, Jonathan W. Roberts, Mahlon Hoagland, Sr., John J. Norris, John B. Byram and Frederick A. Canfield. There was a large attendance of the leading men of the state and members of the bar. The interment was made in the family lot in the Rockaway cemetery.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of Morris Co. held in the court room in Morristown to take formal notice of Mr. Halsey's death, Vice-Chancellor Pitney presided. Addresses were made by the chairman, Senator Vreeland, Judge Cutler, Prosecutor Salmon, and by Messrs. Alfred Mills, James H. Neighbour, John F. Stickle and H. C. Pitney, Jr.

The Washington Association issued the following:

"Headquarters,

"Morristown, N. J., Oct. 21st, 1896.

"Resolved: That in the removal from this life of our late treasurer, trustee and associate, Mr. Edmund D. Halsey, this board and the Washington Association of New Jersey at large, have sustained a very great loss.

"Mr. Halsey, in the noblest and best sense of the term, was an 'all around man'—a man of affairs, wise, sagacious, honorable and faithful in all trusts, public and private; a devoted student of history, taking a deep interest in the past, especially of that relating to his own country.

"His life and character were so transparent to all who knew him that no eulogy of his genial qualities and sterling worth is required at our hands.

"Resolved: That this feeble tribute to the memory of our dear and esteemed friend be recorded upon the minutes and a copy of the same be sent to his family, with the expression of our heartfelt sympathy for them in their great sorrow and loss.

"By order of the Board of Trustees,

"HENRY C. PITNEY, JR., Sec'y."

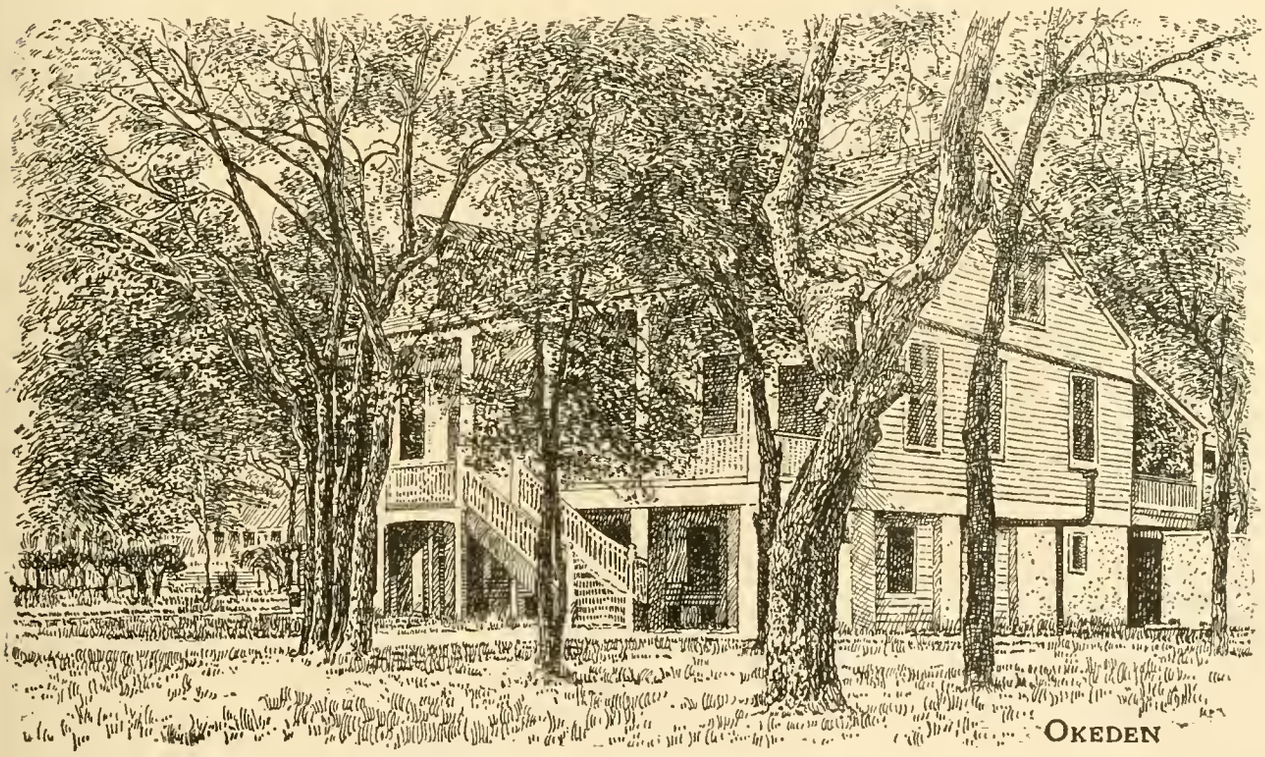
2049. JUDGE ROBERT NASH OGDEN (Robert[882], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Hillsboro, N. C., June 6, 1804; d. "Okeden," on Bay St. Louis, Miss., Sept. 19, 1859; m. 1835, FRANCES SOPHIA NICHOLSON, b. July, 1816; d. New Orleans, La., Sept. 23, 1893.

Judge Robert Nash Ogden[2049] was about 17 years of age when his father, Judge Robert Ogden[882] (a native of Elizabethtown, N. J.), removed his law practice from South Carolina to Louisiana. Robert Nash Ogden[2049] was graduated from Chapel Hill, N. C., and became one of the most brilliant lawyers of the Southern bar. He was joined by his younger brother, Judge Abner Nash Ogden[2052], in a law partnership at Baton Rouge, La., where the law firm became eminent and successful.

Judge Robert Nash Ogden lived in the palmiest days of Southern chivalry, and was in every sense of the word a preux chevalier, "fighting at the drop of a hat, and if need be, dropping the hat himself if the subject seemed to his sense of honor to need correction." He was withal a man of very fine sensibilities, noble-hearted and generous in his sympathies. At one time he was sitting on the hurricane deck of a Mississippi steamer engaged in conversation with a number of Southern gentlemen, when a cry of "child overboard" was heard. The Judge rushed to the steamer's rail to learn that the uproar was occasioned by a colored child having fallen into the river, while the agonized cry of distress had come from the frenzied negro mother. Seeing no effort being made toward the rescue of the child, he shouted to lower a boat, and throwing off his coat, plunged head-foremost from the great height into the Mississippi. On regaining the surface, he saw the child floating some distance astern, and swimming to its relief, supported the child until a boat reached them and rescued both. This brave act was characteristic of the man. To see a duty was to do it, while the chances of life or death were never considered.

He was Judge of the District Court several times, and was elected to the Louisiana State Legislature, where he ranked with the best forensic orators of the state.



Okeden

He died in the prime of life at his beautiful home "Okeden," on the Bay St. Louis, Miss., "giving up his life with Christian fortitude and with wise admonitions to his children and nephews, who with the friends of the family had gathered to wait for the dread (to them) event. Many tributes from eloquent pens followed his decease, and he was always thought of and commented upon in panegyric as the 'Elder Hamlet.'"

When his wife, FRANCES S. (Nicholson) OGDEN, died, one of the New Orleans newspapers had a "special" stating: "MRS. ROBERT N. OGDEN, a member of one of the most distinguished families in the State, died to-day."

DR. FREDERICK NASH OGDEN[2051] was graduated at Chapel Hill, N. C. He chose the medical profession, and after graduation began his practice at Baton Rouge, La., where he soon won distinction as a skillful physician. Like his older brother, Judge Robert Nash Ogden[2049], he was ever ready to take the field of honor, and was either principal or referee in many duels.

His wife, CARMELITE (Lopez) OGDEN, was a Spanish lady, and eloped with him from a convent where she was being educated.

He died in his 32d year, at the very threshold of a most promising career. He was a man of honor, of refined manners, and very popular. He always maintained the right as he saw it, and the obituaries written after his death were all tender and beautiful remembrances of his life. He was a worthy son of worthy sires.

CHILDREN (Chart 6):

3382. GENERAL FREDERICK NASH OGDEN, JR., b. Jan. 25, 1837; d. May 25, 1886.

He was a Colonel in the Confederate service, and was distinguished for military capacity and headlong daring. He commanded Scott's Cavalry, and probably would have risen to high rank if the war had lasted a little longer. At the time of the New Orleans riots in 1874 he was appointed Major General of the State Militia, and displayed uncommon genius in soon bringing order out of chaos. The Spanish blood inherited from his mother showed itself in his dignified and punctilious manners. He was highly honorable in all his relations in life, and his presence and power were widely felt and recognized. His great popularity came near giving him the nomination for Governor of Louisiana.

JUDGE ABNER NASH OGDEN

2052. JUDGE ABNER NASH OGDEN (Robert[882], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Hillsboro, N. C., Sept. 19, 1809; d. Bladen Springs, Ala., 1875; 1st m. MARY ISABELLA SMITH; 2d m. JULIA SCOTT.

JUDGE ABNER NASH OGDEN[2052] very early in life gave evidence of pronounced mental strength and unusual talent. He made such rapid progress in his education, that at the age of 14, he became tutor in the family of Judge Alfred Hennon of the Southern bar, at the same time studying law in the offices of the Judge. He was admitted to practice at the age of 17, and did so in partnership with his brother Judge Robert Nash Ogden[2049] at Baton Rouge, La. His remarkable genius soon led him to a brilliant career at the bar, and when only 32 years of age he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, successfully defeating a prominent Democratic candidate. Nothing could have better evinced the confidence and esteem in which he was held by the people of the state. He was called "The Model Lawyer of the Louisiana Bar."

In politics he was an old line Whig, and used his utmost influence to keep Louisiana in the Union, but after the ordinance of secession was passed, he joined with his people and threw his heart and soul into the movement for a new confederacy, giving four sons to fight for the cause.

His later years were saddened by the loss of his eyesight, and the general breaking down of his overtaxed though robust constitution. Yet he lived to see his children's children and "in a high sense of the scriptural phrase 'Peace upon Israel.' He died at Bladen Springs, Ala., in 1875, with that profession upon his lips which confesses eternal life."

His first wife, MARY ISABELLA (Smith) OGDEN, and mother of his first two children, was a descendant of Rev. Jedediah Smith, the first Presbyterian minister ever in Natchez, Miss. He had been pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Granville, Mass., for 18 years, when he determined upon a mission to the Mississippi valley. He set out with his wife and eleven children in Apr., 1776, and in the following September reached Natchez, only to die ten days after his arrival. The family had suffered great hardships on their journey, and greater sufferings upon reaching their destination, but it was a school from which they developed great strength of character, and their descendants are now among the most numerous, wealthy and respected families of the states of Louisiana and Mississippi.

2056. JUDGE OCTAVIUS NASH OGDEN (Robert[882], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. Sept. 26, 1817; d. Genoa, Italy; m. LETHE SPRIGG, of a wealthy North Louisiana family.

As his name would indicate, JUDGE OCTAVIUS N. OGDEN[2056] was the eighth child of his father Judge Robert Ogden[882], and with his two brothers, he inherited his father's legal talents. He was an orator from boyhood. After his legal training and admission to the bar, he rapidly attained distinction by his forensic talents, logical acumen and wonderful powers of appeal. He was Judge of the District Court of Alexandria, La., during a period of 8 or 10 years. He delivered the address at the laying of the corner-stone of the Alexandria Military Academy, of which Gen'l Sherman became President. Another of his noted speeches was made before the University of Virginia, extracts from which are to be found in current books of to-day. In the argument of a case which had been suddenly interrupted by the death of his brother Judge Robert N. Ogden[2049], the Bench publicly admitted the effort to be the most subtle and complete legal address that had ever come within their experience.

JUDGE OGDEN's fame brought him fortune, and later in life he visited England, Ireland, Scotland, and other European countries. He died at the house of Consul Patterson at Genoa, Italy, and his remains were buried there. Of several children only one survived.

J., Oct. 27, 1890, in 70th year; dau. of James Townsend, of New York City.

GOV. DANIEL HAINES[2057] was graduated at Princeton in 1820, studied law and was made Attorney in 1823, Counsellor in 1826, and Sergeant-at-law in 1827, being one of the latest to receive that distinction.

In 1843 he was chosen Governor of New Jersey. He was a staunch friend of education, and was instrumental in establishing the State Normal School. He assisted in framing the present Constitution of New Jersey. In 1847 he was again elected Governor. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was found in thorough sympathy with the Union, and gave two sons and one son-in-law to serve in the Northern army, one of the former being killed in battle. He was himself very active in securing victory to the Federal arms, and afterward as much so in healing the wounds it had caused.

In 1852 he was elevated to the Bench of the Supreme Court and served two terms of seven years each. In both private and public life he was a consistent, conscientious and noble Christian gentleman. A writer said of him at his death: "What a beautiful exemplification of the Christian gentleman he was." While he was Governor, a physician of Trenton remarked: "I have seen a strange sight to-day—the Governor of this State go into the room of a man, a stranger, and kneeling at his bedside, pray for his salvation." He was to conduct a religious meeting in a private house on the evening of the day he died, but before the appointed hour arrived, God's messenger suddenly called him. His noble, heroic, self-sacrificing life was an honor to his family, the state and the nation.

His children were all born at Hamburg, N. J. He had no issue by the second marriage.

CHILDREN—FIRST MARRIAGE (Chart 30):

3393. MARY HAINES, b. Sept. 18, 1828; d. Nov. 7, 1831.

3394. REV. ALANSON AUSTIN HAINES, b. Mar. 18, 1830; d. Dec. 11, 1891.

He graduated at Princeton in 1858. Was Chaplain of 15th N. J. Vols. and wrote its history; was author also of "Hardyston Memorial."

2058. Sarah P. Haines (Mary Ogden[883], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. New York City, Aug. 3, 1802; d. Jan. 29, 1877; m. Sept. 11, 1821, Thomas C. Doremus, of New York City, b. ——; d. Feb. 16, 1879.

"The Salisbury Memorial" has the following biographical mention: "There are now living, and thus have been in the past, many of the female descendants of 'Good Old John Ogden' who have inherited in a marked degree his sturdy virtue. Conspicuous among these was Sarah Platt Haines, who in Thomas C. Doremus found a worthy husband. To those who knew Mrs. Doremus only in later life it seemed incredible that a fragile woman, suffering from delicate health, * * could not only conceive, but personally execute, works of charity of a magnitude to tax the powers of a strong man. * * She was one of the founders and President of the Mission at Grande Ligne, in Canada; one of the founders and Vice-President of the Nursery and Child's Hospital, one of the most benevolent and useful institutions in the city of New York; one of the founders and President of the Board of Lady Supervisors of the New York State Woman's Hospital; President of the Woman's Missionary Society, first Directress of the Woman's Prison Association and Home for Discharged Convicts; a manager of the New York House and School of Industry. In these and other fields she spent a life made beautiful by charity."

In the South Reformed Church, Fifth Ave., New York, is a tablet to her memory, which reads: "In / memory of / Sarah Platt, wife of Thomas C. Doremus / who peacefully fell asleep in Jesus / January 29th 1877 / Aged 74. She united with this church Sept. 11, 1823. 'Well reported of for good works; she hath brought up children, she hath lodged strangers, she hath washed the saints' feet, she hath relieved the afflicted, she hath diligently followed every good work.' 1 Tim. 5:10."

2059. Sydney Phoenix Haines (Mary Ogden[883], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. New York City, Sept. 1, 1804; d. Hannibal, Mo., July 14, 1847; m. Mar. 9, 1830, Diadamia Austin, dau. of Alanson Austin, of Warwick, N. Y.

His father, Elias Haines, a prosperous merchant of New York City, was member of a land company that obtained the Aredondo Grant from the Spanish Gov't, and began the first American settlement in the Territory of Florida. When quite a young man, Sydney P. Haines[2059] was sent to Florida to care for his father's interests. The Seminole War breaking out, the settlers were obliged to flee for their lives. When the United States Gov't assumed possession it refused to recognize the rights of the settlers, and young Haines returned north and engaged in various business enterprises in Hamburg, N. J. While here he was converted to a religious life. A four-horse team he had formerly used in taking loads of men to political meetings and places of amusement, he then utilized in gathering up and transporting people to religious meetings. He was benevolent and became interested in every good work, in which he was nobly seconded by his estimable wife. He removed to Missouri, finally settling at Hannibal, where he engaged in business. While on a business tour he was stricken with inflammation of the lungs, from which he died.

He removed to Port Jervis, where he built the Fowler House Hotel. At outbreak of Civil War he assisted in raising men for 1st N. J. Cav., in which his two brothers were commissioned. In the summer of 1862 he zealously engaged in organizing the 15th Reg't N. J. Vols., of which he was commissioned Colonel July 10, 1862. The regiment was mustered in at Flemington Aug. 25, 1862, and proceeded to war Aug. 29. On Mar. 6, 1863, he resigned because of ill health and returned to Sussex Co., where in 1864, he was elected to the House of Assembly. To reach Trenton he exposed himself to a severe storm, was taken with pneumonia, but insisted upon being carried to the State House to take part in the organization of the Assembly, the parties being nearly tied. This exposure caused an illness which terminated fatally Jan. 14, 1865. He was buried at North Hardystone, N. J.

His wife, Henrietta Laura (Broadhead) Fowler, was celebrated for her beauty of person and amiability of character, and is the heroine of E. C. Stedman's poem, "The Door Step."

JUDGE HENRY D. OGDEN[2090] was probably born in New Orleans, where his father resided. He was a prominent lawyer, jurist, soldier and political leader, and died at the age of 77 years.

He was natively endowed with an extraordinary mind and unusual mental capacity, that characterized him from boyhood. He graduated from Princeton College at 20 years of age, and at once began the study of law under Chief Justice Eustis of the Supreme Court of La. Was admitted to the bar in two years, and in less than three years—in 1845—was elected to the Legislature, where he served with distinction. He then devoted himself to the practice of law, and in 1859 was elected Judge of the Fifth Judicial Dis't Court, which position he held until the evacuation of New Orleans during the Civil War. JUDGE OGDEN was member of the Washington Artillery, but did not go out with that command, being appointed Lieut. Col. on Gov. Moore's staff, and later left the city on Gen. Lovell's staff as Provost General, having in charge Camp Moore, above the city. While here Gen. Lovell sent him with a flag of truce to Gen. Butler at the time of the execution of Mumford, who pulled down the U. S. flag from the Custom House. Gen. Beauregard was at that time at Corinth, Miss., and telegraphed for GEN. OGDEN to go up there and perform the same duties as at Camp Moore; but Gov. Moore would not permit him to leave the state.

GEN. OGDEN was later transferred to the trans-Mississippi department on Gen. Taylor's staff, until he was required to retire from active service. He with many of the camp were said to have been poisoned, some fatally, by a Yankee cook who had been taken prisoner. After partial recovery, he was assigned as Provost General on the staff of Gen. Simon Buckner, who had succeeded Gen. Taylor. GEN. OGDEN was a model soldier, fearless in action, and was much endeared to the men under him.

After the war, GEN. OGDEN returned to New Orleans and resumed the practice of law. He was soon chosen City Attorney, but the city being under military rule, and not having answered a test question satisfactorily that had been propounded by Gen. Sheridan, the latter removed JUDGE OGDEN from his position. The JUDGE then actively entered political life and was a leader in the movement to overthrow the "carpet-bag" regime. He was chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee which eventually secured Democratic control.

JUDGE OGDEN was one of the seven founders of the Daily Democrat which later became the Times-Democrat. He was always regarded as a fearless man, a true friend, and a conscientious gentleman. An attack of paralysis from which he suffered eight years ended fatally. The funeral services were held at the Jesuits' Church, New Orleans, and he was interred in St. Louis Cemetery No. 3.

His wife, MATILDE (Waggaman) OGDEN, was a sister of Col. Eugene Waggaman and a lady of exceptional culture and intellectual attainments.

CORDELIA A. (Ogden) CLARK[2295] was graduated from Moravian Seminary, Bethlehem, Pa., at an early age. She was for years actively engaged in the prominent charities of her native city, holding office in several of the societies. "MRS. CLARK's intelligence, unassuming manner, the sweet gentleness of her disposition, her cheerfulness and patience under great affliction, her unselfishness and her open-hearted hospitality endeared her not alone to her immediate family, but to a large circle of friends."

JAMES HENRY CLARK, A.M., M.D., was born in Livingston, Essex Co., N. J. His father, Rev. Daniel A. Clark, was born in Rahway, N.J., in 1779, and was son of David and Elizabeth (Moore) Clark. The family was prominent in Colonial and Revolutionary history, being descended from Richard Clarke of the Mayflower compact. One of its members, Abraham Clark, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The Rev. Daniel Abraham Clark graduated at Princeton University in 1808, and afterward at Andover Theological Seminary. He was ordained a clergyman of the Congregational Church in 1810. While stationed in Amherst, Mass., he became one of the founders of Amherst College. He spent the last seven years of his life in New York City, dying there in 1840. He married in 1812, Eliza, daughter of Dr. Jeremiah and Abigail (Gorham) Barker, who bore him six children, one of whom was Dr. James Henry Clark, husband of Cordelia Almira Ogden[2295].

Dr. James Henry Clark attended the high schools of Amherst, Mass., and Bennington, Vt., and later passed two years of study in European universities. He then returned to this country and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, graduating in 1841 with the degree of M.D. In 1859, Amherst College conferred the degree of A.M. He was engaged in active practice in Newark, N.J., to the time of his death, being a specialist in diseases of the eye and ear. In 1856 he founded, and for many years conducted the first eye and ear clinic in New Jersey. Dr. Clark was the author of several valuable books, among them being a biography of his father, the Rev. Daniel Abraham Clark, "Sight and Hearing," "Medical Topography of Newark, N. J.," "Medical Men of Essex Co., N. J.—1666–1866," and withal was a frequent contributor to the periodical and daily press. He was a man of exceptional ability and acquirements and of sterling character, was interested in all important public affairs, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

3745. John Ogden Clark, Esq., b. Newark, N. J., Oct. 14, 1849; d. Montclair, N. J., May 31, 1890.

He was educated at Williston Seminary, East Hampton, Mass. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1875. He was later appointed Counsellor at Law and Master in Chancery. He studied and practised his profession in the offices of the late David A. Hayes, Esq., and the Hon. Frederick Adams. In 1882 impaired health required him to relinquish the active work of his profession and to retire to his residence in Montclair, where he spent the last seven years of his life in much pain. His mind remained remarkably clear, permitting him to gratify his marked literary tastes, and to transact much business in his invalid chair as Justice of the Peace. He published the first newspaper in Montclair, known as the Montclair Herald. Although not permitted to fully gratify his ambition in his chosen profession, his kind, sympathetic and generous disposition prompted loving and faithful attention from those who surrounded him in his declining strength.

Hon. D. Ogden Bradley's[2460] ancestors were among the earliest settlers of New England, and resided in New Haven. His grandfather, Hon. Jabez Bradley, was Judge of Cayuga Co., N. Y., for many years. His father, Henry Bradley, was also prominent in public affairs and in 1846 was nominated for Governor by the Liberal Party.

Hon. D. Ogden Bradley was graduated from Hamilton College in 1848, receiving the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. He studied law, and was admitted as an attorney-at-law in 1850. He early identified himself with the Republican Party, and acted as guard at Lincoln's first inauguration as President.

In 1865 he purchased the fine residence in Dobbs Ferry, since occupied by his family. He was frequently elected President of the village, and for several years was an active member of its Board of Education. In 1868, he was delegate to the Republican National Convention; in 1872, was candidate for Congress; in 1876, was Presidential Elector; in 1879 was elected Member of Assembly, and re-elected in 1880. He was also active in local and county affairs. Mr. Bradley's patriotism and energy largely brought about the erection of the André Monument at Tarrytown, and the base of the Peace Monument erected at Dobbs Ferry to commemorate the spot where Washington concluded arrangements for the evacuation of American soil by the British. He was President of the Tarrytown National Bank, and contributed most largely to its success; as President of the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery Corporation, he greatly enlarged and beautified its grounds.

Early thrown upon his own resources by his practical father, his only capital was "a character combining clear judgment, unbending integrity, ceaseless industry, wise economy and methodical habits. These qualities commended him to men of wealth and large business enterprises, and so prepared the way for the success that marked his career." He held many important trusts, and was chiefly active in Chicago, Brooklyn, New York City, and Westchester Co., N. Y. He was one of the original stockholders of the Yonkers Publishing Co., and was Trustee and adviser from the beginning. He was a forceful speaker and an able writer.

Mr. Bradley's first wife, Elizabeth (Neeley) Bradley, was the only sister of Bishop Neeley, of Maine. His second wife, Cornelia (Fitch) Bradley, was the dau. of Abijah Fitch, of Auburn, N. Y., and a gifted and devoted wife and mother. She was interred in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, and her husband, who died suddenly from heart trouble, is buried beside her.

Charles Milton Ogden[2527] was at 22 yrs. of age a reporter in New York City. It seems he removed to Washington State, from the following clipping taken from a Tacoma paper: "Readers of the Post-Intelligencer, throughout the Seattle land district, comprising the greater part of the Puget Sound country, will learn with regret that the popular and efficient Receiver of Public Moneys for the District, Hon. Charles M. Ogden, will leave Seattle to-day with his family for New York and retire from the responsible office which he has so acceptably filled since July, 1890. On account of ill health, Mr. Ogden recently tendered his resignation to the President, and it was accepted with regret and reluctance."

His appointment to the Seattle District was made by President Harrison in 1889. Finding the climate did not agree with him, he returned east and renewed his newspaper work, representing the Philadelphia Press, the Boston Globe, the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, the California Associated Press, and the New York World and New York Sun.

Granville, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1840; d. Florence, Italy, Apr. 10, 1891; son of John Emerson Strong and Abigail Percival, his wife.

Gen. William Emerson Strong was born at Granville, N. Y. While a small boy, his parents removed to Wisconsin, where he passed his youth and early manhood. He had just been admitted to the bar of his adopted state when Fort Sumter was fired upon; it so stirred his patriotism he responded to the first call for troops in 1861, and immediately raised a company for the 2d Wis. Inf. in Apr., 1861. He began his military career in the Army of the Potomac, taking an honorable part with his regiment in the first battles of the war, at Blackburn's Ford and Bull Run. A few months later he was promoted Major of the 12th Wis. Inf. and was from that time associated with the Army of the Tennessee to the close of the war, being in active service till peace was declared.

For bravery in battle, Gen. Strong was early assigned to duty on the staff of the gallant and lamented McPherson by whom he was held in the highest esteem, and it was he who received the last order Gen. McPherson ever gave, a moment before he was killed in the battle of Atlanta, July 22, 1864. After Gen. McPherson's death, Gen. Strong remained on duty as Chief of Staff for Gen. O. O. Howard until the end of the war. He served with marked distinction in every battle and campaign of the Army of the Tennessee. Upon the surrender of Vicksburg, July 4, 1863, Gen. Strong was accorded the honor of raising the Stars and Stripes over the captured ramparts. He was brevetted Brigadier General Mar., 1865, for gallant and meritorious service.

After the war, GEN. STRONG removed to Chicago to engage in business, where he continued to reside until his death. He always took an active interest in public affairs, but never held official position. He resided in Chicago over twenty years, and in all his business transactions was the soul of integrity and honor, no other citizen being held in higher esteem. He was the close personal friend of Gen. Sheridan, his companion in many mountain excursions, and on the Western frontier. An interesting description of a trip to the Yellowstone in 1875 with the Secretary of War was published by him for private distribution. Refined and cultured, GEN. STRONG accumulated many original orders, letters and other papers relating to the Civil War, of great historical value and interest.

GEN. STRONG was one of the earliest members of the Loyal Legion, and served one term as Commander of the order, saying he esteemed it higher than any office in the gift of the people. He was a man of strong personality, enthusiastic and of striking appearance, having a "frank, manly and generous disposition; brave, gallant and chivalric; he illustrated in his own career, the highest and best type of the American soldier. He was our Chevalier Bayard, 'without fear and without reproach.' "

ALEXANDER CALDWELL MCCLURG, b. Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 9, 1832; d. St. Augustine, Fla., Apr. 15, 1901; son of Alexander and Sarah Trevor McClurg.

GEN. ALEXANDER CALDWELL MCCLURG was born in Philadelphia, but his parents soon after removed to Pittsburg, where his boyhood was spent and his education begun. He subsequently graduated at Miami University, Oxford, O., and then began the study of law in Pittsburg, in the office of Walter H. Lowry, then Chief Justice of Pennsylvania. Failing health caused him to relinquish the legal profession, and he went to Chicago in 1859, where he entered the book store of S. C. Griggs & Co.

When the Civil War broke out, he offered his services to the Government, but the regiments were complete. However, he recruited the Crosby Guard in the summer of 1862, and was elected Captain, the company becoming a part of the 88th Reg't, Ill. Infantry. The regiment left Chicago Sept. 4, 1862, to join the army of Gen. Buell, then defending Cincinnati and Louisville against the advancing armies of Bragg and Kirby Smith. After Bragg's retreat, CAPT. MCCLURG was detailed judge advocate of a general court-martial, presided over by Gen. Woodruff, of Kentucky. His eminent ability caused Gen. McCook to detail him as acting assistant Adjutant General of the corps staff. After the battle of Chickamauga he was assigned to duty as Adjutant General of a division under Gen. Baird. Gen. Sheridan offered him a position on his staff, but CAPT. MCCLURG felt it his duty to remain with Gen. Baird, and he served with distinction through the siege of Chattanooga and the various battles around that city. When Gen. Sherman was preparing for his Atlanta campaign, CAPT. MCCLURG was assigned to duty as Adjutant General of the 14th Army Corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. John M. Palmer, and was known as one of the most capable officers of the Western army. He participated in nearly every battle and skirmish until the fall of Atlanta. A month prior to that event CAPT. MCCLURG was promoted to the rank of Lieut. Col. for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Jonesboro, and soon after was made chief of staff. He constantly added to his laurels and was promoted to the brevet rank of Colonel and then of Brigadier General.

At the close of the war, Generals Sherman, Thomas, Davis and others urged him to apply for position in the regular army, but GEN. MCCLURG preferred to return to civil life. He re-entered the firm of S. C. Griggs & Co., which in 1872 became Jansen, McClurg & Co., and in 1886, A. C. McClurg & Co. GEN. MCCLURG was an able writer, and used his pen against the making of cheap books, and for the establishment of the International Copyright law. He also furnished articles on military and literary subjects to the best magazines.

The strong executive mind of GEN. MCCLURG steadied the business of the firm during the reconstructive period following the war, but a severer test was to follow in three disastrous fires. In 1868, 1871, and 1899, GEN. MCCLURG's business was burned out; but his energy and genius for organization soon reconstructed the business, and placed it again on the road to success.

GEN. MCCLURG was not only active in military and business life, but was very public-spirited, doing much to benefit the city of his adoption. At a special meeting of the American Publishers' Association two days after his death, a warm tribute of respect was drafted in memory of GEN. MCCLURG, who was First Vice-President of the organization, and a number of the leading publishers of the country attended his funeral.

Judge Robert Nash Ogden, Jr.[3372] was a student at Chapel Hill, N. C., subsequently graduated from Princeton University, and read law at Hillsboro, N. C., under his grand-uncle Chief Justice Frederick Nash of North Carolina. He served in the Confederate Army during the Civil War with great distinction, and had two horses killed from under him while in action. At the close of the war, he returned to Louisiana and was elected to the State Legislature from La Fourche Parish when but 21 years of age, serving from 1863 to 1865. He later was district attorney of La Fourche, Terrebonne and St. Mary Parishes. After his removal to New Orleans he was elected to the State Senate and won great reputation as an orator. At the close of his term, he was elected to the Legislature and was made Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Capitol building at Baton Rouge had been practically destroyed by the Federal troops, and the repairs were completed while Judge Ogden was Speaker of the House; for prominent services rendered, his name was inscribed on the corner-stone.

Judge Robert Nash Ogden[3372] was always prominent in politics and was much sought after as an orator. He was unanimously elected by the Legislature as Judge of the Court of Appeals, and served eight years, retiring in 1900. Among his notable speeches was his address of welcome to Gen. U. S. Grant upon his return from his European tour in 1881 and his welcome to the representatives of Gen. Lafayette.

James N. Ogden[3374] served with distinction in the Confederate Army during the Civil War. He was connected with Co. F., Wirt Adams' Reg't, Cavalry, and left it at the close of the war with impaired health and fortune. He was highly esteemed by Gen. Wirt Adams as a scout, although a boy in age and looks. Gen. Adams is said to have remarked that "on a report of Sergeant Ogden, he would not hesitate to form line of battle." He died of apoplexy at Vicksburg, Miss. His widow is now living on a plantation called "Retirement," the home being known as "Okeden," from one of the original spellings of the surname, Ogden. (See illustration of "Okeden" under No. 2049, Judge Robert Nash Ogden, p. 361.)

Rev. Abner Nash Ogden, Jr.[3384] was graduated from Princeton University, and later studied and practised law with his uncle, Octavius Nash Ogden, Esq., in Alexandria, La. During the Civil War he joined the Confederate army and ranked as First Lieut. He was mentioned in general orders for conspicuous bravery at the siege and passage of Forts Jackson and St. Philips, in the spring of 1862.

After the war, he entered the ministry of the Prot. Epis. Church in Louisiana, and struggled to build a church at Alexandria, La. In the mean time Senator Don Cameron, of Pennsylvania, who had been his personal friend and class-mate in Princeton, looked him up, and, finding the straitened circumstances under which he was laboring, gladly built and endowed the church, and also built a well-appointed rectory for his home. His health failed, and he dropped dead in a drug-store in Alexandria.

3386. Hon. Horatio Nash Ogden (Abner N.[2052], Robert[882], Robert[310], Robert[83], Robert[16], Jonathan[4], John[1]), b. 1840; d. June, 1883; m. Martine Kennedy.

He was graduated from Oakland College, Miss., and then matriculated at the Louisiana State University, from the law department of which, he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Soon after entering upon the practice of law, the Civil War began, and he at once volunteered and became adjutant in heavy artillery, under his cousin No. 3382, Gen. Fred. N. Ogden, at Vicksburg, where he served with gallantry and honor.

A New Orleans paper further says of him: "At the close of the war he returned to New Orleans and once more commenced the practice of the law, and soon won a high position among the best advocates. During the troublous times when the Radicals were in power here, he was a strong partisan for the people's rights, and in their vindication visited Washington to secure immunity from Federal interference. In 1876, with Gen. F. T. Nicholls, who was chosen as Governor, Horatio N. Ogden was elected to the responsible position of Attorney General, which office he filled during his term with honor to the State and credit to himself. When his term had expired he again took his place at the bar, and up to the hour of his untimely death was esteemed as a safe and judicious adviser and a man of the strictest probity."

"He was a trusted, beloved and honored Elder of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church of New Orleans." While actively engaged in business and philanthropic matters, and before he had reached the prime of life, he was suddenly stricken one afternoon while on a street car with congestion of the brain and died in a few hours.

The above news article adds: "The late Attorney General of our State requires no elaborate eulogy. A life marked with a strict observance of every moral injunction, a thorough and unselfish devotion to duty, a modest and brave front in danger, and the same singleness of purpose at the fireside as on the field of battle, needs no rhetoric to embalm it. Such was that of Horatio N. Ogden, the lamented and beloved deceased."

Capt. William F. Ogden[3387] was graduated from Oakland College, Claiborne Co., Miss., in which institution he was first honor man, and stood "100" in all his studies. He was noted for his oratorical powers. During the Civil War he joined the first company of "Crescent Rifles," 7th Reg't, La. Vols., and became successively Sergeant, Lieutenant, and Captain. He carried the colors off the field at Sharpsburg after seven color-bearers had been shot from under them; was a favorite and distinguished officer in 33 lines of battle. He was captured with his whole company on the Rapidan, and was kept in prison until the close of the war.

Hon. HORATIO NASH OGDEN

Dec. 11, 1866, Sarah Thomas Hall, b. Jan. 19, 1846; d. June 12, 1905; dau. of Thomas Hall and Nancy M. Foster, his wife, of Adams Co., Miss.

Lieut. Edmund S. Ogden[3389] was attending school at the breaking out of the Civil War, and although but 15 years of age, he enlisted in the Confederate army and assisted in raising a company of the 8th Battalion, Heavy Artillery, La. Troops, with which he served through the siege of Vicksburg. He was then transferred to the army in Virginia, serving under Col. J. B. Walton in the Washington Artillery at Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Williamsport, and Newbern. In the Gettysburg fight, the section of battery to which he was attached was put out of action, after which its men assisted in carrying the wounded from the field. While thus engaged, Mr. Ogden's comrade recognized a signal of distress given by a Yankee captain who had fallen on a part of the field under particularly heavy fire. They at once went to his relief and carried him to where the Confederate surgeons were operating, and where he was given needed attention. It was a case of heroic daring, but all Mr. Ogden remembers of the incident is that the wounded officer was of a N. Y. or N. J. Reg't, and that he was deeply grateful for the service rendered a fallen foe.

After the battle of Gettysburg, Mr. Ogden was promoted to 2d Lieut. in the 1st La. Heavy Artillery, with which he remained until the close of the war, having served from the age of 15 to 19, passing unscathed through many of the most desperately fought battles. He now resides at Cannonsburg, Miss., and has kindly furnished much genealogical material concerning his branch of the family.

J. Ogden Armour[4429] was graduated from Yale in 1889, after which he took a short European tour. He then returned to Chicago, where, in the course of time, he and his younger brother were taken into partnership with their father, P. D. Armour, the founder of the great meat packing firm of Armour & Company. After the death of his father, J. Ogden Armour succeeded to the presidency of the concern, and under his management its enterprises and business interests have been extensively increased, and its commercial relations extended around the world.

The corporation has extensive packing houses at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, East St. Louis, Sioux City and Fort Worth, Tex. In connection with them, the corporation conducts glue works, soap works, fertilizer works, car lines, and a number of auxiliary enterprises, all under the name of "Armour." Beside the immense fresh meat trade, Armour & Co. deal extensively in salted, canned, potted and minced meats, soups, extract of beef, laboratory products, and by-products, such as hides, wool, neatsfoot oil, curled hair, gelatine, sand-paper, ammonia, and isinglass. Refrigeration of meats in abattoir, cars and ship compartments has been their special study.

Mr. Armour also exercises control in the Armour Grain Co., the Armour Elevator Co. and the Milwaukee Elevator Co. These associated companies rank among the largest dealers in cereals on the globe, and chiefly in the grain trade between the United States and European countries. He is also extensively interested in banks and other financial institutions, railroads, street railways, stock yards, electric light companies, and other important enterprises.

His home life is quiet and unostentatious, and his magnificent house on Michigan Ave., Chicago, has only rarely been the scene of large social gatherings.

PHILIP DANFORTH ARMOUR, JR.[4431], was educated at Phillips Andover Academy, and at eighteen years of age entered Yale University and studied in the Sheffield Scientific School. After one year of work he decided to leave school and enter the house of Armour & Company, where it had always been his father's desire to see him installed. He first spent a year abroad visiting all the countries of Europe, and then returned directly to Chicago to assume the duties of his business career. He began at the bottom, going to the stock yards every day and mastering the details of the business in each successive department. At the age of twenty-five he was made a partner in the house of Armour & Co.

He was a member of many clubs, but was so domestic in his thoughts and habits, he rarely was seen within their rooms or grounds. His single out-of-door sport was driving, and his stables contained many of the finest blooded driving horses in the country. He was possessed of fine business ability, and had he lived, would have made a name for himself as merchant and financier.

Mayor CARTER HENRY HARRISON, Jr. No. 4488, EDITH (OGDEN) HARRISON
No. 4742, CARTER HENRY HARRISON, 3d. No. 4743, EDITH OGDEN HARRISON

Mayor Carter Henry Harrison, Jr., came of the Harrison family of Virginia, to which Presidents William H. and Benjamin Harrison belonged. His father of the same name, also a leading politician, was Mayor of Chicago from 1879 to 1886, serving four consecutive terms, and was again elected Apr., 1893, the year of the Columbian Exposition.

His son, Carter H. Harrison, Jr., attended the public schools of Chicago, took a four years' course at St. Ignatius College, and three and a half years of study in Altenburg, Germany. Returning to America, he entered Yale, and graduated in 1883 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

His versatile talents have led him not only as a lawyer, but as real-estate dealer, and editor and manager of one of Chicago's great dailies. His knowledge, experience, foresight and executive ability have brought about his election as Mayor of Chicago for four consecutive terms, being first elected in 1897. During the vast responsibilities that have rested upon him, he has been noted for honesty and courage in administering the severe and exacting duties of his office, preserving a remarkable equanimity of mind under the greatest provocation. Scholarly and eloquent, he has tirelessly prosecuted each of his campaigns, and has exercised that rare common-sense that has given him the mastery of affairs in his fights for the common people. It has been his habit of receiving the general public four days each week, listening with patience and kindness to their pleas and grievances, and assuring them of his purpose to give relief. All of his business is prosecuted with system, deliberation and thoroughness in dealing with the 2,000,000 citizens of Chicago.

His wife, née Edith Ogden[4488], was a daughter of Judge Robert Nash Ogden[3372], of the Louisiana Court of Appeals. "She has all the charm for which Southern women are notable, with grace, beauty and literary talents of a high order." She has written two books of fairy tales for children. The first, "Prince Silverwings," received high praise from the critics and had wonderful success. The second, "Star Fairies," is expected to be as kindly received. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison's first child died in infancy.

The following Index contains all the attainable names of male descendants of John Ogden, the Pilgrim, and the female lines of descent as far as grandchildren of Ogden mothers. The book of Charts accompanying this volume gives the entire known lineage, including female lines.

Females are given in order of the birth name, and, when married, the married name follows in parentheses.
